Svaknir shouts a second challenge, and the Draugr on the middle level stand up one by one. These foes are tougher, but with the help of your spectral ally, you can beat them.

Finally, follow Svaknir up to the upper level, where the dead king's sarcophagus lies. The bard yells out his final challenge, and King Olaf One-Eye cracks open his sarcophagus and attempts to stop you. Fight the King, as he is carrying the key that allows you to exit this chamber—unless you wish to creep around and unlock the door (Master).

TIP Defeating Old King Olaf: It is important to note that Svaknir is invulnerable and cannot be hit by magic or weaponry. This makes him an excellent barraging machine to wade into the fray. If your own defenses are lacking, you can even stand behind him and cast your spells through him. Go ahead; he won't mind.

You don't have to fight the Draugr in the order shown previously. If Svaknir (or your Followers or summoned creatures) can handle the initial wave of Draugr, you can race to the Draugr that are still seated and slay them—ideally before they even finish standing up!

Before you leave, learn the new Word of Power from the Word Wall behind King Olaf's resting place. Then exit via the Iron Door, where Svaknir—his vengeance finally completed—vanishes in a bright light. Use the lever to remove the blocking stone, and exit Dead Men's Respite for good.

Return of the King

Present King Olaf's Verse to Viarmo. His jubilation quickly subsides as he reads the verse and finds some of it missing, and much of it less "poetic" than modern-day Edda. Offer to make up the missing parts of the verses. Viarmo is convinced.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Help Viarmo reconstruct Olaf's Verse

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Viarmo at the Blue Palace

◆ OBJECTIVE: Watch Viarmo perform Olaf's verse

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Viarmo

Viarmo needs some story hooks and ideas that give the poem a more thrilling and weaving narrative than before. You are free to choose what happens in portions of the verses.

(Persuade) You can even choose a more fanciful and outlandish story for the poem. Complete the first Persuade, and a second Persuade option opens up. Choosing both of these increases the patronage paid by the court, and therefore your ultimate reward.

With the poem creatively polished, Viarmo sets off to see the Jarl of Solitude inside the Blue Palace. Follow him when the objective updates. Once inside the palace, ask Viarmo if he's ready. The objective updates again, and he climbs the stairs to gain an audience with Jarl Elisif the Fair.

After a thrilling (and some might say, unbelievable) recount of King Olaf's fable in verse form, Jarl Elisif the Fair recognizes that Solitude would be remiss if they forgo this traditional burning festival. She agrees to speak to General Tullius about the matter, and ensures that the College is well rewarded for such a stirring piece of poetry.

As soon as Viarmo leaves the Jarl's chamber, speak with him. Although you aren't a bard yet, you are set to be inducted during the festival. For now, you are to locate Jorn, who was preparing the effigy of King Olaf, and tell him to finish the preparations: The festival is back on!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Jorn

◆ TARGET: Jorn, in the Bards College

Jorn is usually in the Bards College and is an adept given responsibility for the effigy. Speak with Jorn now, and he asks you to return at 10:00 p.m. or later.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Attend the Burning of King Olaf

Quest Conclusion

Return to Jorn at the allotted time, and watch the festival. You can get some free food and hear some music here. Viarmo lights the effigy of King Olaf, which burns merrily. Then, in front of a crowd of Solitude citizens, Viarmo turns to you and welcomes you into the Bards College with the following rewards:

➤ Leveled gold pieces

➤ Perk: Gift of the Gab

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to any of the bards, who are now "friendly" to your cause. You can and should begin the instrument-collecting quests, detailed next.

PREREQUISITES: Bards College Quest: Tending the Flames

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Solitude, Bards College, Stony Creek Cave

CHARACTERS: Inge Six-Fingers

ENEMIES: Bandit

◆ OBJECTIVES: Find Finn's Lute

A Lute for Some Loot

While staying at the Bards College, seek out Inge Six-Fingers, the slightly crotchety teacher who can play the lute like she has a vestigial finger (she doesn't). Ask her why she's so sad, and she reveals that thieves broke into the college over a year ago and removed numerous valuables. The gold and silver weren't important compared to Finn's Lute. Finn was a bard who invented the eight-course lute that is commonplace today, and the stolen lute is Finn's original instrument. Inge Six-Fingers might even crack a smile if you return with this instrument.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find Finn's Lute

◆ TARGET: Finn's Lute, in Stony Creek Cave

Travel to Eastmarch Hold and locate Stony Creek Cave, or the dwarven mountaintop tower known as Kagrenzel. The former allows a quick scavenge for the lute, while the other involves a spectacular plummet but a full exploration of both locations. The former is described. Find the pond with the moored rowboat and jetty. Step into the nearby cave mouth with the hanging lantern and into Stony Creek Cave.

Wade through the water, and up the ramp by the draped corpse, to the rushing underground stream tunnel. Ascend the slippery and cramped tunnel. You encounter bandits in the passage. Deliver a killing blow to each of them. Now check to the right (south), up a wooden ramp and deck where the bandits appeared from. If the bandit mage hasn't attacked yet, he's usually in the small cave alcove atop the deck. Clear the area of foes, then search the treasure chest. Inside, you'll find the lute.

➤ Finn's Lute

Quest Conclusion

Return Finn's Lute to Inge Six-Fingers back at the Bards College. Although Inge thanks the Sweet Divines (and you) for your help, she tells you she has nothing to pay you for the value of the lute. However, she can teach you a few tricks, and ups all your Stealth skills by a point:

- Light Armor (+1)
- Lockpicking (+1)
- Speech (+1)
- Sneak (+1)
- Pickpocket (+1)

PANTEA'S FLUTE

PREREQUISITES: Bards College Quest: Tending the Flames

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Hob's Fall Cave, Solitude, Bards College

CHARACTERS: Larina, Pantea Ateia

ENEMIES: Necromancer, Skeleton

◆ OBJECTIVES: Find Pantea's Flute

The Dancing Dead

While staying at the Bards College, look out for the College's master vocalist and teacher, Pantea Ateia. She's quite vexed about her student Larina, who stole a flute from her private collection, only to sell it to some necromancer. Pantea just received a ransom note for it. This flute has been handed down through her family for 17 generations. She impatiently orders you to find the flute and return it, posthaste. Furthermore, the flute does not make "the dead dance," despite what her student may have told the necromancer.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find Pantea's Flute

◆ TARGET: Pantea's Flute, in Hob's Fall Cave

Set off into the mountains east of Dawnstar and locate Hob's Fall Cave, on a hidden path among the glaciers. Enter this series of connected snow caves. Battle skeletons along the ice tunnels and fight necromancers as you head down the tunnels to a large wooden rope bridge spanning a chasm. Follow the lanterns and torches until you reach a throne chamber where a more powerful necromancer and his cronies reside. Defeat them all before activating the pull chain by the spears blocking your exit to the east.

Head through a Soul Gem pedestal trap, up a long tunnel to the south, and into the deepest chamber where powerful necromancers and their students work on raising the dead. Defeat them all, then check the treasure chest to the altar table's left. Inside is Pantea's Flute. You may also wish to free Larina, who is being held captive.

➤ Pantea's Flute

Quest Conclusion

Return Pantea's Flute to Pantea Atea back at the Bards College. She is thrilled with the return of her instrument but, alas, has no money to give you. However, she shows you a few tricks she learned playing for the Winterhold wizards. She ups all your Magic skills by a point:

➤ Illusion (+1) ➤ Conjuration (+1) ➤ Destruction (+1) ➤ Restoration (+1) ➤ Alteration (+1) ➤ Enchanting (+1)

RJORN'S DRUM

PREREQUISITES: Bards College Quest: Tending the Flames

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Halldir's Cairn, Solitude, Bards College

CHARACTERS: Giraud Gemane

ENEMIES: Draugr, Ghost, Halldir

◆ OBJECTIVES: Find Rjorn's Drum

Drum of the Dead

While staying at the Bards College, locate the Dean of History, Giraud Gemane, who has some exciting news regarding a lost instrument. It appears adventurers working on behalf of the College have vague information regarding the venerable Rjorn's Drum. No one knows the location of Rjorn's final resting place, and therefore where his drum is, but word is that Rjorn entered a place called Halldir's Cairn and likely died there. Rjorn was the most famous drummer of the Second Age, and Giraud tasks you with finding his drum.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find Rjorn's Drum

◆ TARGET: Rjorn's Drum, in Halldir's Cairn

Journey to Halldir's Cairn, just off the beaten track close to Falkreath. Head inside this strange cavern. An odd blue light pierces through a roof grating, illuminating a pile of stones and a group of scattered corpses, some much older than others. Close by is a pedestal with a key and a journal to take. The journal details a strange malaise that overtook a group of adventurers. The story doesn't end happily. Unlock the door (Adept), using either Lockpick or the key.

➤ Agrius' Journal ➤ Key to Halldir's Crypt

Open the door, head up the spiral stairs to a rocky tunnel and slope up to a wooden door to the west. This is guarded by ghosts. Repel them with your chosen weapons, open the door to the west, and head through a small crypt while the ghosts taunt your mind. Head up the steps to a throne, where a Draugr draped over the seat twitches to life. Prepare for a battle with several ghosts and Draugr at this point. Then take the Spell Tome from the pedestal if you wish before checking behind the throne. Activate the lever there, which opens the adjacent portcullis, allowing you through.

➤ Spell Tome: Raise Zombie

Head up the few steps and into an upper crypt with a seemingly dead end. After you remove the Draugr and ghosts that stalk you, inspect the area. There's a locked Iron Door (Apprentice) that doesn't lead anywhere. However, there are some Nordic petroglyphs to study.

Puzzle Solution: The first room has a lever, which initially just causes darts to fire from the nearby statue. Each of the next three chambers has a Nordic Puzzle Pillar; rotate the pillar so that its glyph matches the glyphs on the stone heads in the wall of that room. Then return to the lever and pull it to open a path forward.

This leads to a tiny grotto, a second passage to another crypt area (with a side passage and a dangerous battering ram trap), and steps up and around to the final resting place of Halldir. His undead form is ready with powerful magic and multiple doppelgangers to fight and thwart you. Watch for his clones and electrical attacks, and prepare for a lengthy battle until he uses up his magic and you can consistently slay him. Then inspect his treasure chest, which contains the instrument you're after. Leave by opening the circular trapdoor, landing on the jutting floorboards and then on the stones and corpses you first spotted when you entered this place.

➤ Rjorn's Drum

Quest Conclusion

Return Rjorn's Drum to Giraud Gemane back at the Bards College. He is excited to see the drum he's been searching for over the last 20 years. Although the College treasury can't pay you, Giraud can show you some tricks he learned from his days with the army. He ups all your Combat (Martial) skills by a point:

➤ Smithing (+1) ➤ Two-Handed (+1)
➤ Heavy Armor (+1) ➤ One-Handed (+1)
➤ Block (+1) ➤ Archery (+1)

OVERVIEW

Optimal Quest Start

Most Temple Quests are available from the moment you begin your adventure, and there are no prerequisites to complete first. Temple Quests aren't inextricably linked to one another; you can start them at your leisure.

NOTE Cross-Referencing: Do you want to see maps and learn more about the traps, non-quest-related items, collectibles, crafting areas, and other important rooms of note in every location during these quests? Then cross-reference the location you travel to with the information on that location contained in this guide's Atlas.

NORDIC WORSHIP IN SKYRIM: A BRIEF OVERVIEW

Much has been written about the history of the Divines and their worship across Tamriel, and space prevents a recap of this information. Be aware, however, of the following important information regarding the deities most important to Nords:

Talos: The Nordic name for the legendary Emperor Tiber Septim, and the most important hero-god of mankind. He is especially revered in Skyrim, where he is also called Ysmir, or "Dragon of the North." He withstood the power of the Greybeards' voices long enough to hear their prophecy. There is a temple to Talos in Windhelm and shrines in many of the other Hold Capitals. Talos worship has been outlawed in Skyrim by the Thalmor, agents of the elven Aldmeri Dominion, who struck an uneasy truce with the Emperor known as the White-Gold Concordat. Talos has small shrines in all the Hold cities of Skyrim, which are removed if Imperials control the city during the Civil War and restored if the Stormcloaks take control. He has been removed from the Temple of the Divines in Solitude (which was known as the Temple of the Nine Divines until 20 years ago). This, too, changes if the Stormcloaks retake Solitude.

Kynareth (or "Kyne" to old-timers in these parts, or "Kiss at the End"): Widow of Shor and favored goddess of warriors. She is often called the Mother of Men, and her daughters taught the first Nords the use of the Thu'um, or Storm Voice. There is a temple to Kynareth in Whiterun.

Mara: Known in Skyrim as a handmaiden of Kyne and Shor's concubine, she has a temple in Riften where marriages are held.

Dibella: Goddess of women, beauty, and art, has a temple in Markarth.

Arkay: His priests are staunch opponents of necromancy and all forms of the undead. It is presumed that Arkay did not exist before the world was created by gods under Shor's supervision (or urging or trickery). Therefore, he is sometimes called the mortals' god. Priests of Arkay tend to the mausoleums of every major city, called Halls of the Dead.

Stendarr, also known as Stuhn to the Nords: Warrior god who fought against the Aldmeri Pantheon as the shield-thane of Shor. He showed men how to take, and the benefits of taking, prisoners of war. He is the patron saint of the Legions.

The Nine Divines

Akatosh: First of the gods to form in the Beginning Place: the ultimate god of the Cyrodilic Empire, embodying endurance, invincibility, and everlasting legitimacy.

Arkay: God of the cycle of birth and death, of burials and funeral rites, and of the seasons.

Dibella: Goddess of beauty, women, and art.

Julianos: Associated with Jhunal, an extinct Nord god of hermetic orders and scholars, and unimportant to most of Skyrim's inhabitants.

Kynareth: Nordic goddess of the storm, widow of Shor, and favored goddess of warriors. Also known as Kyne.

Mara: Goddess of love and fertility, handmaiden of Kyne, and Shor's concubine.

Stendarr: God of ransom and brother of Tsun; venerated by soldiers and veterans of wars.

Talos: Tiber Septim, the Dragonborn. Heir to the Seat of Sundered Kings. Also known as Ysmir.

Zenithar: God of Work and Commerce. Another divine that the Nords have little interest in.

DEAD GODS

Dead gods don't need temples: They have the biggest one of all, a vast hall of drinking and revelry known as Sovngarde.

Shor, god of the underworld, is the Nordic interpretation of Lorkhan, who takes sides with men after the creation of the world. Foreign gods (i.e., elven ones) conspire against him and bring about his defeat, dooming him to the underworld. Nordic myths depict him as a bloodthirsty warrior king who leads the Nords to victory over their elven oppressors time and again. Before his doom, Shor was the chief of the Nordic pantheon.

Tsun is an extinct Nordic god of trials against adversity. He died defending Shor from foreign gods. Tsun is now said to guard the mythical Whalebone Bridge into Sovngarde.

THE SHRINES OF SKYRIM

There are shrines to the Divines throughout Skyrim. Their locations are detailed throughout the Atlas. Praying at a shrine cures any diseases you may have, and you gain a unique bonus (or "buff") that lasts eight hours. You can have only one such bonus active at a time, and praying at a different shrine supersedes any previous bonuses.

THE HEART OF DIBELLA

PREREQUISITES: None

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Miscellaneous Objective: Degaine's Favor

LOCATIONS: Broken Tower Redoubt, Karthwasten, Markarth, Temple of Dibella

CHARACTERS: Degaine, Enmon, Fjotra, Mena, Mother Hamal, Senna

ENEMIES: Forsworn, Forsworn Briarheart

♦ OBJECTIVES: Steal the statue in the Temple of Dibella, Find the future Sybil of Dibella, Rescue Fjotra from the Forsworn, Bring Fjotra to the Temple, Pray at Dibella's Altar

♦ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Steal the statue in the Temple of Dibella

♦ TARGET: Statue of Dibella

TIP This quest can also be started by unlocking the Temple doors and locating Hamal, who is inside the Inner Sanctum.

A Mother, Superior

Visit Markarth and locate the beggar named Degaine (he's usually by the main gate near the market stall); he's happy to insult you after you hand over a gold piece but is more interested in a possible money-making opportunity if you ask him. He explains the womenfolk up in the Temple of Dibella are keeping a treasure from his prying hands. He wants you to steal it and offers to pay you half of what his man in Riften has offered to pay for it. This begins a miscellaneous objective.

Clamber up the stone steps until you reach the Temple entrance. Unlock (Lockpick [Expert]) the Temple doors, and step inside. Inside the altar chamber, a priestess named Senna mentions that her relations are communing with Dibella and should not be disturbed. You may wait or ignore the advice, pass the altar, and open the doors to the Inner Sanctum. Head down the steps and into the main sanctum corridor, where a priestess soon stops you and summons Mother Hamal.

SKYRIM

QUESTS: OTHER FACTIONS: TEMPLE QUESTS

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

She is angry about your unannounced visit, and especially annoyed if you're male, as this is a breach of Temple rules. Stay pleasant with your responses, and ask what the penalty is. You are tasked with locating Dibella's Sybil, a Reachwoman selected as a child to spend her whole life in devotion and communion with the goddess. Your transgression will be forgiven if you can find the next Sybil. Hamal tells you her location was foreseen in a vision. As an added incentive, you will receive the Blessing of Dibella if you're successful.

NOTE You can sneak through this Temple, secure the Statue of Dibella, and then speak to Hamal if you haven't been spotted yet.

This quest and Degaine's Miscellaneous Objective are mutually exclusive—you can't do both. If you accept this quest, the priestesses take the statue back. If you reject it, or take the statue later, they become hostile and you fail the quest. This quest requires a little more work, but offers a far better reward.

CAUTION

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the future Sybil of Dibella

◆ TARGET: Enmon in Karthwasten

A Father, Inferior

The settlement hewn into the rock that Mother Hamal saw in her vision is the mountain hamlet of Karthwasten. Journey there and wait until daylight hours to pester the townsfolk (as they don't appreciate you lockpicking and sneaking into their homes). Speak to either Mena, who is withdrawn and refers you to her husband, or Enmon. His daughter was taken by the Forsworn, and after you inform him that his daughter is the Sybil of Dibella, Enmon tells you where he thinks Fjotra is and offers to accompany you. Bring Enmon along or tell him to stay in Karthwasten.

➤ Follower: Enmon

◆ OBJECTIVE: Rescue Fjotra from the Forsworn

◆ TARGET: Fjotra in Broken Tower Redoubt

NOTE Enmon can come with you but is pretty pathetic when fighting against the Forsworn. He can die without this quest failing. Perhaps it is better for him to stay home...

Forsaking the Forsworn

Trek to the Broken Tower Redoubt and prepare for battle! Enter the stone structure, and fight through the Forsworn milling about inside. Open the wooden doors and avoid a swinging gate trap as you proceed deeper into the dwelling and up the two floors of spiral stairs inside the main tower. Beware of a boulder trap and more enemies as you ascend, and exit onto the upper battlements.

Enter the second tower atop the battlements, and engage the Forsworn Briarheart in the sacrificial chamber. Then inspect the prison door by the goat's head and candles. You can:

Search the gray corpse for the Prison Key, and use it to unlock the door.

Or pick the lock (Lockpick [Expert]). Once you free Fjotra, explain that she has been chosen as the Sybil, and she agrees to accompany you back to Markarth.

➤ Broken Tower Prison Key

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring Fjotra to the Temple

◆ TARGET: Inner Sanctum, Temple of Dibella, in Markarth

The Sybil Entranced

TIP Utilize Fast-Travel to minimize any problems getting Fjotra from the Broken Tower Redoubt to Markarth.

Return to Markarth with young Fjotra. Head up to the Temple of Dibella, enter the inner sanctum, and speak with Mother Hamal, who has made all the arrangements for Fjotra to begin her life of communing with the goddess. As a gesture of thanks, she requests you pray at Dibella's Altar, back in the entrance chamber where you met Senna.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Pray at Dibella's Altar

◆ TARGET: Temple of Dibella, in Markarth

Quest Conclusion

Once Fjotra is delivered to Mother Hamal, and you pray at the altar, you receive the following:

➤ Perk: Agent of Dibella

PREREQUISITES: None

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Thieves Guild Quest: Hard Answers

LOCATIONS: Gjukur's Monument, Greenspring Hollow, Ivarstead, Markarth, Understone Keep, Riften, Temple of Mara

CHARACTERS: Bassianus Axius, Boti, Calcelmo, Dinya Balu, Faleen, Fastred, Fenrig, Joffthor, Klimmek, Maramal, Ruki, Yngvar the Singer

ENEMIES: None

◆ OBJECTIVES: Talk to Fastred, Talk to Fastred's parents, Talk to Bassianus or Klimmek, Return to Dinya Balu, Talk to Calcelmo, Get advice from Yngvar, Deliver Poem, Deliver Faleen's letter, Return to Dinya Balu, Put on the Amulet of Mara, Talk to the long-dead lover, Find Fenrig, Bring Fenrig to Ruki, Return to Dinya Balu

Travel to the fishing village of Ivarstead, which has seen better days. Locate the young lady named Fastred, who is usually chopping wood or working in her parents' allotment. She asks if you've been sent from Mara, then explains that her parents are being impossible: Fastred has two suitors, but her favorite—Bassianus—wants to marry and relocate to Riften, which her father has forbidden. She also has a soft spot for another man—Klimmek—who is less adventurous and wants to stay in Ivarstead.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Fastred's parents

◆ TARGET: Boti and Joffthor, in Ivarstead

Both Boti (Mother) and Joffthor (Father) should be close by or near their dwelling. Speak to both parents in either order. Boti tells you that she actually likes Bassianus and can perhaps persuade her husband to change his mind over her child's plans to leave for Riften. Talk with Joffthor, and he tells you that it isn't Fastred's plans to move that is upsetting him; she was supposedly "in love" with Klimmek until a few months ago, but he's a little spineless and needs a good shove to win Fastred over: That way the younger generation can help save the town. With these differing opinions, you have a choice to make.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Bassianus or Klimmek

◆ TARGET: Bassianus and Klimmek, in Ivarstead

You now have a choice to make and neither is "wrong"; you can speak to either Bassianus Axius or Klimmek: Both are likely to be near the river. Decide on Bassianus and suggest that he elopes. Decide on Klimmek and tell him Fastred probably appreciates a more assertive man and tell him to be bold. You can become more negative in your conversation with either suitor if you change your mind. Once you push either man into the arms of Fastred (who agrees to either suitor), your work here is done.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Dinya Balu

◆ TARGET: Temple of Mara, in Riften

Enter the town of Riften. Sitting back from the main thoroughfare is the Temple of Mara. Head inside and speak to either Maramal (who may also be in the Bee and Barb); his priestess wife, Dinya Balu; or Briehl an acolyte. Any of them explain they are devoted to the goddess Mara, who gave mortals the gift of love. But to receive her blessing, you must first act as her hand in this world. Ask what you must do, and the priest explains the predicament of a young woman named Fastred. Her prayers were heard by her goddess and relayed to her servant; you must help her choose her suitor.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Fastred

◆ TARGET: Fastred, in Ivarstead

Unrequited Love

Back in Riften, enter the Temple and inform Dinya Balu that you've helped the young lovers in Ivarstead. Mara has another task for you to perform: An older man named Calcelmo must open up about his romantic troubles. Seek and help him on his path.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Calcelmo

◆ TARGET: Calcelmo, inside Understone Keep, in Markarth

Journey to Markarth, and venture into the Understone Keep. In the cathedral-sized interior chamber to the west, you're likely to find Calcelmo. Brush off his initial impoliteness, and inform him Mara sent you. He tells you he's been thinking about Faleen, Igmund's Housecarl (bodyguard). He longs for her but becomes tongue-tied when he tries to speak. Finding the right thing to say is the key here, and Calcelmo recommends you seek out Yngvar, who is more popular with the ladies. He may be able to help.

◆ TARGET: Yngvar, in Markarth

Find Yngvar, who is usually leaning near a bridge in Markarth's main thoroughfare. Engage him in conversation, bringing the chatter around to Faleen. You'll find out that she secretly enjoys poetry, and Yngvar has just the verse, if you're ready to receive his golden words—which are going to cost you 200 gold pieces. You must pay the man to receive the poem.

➤ 200 gold pieces

➤ Love Poem

◆ OBJECTIVE: Deliver Poem

◆ TARGET: Faleen, inside Understone Keep, in Markarth

Locate Faleen next to her master, in the throne chamber inside Understone Keep. You may reveal as much or little as you like about Calcelmo, but you must hand over the poem, which both surprises and impresses her greatly. In return, she gives you a letter to give back to him; it isn't as eloquent but is certain to please him.

➤ Faleen's Letter to Calcelmo

◆ OBJECTIVE: Deliver Faleen's letter

◆ TARGET: Calcelmo, inside Understone Keep, in Markarth

Hand Calcelmo the letter, and he leaves to join with Faleen and their love blossoms.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Dinya Balu

◆ TARGET: Temple of Mara, in Riften

Deep Love

Dinya Balu has one last task to test you with in the final aspect of love, a strong love that can survive storms and even death. You must take the symbol of Mara and rejoin to wandering souls, binding them to this world.

➤ Amulet of Mara

◆ OBJECTIVE: Put on the Amulet of Mara

◆ TARGET: Yourself

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to the long-dead lover

◆ TARGET: Ruki, Gjukur's Monument

TIP Reach Gjukur's Monument by nightfall to ensure your ghosts are easy to spot.

Head to Gjukur's Monument and seek the ghost of Ruki. She has turned over every body in this long-forgotten battlefield but cannot find her soul mate. Mention the last battle was hundreds of years ago, but Ruki still believes she's witnessing the battle afresh. Begin the search anew.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find Fenrig

◆ TARGET: Fenrig, south of Greenspring Hollow

Ruki was searching in the wrong place; her lover's spirit resides on the heath to the south of Greenspring Hollow. Tell Fenrig that his wife is looking for him in the plains to the west. He agrees but must report back to camp by sunrise: Again, this is another spirit living in the past.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring Fenrig to Ruki

◆ TARGET: Ruki, Gjukur's Monument

Either Fast-Travel or trek back to Gjukur's Monument, where the couple embrace, then slowly rise into the air. Their spirits grow brighter as they ascend, until they become two bright points in the night sky, forever circling each other.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Dinya Balu

◆ TARGET: Temple of Mara, in Riften

Quest Conclusion

Return one last time to Dinya Balu and explain that you helped the long-dead lovers find each other. She congratulates you on achieving the higher comprehension of love and says the Blessings of Mara will shine with you. You receive the following (which is different from the temporary Blessing of Mara if you pray at any of her shrines):

◆ OBJECTIVES: Talk to Danica about the Goldergreen being destroyed, Retrieve Nettlebane, Bring Nettlebane to Danica, Retrieve Eldergleam sap, Return to Danica

Dark Arts on Orphan Rock

Brave traps, inclement weather, and a coven of witches that attack you on sight as you ascend and head across the tree branch to the top of Orphan Rock. Face the Hagraven in combat and slay her. Inspect the corpse, and secure the Nettlebane blade from it.

(Sneak) You may also try pickpocketing the blade from the Hagraven.

◆ Nettlebane

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring Nettlebane to Danica

◆ TARGET: Danica Pure-Spring, the Temple of Kynareth, in Whiterun

Danica is probably inside the Temple of Kynareth. She isn't keen on touching the Nettlebane and asks if you're able to complete the next part of the task: to journey east to the Eldergleam Sanctuary grove and retrieve the sap from the ancient tree. Once the quest updates, you're stopped by Maurice Jondrelle, a pilgrim wishing to accompany you to the Sanctuary to witness the Eldergleam. You may agree to journey with him or ignore his request.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Danica about the Goldergreen being destroyed

◆ TARGET: Danica Pure-Spring, near the Gildergreen tree, in Whiterun

TIP You can start this quest by speaking to Danica Pure-Spring up at the Temple of Kynareth.

Search out Danica Pure-Spring, and ask her about the tree. It is an offshoot of the Eldergleam, a massive tree and the oldest living thing in Skyrim. Ask about reviving the tree, and she tells you that even if you reach the Eldergleam deep in its sanctuary, you couldn't tap its sap, as it cannot be cut by normal metal. Only one weapon is known to cut the tree's bark—Nettlebane—and it is carried by the Hagraven that prowls on Orphan Rock. Agree to retrieve this weapon hewn of dark magic from beyond the time of man.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve Nettlebane

◆ TARGET: Hagraven, Orphan Rock

◆ The Sting of Nettlebane

Hike the volcanic tundra until you find the rather unassuming cave entrance to Eldergleam Sanctuary. Enter it, and the cave opens into a gigantic grotto, where waterfalls tumble from the sky-high roof and hot springs belch from the ground. This interior wonder has pilgrims resting and watching in awe. Optionally speak to Asta for more information on the place and a warning not to harm the tree.

There are two ways to harvest the sap you need:

1. Some quick swipes to the tree's gigantic root structure, which is blocking the path to the tree trunk, shouldn't hurt the ancient entity. Despite Maurice's protests, produce Nettlebane and swipe once. The tree's roots creak and retract from the soil. Continue with this swiping until you reach the trunk, and pierce it with Nettlebane to siphon off some sap.

➤ Eldergleam Sap

2. Or, if Maurice is with you, agree to let him pray in front of the tree. A sapling grows from his devotion. You can return this to Danica instead.

➤ Eldergleam Sapling

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Danica

◆ TARGET: Danica Pure-Spring, the Temple of Kynareth, in Whiterun

Both Maurice Jondrelle and the Spriggans who guard the tree don't take kindly to sap stealing if you chose that option. They mount an offensive strike against you. Fight or flee from this place, and return swiftly to Danica Pure-Spring, presenting her with the sap. She is most grateful.

Quest Conclusion

Danica takes the sap (or sapling) from you. You are now on friendly terms with her, and she is available as a Trainer (a Master in Restoration).

Postquest Activities

After time passes and you return to the Temple of Kynareth, you witness the tree blooming again (if you returned with sap) or being replaced by the sapling (if Maurice prayed for you).

THE BONDS OF MATRIMONY

PREREQUISITES: None

◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak to Maramal about arranging your wedding, Attend your wedding ceremony, Visit your or your spouse's house

A Life Lived Alone Is No Life at All

Sometimes it is lonely on the mist-filled pathways of Skyrim. You may yearn for companionship. Or something more? If you feel your life is incomplete and must be shared with someone, make your way to Riften and check the Bee and Barb tavern or the Temple of Mara for a talk with Maramal the priest. He detests the drinking of mead and hopes the drunkards of Riften will eventually accept the teachings of the handmaiden of Kyne. Ask for more information about the Temple of Mara, and he tells you she is the goddess of love, tending to the sick, poor, and lost. The priests of Mara also perform wedding ceremonies for all the loving couples in Skyrim. Now ask how marriage works:

Life is hard and short, so there is little time for courtship. A person interested in looking for a spouse simply wears an Amulet of Mara around their neck, indicating their availability. After another shows interest and they agree to be together, they come to the temple and marry. You can purchase one of these Amulets for the low price of 200 gold pieces.

➤ Amulet of Mara

After you purchase an Amulet of Mara, check your Items > Apparel menu, and wear the necklace, or you'll never entice a spouse! At this point, you must find someone who wishes to marry you. To do this, you must strike up a friendship with any one of the following potential suitors. "Striking a friendship" means completing a favor for them, or otherwise getting into their good graces.

TIP Your gender, age, and race matters not: If you're attracted to someone, go out and catch their hearts!

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

TIP Opting for a quick marriage? Then approach Camilla Valerius over at the Riverwood Trader once Side Quest: The Golden Claw ends. She takes a shine to you after the quest is over.

When you're on friendly terms with your potential partner, they will notice—and mention—your Amulet of Mara and will usually express surprise that you're not spoken for. You can choose to ignore this advance or ask if they're interested in you. They answer that they are. But are you interested in them? Answer yes if you wish to continue down this road of happiness, or no to remain alone. You're tasked with arranging the marriage straight away...in case one of you dies.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Maramal about arranging your wedding

Return to Riften and find Maramal, either in the Temple of Mara or in the Bee and Barb. Tell him you'd like to have a wedding at the temple. He agrees, and sets the date for the next day, between dawn (5:00 a.m.) and dusk (7:00 p.m.).

◆ OBJECTIVE: Attend your wedding ceremony

NOTE Whoops! Did a combination of adventuring and cold feet cause you to miss your wedding day? Then this previous objective fails. After a few hours, your jilted lover can be convinced to attempt the ceremony again. Speak to Maramal and arrange this; then wait another day and try getting to the temple on time!

◆ Prosperity and Poverty, Joy, and Hardship

Oh, happy day! Tomorrow dawns, and you can head to the Temple of Mara at any time before dusk. Your spouse-to-be is already there and doesn't need to be told to turn up. As you enter, the ceremony begins. Maramal conducts the ceremony and eventually asks if you agree to be bound together in love, now and forever. You can:

Agree, for now and forever.

Or freak out slightly, halt the wedding, and tell Maramal you can't go through with it.

Or freak out completely and attack everyone. Doing this or leaving the temple during the ceremony fails this quest, and usually ups your Crime in the Rift considerably.

Assuming you didn't ruin your betrothed's day, he declares you to be wed.

➤ The Bond of Matrimony

◆ OBJECTIVE: Visit your or your spouse's house

At this point, your spouse asks where you both should live, now that you're married. They offer their own home to you. You can:

Agree, and visit the house (which should appear on your world map). Depending on who you've married, this could be anything from a sturdy-built stone dwelling to a small tent in the tundra.

Or, if you've already purchased a dwelling as part of the Thane Tasks (page 502), you can choose your spouse to live with you.

➤ Spouse

Quest Conclusion

The "happily ever after" part is next. Your spouse grants you the following benefits:

You can ask them to serve up a home-cooked meal for you once every 24 hours.

They set up a shop in the house you're living in. If your spouse was a merchant, they sell what they did before. If they weren't, they sell miscellaneous objects.

You may sleep close to your spouse and receive a bonus, feeling your Lover's Comfort when you awaken.

If your spouse is also a Follower, they can accompany you on adventures.

If your spouse is also a Trainer, you can train with them at your marital home.

If your spouse is a Follower and a Trainer, you can train with them anywhere you like!

If you've chosen to marry your Housecarl, you move into the abode that your spouse is already in charge of (one of the ones you've owned or built yourself before hiring them).

If you have an adopted child, your spouse also becomes their mother or father, and your betrothed may speak with you about your child.

➤ Lover's Comfort

Murder Most Foul

NOTE This quest is available only after you enter Windhelm, leave this Hold City, head to a different location, return again, and complete this four times. Now enter at night, and look for a small group of townsfolk and a guard gathering in the graveyard.

When walking the Stone Quarter of Windhelm (west of the entrance gate), you stumble across a shocking scene. In the graveyard near the Hall of the Dead, the freshly slaughtered corpse of a woman lies draped over a grave. As the stunned onlookers assemble, go speak with the Windhelm Guard. He tells you another girl has been killed; this one is Susanna from Candlehearth Hall. When you ask, he admits she's the third young girl to be killed here, at night, and with her body cut and torn. Without time to investigate these heinous crimes, ask if he requires any help. He points you to the onlookers who might have some information to share.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Question the witnesses

There are three witnesses to speak to:

Calixto Corrium:
The owner of the House of Curiosities in town. He thought he saw someone running away but didn't get a good look at him.

Sidla the Unseen:
A beggar living in the Stone Quarter marketplace. She heard a scream and came running, but Susanna was already dead.

Helgird: The Priestess of Arkay from the Hall of the Dead. She noticed the woman's coinpurse was still on the body, so this wasn't a robbery.

Head back outside, and follow the trail of blood. This leads up the stone steps, around the corner to the north into the Valunstrad District, up more steps, and ends at a firmly locked (Master) front door to a building named Hjerim.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Get access to Hjerim

◆ TARGET: Hjerim front door, Valunstrad District, Windhelm

Accessing Hjerim can be tricky, as it can require a little asking around among the inhabitants of Windhelm. You can:

(Lockpick) Unlock the door (Master) using your considerable lockpicking prowess.

Ask around town. Speak to a guard or a local, and ask how you can enter Hjerim. You're told this used to belong to Friga Shatter-Shield and has been abandoned ever since she was killed. Apparently, her mother, Tova, has the key.

NOTE This horror house named Hjerim is actually for sale, but only after you've witnessed the murder scene. Consult the Thane Tasks on page 502 for further information.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to the guard

With nobody knowing (or saying anything), when you report back to the guard, he's suitably frustrated. Offer to investigate, and he points you in the direction of the Palace of the Kings, so you can talk to Jorleif. The steward of Windhelm will officially deputize you to conduct the investigation.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Jorleif

◆ OBJECTIVE: Get assistance from Jorleif

◆ TARGET: Jorleif, inside the Palace of the Kings, in Windhelm

Visit the Palace of the Kings, and contact Jorleif. Tell him you've heard about the murders. He gladly accepts your aid and tells the guards to assist you as necessary.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Examine the crime scene
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Helgird
- ◆ TARGET: Victim's location, graveyard close to Hall of the Dead

TIP This objective is more easily completed during daylight hours. Note that you can follow the trail of blood and break into Hjerim and avoid a lot of investigative chatting to the locals, if you wish.

Return to the coffin where the body of Susanna was dumped. You notice there's blood pooling on the coffin lid and stains that match a dragging. The guard mentions the blood if you speak to him, too. Look west, and you'll see a trail of it. The guard also mentions that Helgird has taken the body into the Hall of the Dead to prepare it for burial. She might know something. The entrance to the Hall of the Dead is on your right (northwest) as you face the trail of blood. Head into the gloomy crypt, and after quizzing Helgird again, she reveals the cuts on the corpse were made with some kind of curved blade the Nords used to embalm their dead.

Tova Shatter-Shield is usually at the market in the southwest Stone Quarter or walking nearby. At night, she heads to the House of Clan Shatter-Shield. You can pick the lock (Master) to enter, or wait until morning until she unlocks the house; speak to her then or when she leaves. Tell her you have some questions about her daughter. Choose any conversation response regarding the finding of her daughter's killer, and let her know you need a key to investigate her house. She hands the key over. Take it, head back to Hjerim, and open the front door.

➤ Key to Hjerim

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Investigate Hjerim for clues

◆ A Butcher's Handiwork

Inside, the place has been cleared out, and cobwebs blanket the corners. The place is seemingly deserted, but a thorough inspection reveals the following:

Front room (north):

The pots and pans here haven't been used for ages, judging by the skeever droppings and cobwebs inside.

Front room (entrance): The chest has splatters of blood and was recently pushed against the wall. Search it after inspecting it to reveal almost a dozen leaflets warning of a "butcher." The name "Viola Giordano" is mentioned on the leaflet. There is a journal to view, too. It makes grisly reading and seems to indicate necromantic activity.

Front room (entrance): The scattered mead bottles are from the previous occupants.

Front room (west wall): The low shelf by one of the wardrobes is filled with more leaflets warning about the Butcher. Remove the leaflets, as one of the piles is misshapen. Underneath, you find a strange (and exceptionally valuable) amulet! Inspect it in your Items > Apparel menu.

Front room (back wardrobe): One of the wardrobes at the back of the room has been nailed to the wall. Open it and slide the false panel back.

You find a disgusting sight: a small makeshift altar and antechamber strewn with body parts. Check the altar, and you confirm it is being used for some unknown magic. A second Butcher Journal can be taken from here. It seems to contain ingredients, both body parts and an incantation.

Upstairs: Only the bed and chairs, which have been weirdly positioned, can be inspected.

- Beware the Butcher! (19)
- Butcher Journal #2
- Butcher Journal #1
- Strange Amulet

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow up on the clues from Hjerim

- ◆ TARGET: Any Windhelm Guard, in Windhelm

TIP Only the first Butcher Journal and leaflets are needed to continue progress, although it is beneficial if you find everything listed here.

Leave the house and consult with any guard in Windhelm. Two new topics of conversation are available (assuming you found at least one leaflet and the Strange Amulet):

Ask about the "Butcher": Viola Giordano posts these all over the city, and someone keeps removing them.

Ask about the amulet. The guard hasn't seen anything like it, but Calixto at the House of Curiosities has a good eye for such trinkets.

Viola Giordano: Here Her Hearsay

Search for Viola wandering the streets of Windhelm. Ask her about the Butcher; she's been searching for him for months and then mentions the poster leaflet you found in Hjerim. She echoes the guard's information, that someone has been taking them down as quickly as she posts them around the city. She recommends you meet her at Hjerim for another inspection. You can follow her if you haven't uncovered the amulet. Otherwise, you are free to visit Calixto, too.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Viola outside of Hjerim

Calixto Corrium: Curiouser and Curiouser

Head to the southeast part of the Stone Quarter and enter Calixto Corrium's House of Curiosities. Aside from taking a tour, you can ask him about the amulet you found. He cheerfully inspects the amulet, telling you it's a Wheelstone, an heirloom symbol of the power of Windhelm and traditionally carried by the court mage. He's interested in the piece and offers you 500 gold. You can:

Agree, and sell the piece.

Ask whether the court mage should have it instead, and keep it.

Or hold on to it.

- 500 gold pieces (if sold)

Whatever your choice, the next place to head is Hjerim, where you should have agreed to meet Viola.

Revisiting the House of the Dead

◆ OBJECTIVE: Investigate Hjerim with Viola

Viola is ready to inspect the house when you arrive. After she sees the altar and is sickened by the "Butcher's" activities, her reactions are similar but depend on how thorough your previous search has been and whether you've met with Calixto.

If you already found the gruesome altar and spoke with Calixto about the amulet, Viola believes that Wuunferth the Unliving—the court mage in the Palace of the Kings—is the likely culprit and urges you to tell the steward Jorleif.

If you already found the gruesome altar and didn't speak with Calixto, speak to Viola.

If you haven't found the gruesome altar yet, Viola leads to you the strange cabinet and forces you to open the false back and discover the altar. When you take the Butcher's Journal and read the scribbling about necromancy, speak to Viola about it. Apparently, Wuunferth the court mage is a dangerous man; that's why he's called "the Unliving." She worries about approaching him directly. She urges you to approach Jorleif about him.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Jorleif

At this point, with the evidence you've accumulated, you have two possible ways to complete this investigation, and both involve heading into the Palace of the Kings. You can speak to Jorleif, or you can check in with the suspect, Wuunferth himself.

▶ Epilogue: Wuunferth: Wrongly Accused?

Bypass Jorleif, ignoring Viola's instructions, and enter the upstairs part of the Palace of the Kings, to your left (west) as you come in. Head upstairs, turn left (south), and open the door at the corridor's end, leading into Wuunferth's private chamber. He may also be sitting in the Palace's great hall or wandering the building. Tell him you hear he dabbles in necromancy. He indignantly denies such a spurious accusation; he's a member of the College of Winterhold in good standing. When you mention the journals and amulet, Wuunferth wants to know what the amulet looks like. After you describe it, he knows it to be the Necromancer's Amulet, a legendary item. Wuunferth has been noting that the killings are tied to some kind of necromantic ritual—tomorrow night, in the Stone Quarter, in fact!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Patrol the streets of the Stone Quarter at night

▶ Epilogue: Wuunferth in the Wrong

Tell Jorleif that you believe Wuunferth the Unliving is the killer. Jorleif wants to know if you have any proof, so explain you've evidence of the necromancy in Hjerim and the amulet that looks to belong to him. Jorleif doesn't want to believe this, as Wuunferth has been a trusted friend to Ulfric for many years. But it seems those whispers around town had some truth to them. He thanks you for your diligence at solving this matter. The quest concludes, and Jorleif takes a guard and heads to the upstairs chamber where Wuunferth resides. He puts him in chains and takes him down to the Bloodworks prison in the Palace. You can watch if you wish; the old necromancer splutters indignantly about his innocence.

Three days pass. Return to Windhelm again and listen to the townsfolk. It appears that the Butcher has struck again! Move to the crime scene, where you can speak to a city guard who wonders why this has happened, considering your investigation. You're told to head to the prison and speak to Wuunferth. He's obviously in some way responsible. But how?

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Wuunferth

Wuunferth openly mocks your terrible detective work when you tell him the killer has struck again. Request that he helps you find the real killer, and he asks why you thought Wuunferth was responsible in the first place. Mention the journals and amulet, and he angrily replies that he's a member of the College of Winterhold in good standing. Furthermore, he never kept a journal. He wants to know what the amulet looks like; after you describe it, he knows it to be the Necromancer's Amulet, a legendary item. Wuunferth has been noting that the killings are tied to some kind of necromantic ritual—tomorrow night, in the Stone Quarter, in fact!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Patrol the streets of the Stone Quarter at night

Quest Conclusion

Wait until nightfall the next evening. The place is unusually quiet, until you stumble upon Calixto Corrium speaking with a woman (usually in the market area). A moment later, he attacks her. Stop that murderer!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Catch the murderer

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Jorleif for reward

Race after Calixto. If you're too slow, he runs back to his butchering place, into Hjerim where he makes his last stand. Otherwise, he won't go down without a fight. You can kill him using your favored weapons or beat him to his knees using your fists. When Calixto is safely dealt with, head to Jorleif. He thanks you profusely for finally solving this murder (and a little less profusely if he has to go and release Wuunferth). You now receive the following rewards:

The Necromancer's Amulet, if you sold it back to Calixto (which you can then sell again for even more profit!)

The title "Special Investigator of Windhelm."

A free "cleaning" of Hjerim, so the gruesome antechamber has the flesh and bones removed from it, whether you own the house or not.

➤ Necromancer's Amulet

Postquest Activities

It is now wise to purchase Hjerim if you wish to.

CALIXTO CORRIUM: MODUS OPERANDI

Calixto Corrium recently mourned the loss of his twin sister, Lucilla. The two have always been extraordinarily close and have shared a love of all things ancient and exotic, and so assembled the House of Curiosities collection together. When Lucilla passed away, Calixto was wrecked; beyond heartbroken, he went into seclusion. During his hermitage, he discovered an ancient deep magic that could bring his darling sister back to him, but it demanded raw materials of marrow, bone, flesh, sinew, and blood. He took to the frozen streets of Windhelm at night, harvesting women for specific ingredients. He was assembling his sister's new incarnation in Hjerim, the now-abandoned house of his first victim.

PREREQUISITES: You must be Level 80 or higher, You must visit any large city in Skyrim

LOCATIONS: Any Hold Capital, Last Vigil

ENEMIES: Ebony Warrior

◆ OBJECTIVES: Talk to the Ebony Warrior, Meet the Ebony Warrior at the Last Vigil

MINOR SPOILERS

A Mysterious Malcontent

NOTE This quest is completed within the province of Skyrim. You do not need to visit Solstheim for it to occur.

Once you're a mighty adventurer of considerable repute, and you've achieved the monumental Level 80, the ultimate challenge awaits. Simply visit any of the mainland cities and wander toward the central part of the city. In this example, we journeyed to Windhelm. In Windhelm, this is the foot of the steps leading up to the Palace of the Kings, just past Candlehearth Hall. Loiter for a moment, and an impressively tall entity clad in exquisite ebony mail approaches you.

"The time has come." The Ebony Warrior wastes no time with verbose introductions, informing you that he's done all that can be done and has exhausted all avenues of adventuring save one: you. You are to be his final challenge. Only you can send him to Sovngarde with honor! When you're ready to face him, you must trek to his last vigil, nestled high in the Velothi Mountains.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to the Ebony Warrior

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet the Ebony Warrior at the Last Vigil

◆ TARGET: Last Vigil, The Rift

At this point you can forgo his request to face you in the wilds of his last vigil, and battle him inside the city! This makes an already-difficult battle more fraught than ever, as your aggressive behavior alerts the city guards. Now you must face the town's watch and the Ebony Warrior to complete this quest!

The Mightiest Duel

Assuming you want to honor this venerable warrior's last request, head out from the city. Your journey to the Last Vigil (which was previously known as [9.T] Miner's Camp: Velothi Mountains) means climbing some pretty sheer cliffs and craggy outcrops on the Rift's eastern edge. If you're Fast-Traveling, set out from either Tolvald's Cave or Fallowstone Cave; they are the nearest Primary Locations. As you reach the half-buried miner's corpse, you should see the Ebony Warrior polishing his blade. Approach him, and your duel can begin!

As the Battle Begins

Before engaging the Ebony Warrior, make sure you're prepared for one of the most difficult single battles in your illustrious adventuring career:

Pilfer Potent Potions: The Ebony Warrior is carrying a few potions of healing. When you first encounter him in town, attempt to pickpocket him and grab them. If that isn't possible, during your fight you must keep pressing the attack to stop him from using these potions and prolonging the battle.

The First Cut: When you reach the Last Vigil, the Ebony Warrior doesn't attack you on sight. In fact, unless you blunder into him, you're usually able to land the first blow. So make it count! Scour your inventory for potions and spells that fortify your defenses and augment your offense, and open the battle with your most powerful attack.

Weaponless Equals Powerless: The Ebony Warrior favors the Disarm Shout (among others), and if he's successful, be sure to have an extra weapon or two already flagged as Favorites to switch to. Scrambling for a blade you've had knocked out of your hands is an ineffective way to fight this foe!

Careful by the Cliffs: He can also use the Unrelenting Force Shout, which can easily send you tumbling off the cliffs surrounding the Last Vigil. Be sure you're facing the cliff edge, not standing on it!

Battle Tactics: Wearing Down the Warrior

The Ebony Warrior fights at range with a lethal bow or at closer quarters with a ferocious blade. He also uses the previously listed attacks. Aside from the usual method of foe-slaying (facing him with a weapon, which can take a frighteningly long time to whittle down his health), the following special techniques work particularly well:

Fighting with Fire: If you're using magic, note that the Ebony Warrior is marginally more vulnerable to Fire than the other elements, since only his shield confers Fire Resistance, and he won't have it equipped if you fight him from range. Of course, his bow is quite deadly.

Assassin's Blade: With this Sneak perk and a suitably powerful dagger, you can really make your first attack count! For an even more lethal strike, save the Jarrin Root, a unique plant obtained in Dark Brotherhood Quest: To Kill an Empire, and use your Alchemy skill to craft an incredibly potent Damage Health poison to coat your blade for this battle.

Making an Impact: The Destruction perk Impact allows you to stagger even the mighty Ebony Warrior, which can slow his assault and prevent him from healing.

Cliff Top Drop: Although he is immune to falling damage, putting a little space between the two of you by shouting him off a cliff may give you a moment of respite to recover before resuming your assault.

Bows from Above: Instead of hiking directly up to the Last Vigil, sneak around to the stone promontory above—if you're highly skilled in Archery and want to hit him with a few surprise arrow attacks.

Beast Form: Remember that you can fight the Ebony Warrior as a werewolf, because your attacks are surprisingly effective, and you can combat your foe's tendency to heal by savaging him on the ground. For best results, use the Totem of Brotherhood (obtained in Companions Radiant Quest: Totems of Hircine), ideally upgraded with the Lycanthropy perk Totem of the Moon, to summon two powerful werewolves to fight at your side. You should also equip one of the enchanted rings sold by the werewolves of Solstheim's Frostmoon Crag (Solstheim Side Quest: Rings of the Werewolves*)

Battle Tactics: The More the Merrier

As with most opponents, distraction is a powerful tool. Here are some friendly faces you can bring or summon to keep the Ebony Warrior preoccupied:

Follow Your Leader: Make sure to bring along your favorite Follower—someone who complements your play style—and strike from different directions so the Ebony Warrior can't focus all his attacks your way. An animal companion can also provide a small distraction, although you shouldn't expect them to stand up to the Ebony Warrior for long.

King of the Frost Giants: Complete Solstheim Regional Activity: Karstaag's Resurrection* before this battle, and (as you're fighting outdoors) you can use one of Karstaag's three summons to call him to your side. This pits two of Skyrim's deadliest foes against one another in an epic confrontation!

Summoned from Sovngarde: Complete Main Quest: Dragonslayer and Epilogue before this battle, then use your Call of Valor Shout, summoning one of the three ancient Nord heroes (Gormlaith Golden-Hilt, Felldir the Old, or Hakon One-Eye) for 60 seconds of additional carnage.

Atronach Attack: With the necessary spell, staff, or scroll, summon a powerful Flame, Frost, or Storm Thrall to aid you. A true master of Conjunction magic should summon a second thrall for even more assistance.

The Winged Snow Hunter: Complete Main Quest: The Fallen before this battle, then yell for Odahviing using the Call Dragon Shout. Attack from the ground while the dragon strikes from above.

A Flying Steed You Need: Better yet, complete Dragonborn Main Quest: The Gardener of Men, and unlock all three Words of the Bend Will Shout. Then summon Odahviing (or bind another dragon) and fly to the Last Vigil. Ready your projectile spells or Shouts and rain death on the Ebony Warrior from above!

A Fine Steed Indeed: You may even be able to coax your trusty steed into battering the Ebony Warrior as well. Since this may prove fatal to the horse, make sure you can afford a replacement, or call upon the immortal Arvak instead.

TIP Why not try all of the above to aid in this ferocious fracas?

Quest Conclusion

Once you've triumphed and the Ebony Warrior departs for Sovngarde, you can inspect his corpse for a variety of extremely impressive items. Take everything, use what you need, and sell the rest. You can rightly claim to be the mightiest warrior in Skyrim since Ysgramor himself!

MINOR SPOILERS

This quest can be started in any number of ways. There's no "optimal" way to begin, and no one to speak to about it. You're most likely to just stumble across it somewhere as a part of your adventure. Here are some of the possibilities:

When exploring any of the locations for this quest, such as Saarthal (in College of Winterhold Quest: Under Saarthal), you may find a cryptic note on the boss that begins this quest. These all point you to copies of the book Lost Legends of Skyrim.

Or, you may find the book first. Copies of Lost Legends are all over the world, and reading any of them, such as the one in Farengar's library in Dragonsreach, will give you some background and direct you to Folgunthur.

Or, you may simply enter Folgunthur on your own and find the body of Daynas Valen. His notes provide the clues that guide the rest of your journey.

NOTE Below is one of the paths you might take through this quest. There is no "correct" order for the places you visit, but this route allows you to see all the locations in a logical progression.

Do Not Disturb

Deep in the Reach, the southern road follows the river as it winds through the canyons toward Markarth. At one point, the road crosses a bridge with a large waterfall to the south. Head up the rocky slope, onto a dirt path that leads to the rushing stream, and follow the streambed through the falls. Hidden behind is the entrance to Reachwater Rock. The "Rock" in question is inside the cavern: a natural stone island with a single gnarled tree, above a gloomy lake. A dead adventurer lies against the tree, and a pedestal stands nearby. There are two items of interest on the pedestal:

- Ancient Edict
- Emerald Dragon Claw

The Edict is particularly worrying; it tells you to leave this place, as whatever was sealed in here was done at a great price. Take the Claw as well, and once you choose to ignore the warning, this quest continues!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Investigate the cryptic message

◆ TARGET: The dead adventurer

If you haven't already, check the adventurer's body. In addition to some potions, he also has a copy of the book Lost Legends of Skyrim, which tells the tale of the Arch-Mage Gauldur and his three sons, all murdered in ages past. Could this sealed tomb be connected to the legend? The book doesn't say, but it does mention one place that is: Folgunthur, near the foot of Solitude, far to the north.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Investigate the Gauldur legend

◆ TARGET: Daynas Valen's Journal, outside Folgunthur

Although the objective is out of the cave, you can see a Nordic Puzzle Door set into the rock wall above the pedestal.

Puzzle Solution: The door consists of three "rings" that rotate when you activate them. Each has three animals plated into the stonework, and the central keyhole is unlocked using the Emerald Dragon Claw; the puzzle is inaccessible without it. The puzzle solution is actually on the palm of the Claw; rotate it in your inventory to see the three circular petroglyph carvings on the Claw's palm. Move the rings so the Bear, Whale, and Snake appear on the outer, middle, and inner rings, respectively. Then insert the Emerald Dragon Claw into the keyhole.

Through the door, a long hallway greets you, along with three additional doors that grind open one after the other. They lead to a second (and completely sealed) Nordic Puzzle Door. This features different petroglyphs, and your Emerald Dragon Claw doesn't fit the keyhole. You return here at the zenith of this quest.

Travel to Folgunthur, just southeast of Solitude in the marshes, and inspect the long-abandoned campground outside the barrow. Inside one of the snow-dusted tents is Daynas Valen's Journal. Read and stow it; the book speaks of his obsession with the Gauldur legend, which he, too, has traced to Folgunthur.

► Daynas Valen's Journal

NOTE Due to the varied nature of this quest, you can simply head here and read Daynas Valen's Journal first or obtain the notes from Daynas himself, inside Folgunthur. There are many options for uncovering the history of the hated Gauldersons!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn the truth from Daynas Valen

◆ TARGET: Daynas Valen's Notes, in Folgunthur

◆ Be Bound Here, Mikrul: Murderer, Betrayer

Open the ominous Iron Doors of Folgunthur, watching for a trigger plate in the initial tunnel; you don't want to be skewered by the spikes shooting from the dragon busts on either side of you. Note the corpses of the adventurers and Draugr strewn across the passage; you're far from the first to venture into this tomb. At the bottom of the tunnel steps is a claw keyhole, which seems to have already been opened, and requires the Ivory Claw (which Daynas has, according to his journal).

Inside the entrance room is a Nordic Puzzle. It, too, has already been solved. The exit opposite leads to a pressure plate and fire trap and the first live Draugr in the tomb. The passage continues into an expansive subterranean banquet hall, with Draugr literally peeling away from the walls and oily floors and lamps to roast them with.

Enter the passage on the banquet hall's far side, where a floor grate drops away as you step near. You are fortunate that the drop onto spikes is filled with water. Carefully step around the grating or use the wall lever to close it and lift you out of the pit; then ascend the spiral steps. This leads to a balcony overlooking the banquet hall and the bloody remains of Daynas Valen, cut down close to another claw keyhole. Search his corpse for two important items:

► Daynas Valen's Notes

► Ivory Dragon Claw

◆ OBJECTIVE: Read Daynas Valen's notes

Grab the items, and leaf through the notes. Daynas's obsession and years of painstaking research finally led him to the surprising truth about Gauldur and his sons and the powerful amulet that bound the brothers together. It is obviously powerful. But is it worth the danger involved in assembling the pieces? Yes, of course it is!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the Gauldur Amulet Fragment in Folgunthur

◆ TARGET: Mikrul Gauldurson, in Folgunthur

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the Gauldur Amulet Fragment in Geirmund's Hall

◆ TARGET: Sigdis Gauldurson, in Geirmund's Hall

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the Gauldur Amulet Fragment in Saarthal

◆ TARGET: Jyrik Gauldurson, in Saarthal

Insert the Ivory Dragon Claw into the keyhole by Daynas's corpse. This lowers the bridge, forcing you into combat with the Draugr beyond. Battle through, into a small crypt (watch for a floor trigger and spear trap in the chamber to your left) and around to a Nordic Lever Puzzle.

Puzzle Solution: There are four levers, each moving a particular set of the four portcullises that block your path. Pull the right-front and left-rear levers to open your path.

Head down the steep stairs, watching for a rock-fall trap. Open the wooden door into a guardian chamber with two Draugr near their thrones and a large central grating. Currently, if you pull on the wall chain, you're pierced by darts. There is a trick to opening this grating:

Puzzle Solution: There are two levers, one by each throne. Both of them rotate walls that block the nearby doors, allowing you to enter the chambers beyond. The right one currently allows you to access a semicircular chamber adjacent to the throne and lever. Battle the Draugr before inspecting the three large stone heads, each with an animal petroglyph in their maws. Working counterclockwise from the first petroglyph you see, the order is Snake, Whale, and Hawk. Return to the grating chamber, and pull the lever by the left throne until the rock wall shifts to open into a second, almost identical chamber. The difference is that there are three pillars. Rotate them so that the Snake faces out from the first pillar (facing the doorway), the Whale faces out from the second, and the Hawk faces from the third, mimicking the petroglyphs in the mirrored room you just came from. Now when you pull the chain, the grate opens.

Wind your way down the long spiral steps to a waterlogged tunnel with Frostbite Spiders to tackle. The open doors at the far end lead to a long hall, flanked with coffins. As you enter the hall, the doors slam shut behind you and the lights go out. Crypts to either side of the room open, and Draugr begin to emerge in the darkness. Quickly use a Nighteye spell or power if you can, then battle the guardians. When the foes are vanquished, the lights come back on. Step up to another Nordic Puzzle Door.

Puzzle Solution: Move the rings so the Hawk, Hawk, and Dragon appear on the outer, middle, and inner rings, respectively. Then insert the Ivory Dragon Claw into the keyhole. Venture forward, and open the doors leading into Folgunthur Crypt.

Brother Battle: Mikrul Gauldurson

The crypt is a massive chamber, flanked with coffins and a main tomb at the far (southeast) end. When you're about halfway across the crypt, the sarcophagus bursts open, and out clambors the fearsome Mikrul Gauldurson, now a Draugr of considerable power! Aside from his inherent toughness, he also wields the Gauldur Blackblade, a powerful sword with an Absorb Health enchantment. He is accompanied by Draugr Thralls: weak, unarmed Draugr that do little damage but crowd the space, making it hard for you to flee from Mikrul's reach.

Especially at low levels, you may find it harrowing to fight Mikrul in melee combat, as every blow he delivers rapidly refills his health. Followers and summoned creatures are best left behind, since Mikrul can drain their health just as easily. The safest bet is to refrain from being hit at all. Back away as best you can, dodge his blows, and use a bow or spells to whittle down his health. If desperate measures are called for, you can jump across the sarcophagi along the sides of the room to flee and regroup.

Once Mikrul falls, any surviving thralls also die. Be sure you pry Mikrul's bony fingers off his vampiric blade, which is an exceptional one-handed weapon. There are two other items of interest, too:

- Gauldur Blackblade
- Writ of Sealing
- Gauldur Amulet Fragment

Don't be fooled by the "fragment" part: Mikrul's amulet fragment is a full amulet in its own right and has a solid Fortify Health enchantment. The Writ has a curse against the Gauldurson brother written upon it. To exit the chamber, move to the far (southeast) end and insert the Ivory Dragon Claw into the right-side keyhole (the left leads to a rockfall). This removes the spear bars and allows access to the treasure chamber, which also contains a Word Wall. Now leave Folgunthur out of the southeast Iron Door, push out a sarcophagus lid for a shortcut into the banquet hall crypt, and retrace your steps back out. On your way, use the Ivory Claw in the first puzzle room to open a secret door with a chest.

- Word of Power: Frost Breath

Be Bound Here, Sigdis: Murderer, Betrayer

Travel to Geirmund's Hall, east of Ivarstead in the hilly forest close to Lake Geir. Enter the cave and crush the two Skeever; then peer down the massive sinkhole in the center of the room. Drop into the water below. Aside from the submerged crypt passage leading to a chest and a dead end, there are steps up to an Iron Door. Slash your way through Frostbite Spiders, watch for a trigger plate that launches darts, and head down into a waterlogged crypt. Aside from Draugr, there are Nordic puzzle pillars to inspect.

Puzzle Solution: Stand atop the steps and face down into the waterlogged crypt. On the left (south) wall are two small petroglyph plaques showing a Hawk and a Whale. On the right (north) wall, there are plaques showing a Whale and a Snake. Continue along the crypt's left side, and spin the two pillars to show the Hawk and the Whale. Backtrack, and continue along the crypt's right side, and spin the two pillars to show the Whale and the Snake (the first of these already shows the Whale and so doesn't need to be moved). Then pull the lever to open the portcullis doorway.

Head into the ruined hub chamber with a fallen bridge and steps up to an altar. You'll return here later, so simply check the corpse on the altar for a key and epitaph, where Lord Geirmund keeps his eternal vigil. To open the Iron Door behind the altar (Adept), use the key or pick it. Pass the Arcane Enchanter and turn left (west), as the direct route to Sigdis Gauldurson's sarcophagus is blocked. Climb the steps, kill the Draugr on the balcony overlooking the hub room, and ignore the easily spotted lever (unless you want spears in your sides). Instead, pull the hidden one just behind you to the right (southwest). This lowers the bridge.

Fight the Draugr as you cross (you can jump to the right and open a locked door [Expert] to reach a small treasure room, then retrace your steps). Use another lever on the middle "island" to lower the second bridge, and fight through into a small passage. Watch the floor trigger, or face swinging axes around the corner. Quickly step to the wall lanterns between the blades to avoid them.

- Lord Geirmund's Key
- Geirmund's Epitaph

Brother Battle: Sigdis Gauldurson

Follow the passage around and into the tomb of Sigdis Gauldurson. The moment he steps from his sarcophagus, he teleports away, and you suddenly have more than one Sigdis to deal with! His Illusory Duplicates spell means that two of these entities are magical doppelgangers. During the frenzy of combat, it may be difficult to tell, but Sigdis's duplicates have a few subtle differences:

The Gauldur Blackbow Signis uses dishes out significantly more damage and drains your Magicka.

The doppelgangers are wreathed in a slight blue glow.

The doppelgangers' helmets don't have horns, while Sigdis's helmet does.

The three foes fire from their platforms, forcing you to strike them using your favored weaponry. Sigdis teleports around and summons duplicates again periodically, speeding up if you destroy both duplicates or as his health falls.

Focus your attention on Sigdis, as he's the only one taking damage. After you kill him, any illusions are dispersed, and an exit doorway behind his coffin slides open once. Be sure you pry Sigdis's twitching fingers off his bow, which drains Magicka from targets. There are two other items of interest, too.

- Gauldur Blackbow
- Writ of Sealing
- Gauldur Amulet Fragment

Once again, Sigdis's amulet fragment is a real amulet, this time with a Fortify Stamina enchantment. The Writ has a curse against the Gauldurson brother written upon it. Exit via the newly opened corridor, leading to a large chest and a lever that opens a section of wall, leading you back into the initial chamber with the pit.

❖ Be Bound Here, Jyrik: Murderer, Betrayer

At this point, or whenever you wish to explore Saarthal and face Jyrik Gauldurson, you must visit the College of Winterhold and begin the College of Winterhold questline. Consult the College of Winterhold Quests for all pertinent information. Here's what you need to do:

Complete College of Winterhold Quest: First Lessons, proving your magical aptitude and gaining admittance to the College, where you'll train with Tolfdir.

Begin College of Winterhold Quest: Under Saarthal, and explore the excavation. The route to take, and the Nordic Puzzle solutions, are detailed in that quest. This culminates in the discovery of a giant glowing orb that floats in a bubble of writhing magic, at the opposite end of the room. It is pulsing and made of some strange, unknown material. Tolfdir is transfixed by this but averts his gaze when a ferocious-looking Draugr rises from his eternal throne chair. You're about to face the third brother, Jyrik Gauldurson!

Brother Battle: Jyrik Gauldurson

Jyrik Gauldurson is coursing with evil magic, and for the first ten seconds of the battle, he is utterly impervious to any attacks. Use this time to step behind cover or let any summoned creatures you may have conjured or Followers bear the brunt of his attacks. Eventually, Tolfdir realizes that all your combined offensive capabilities aren't having an effect, so he turns to the Eye and focuses his attacks on the crackling globe. A few seconds later, he yells that Jyrik is vulnerable. Attack!

To further complicate matters, Jyrik is bathed in an elemental shield that cycles through the different elements and is impervious to attacks from the same element. So, if he's bathed in fire, then any Flame-based spells have no effect on him. Use attacks from any other element instead. If you have only one type of elemental magic (i.e., only Fire), wait a few seconds until Jyrik's shielding changes elements, and then strike!

TIP Jyrik is extremely vulnerable to frost damage when he's on fire, and when encased in a frost shield, he's very vulnerable to fire. Use this to your advantage!

With Jyrik Gauldurson gurgling his last curse, turn your attention to his unique weapon, although not one he wields in the battle with you: the Staff of Jyrik Gauldurson, which lies on the altar in front of his throne. Grab it, and the other items of interest on his corpse:

- Gauldur Amulet Fragment
- Writ of Sealing
- Staff of Jyrik Gauldurson

As you might expect, his amulet fragment has a Fortify Magicka enchantment, while the Writ has a curse against him written upon it. Now use the Iron Door behind the orb to exit the chamber, which leads to a fern-filled grotto and an ancient Word Wall. Absorb the power before you exit back into the excavation site, releasing the portcullis with a wall handle and exiting Saarthal.

- Word of Power: Ice Form

❖ Be Defeated Here, Gauldurson Brothers!

With the three Amulet Fragments in your possession, all that remains is to return to Reachwater Rock and enter the long hall that was sealed when you first visited this tomb. (If this is your first visit, see above for directions to the cave.)

Puzzle Solution: Move the rings so the Hawk, Hawk, and Dragon appear on the outer, middle, and inner rings, respectively. Then take the Ivory Dragon Claw you found on Daynas Valen's corpse in Folgunthur, and insert it into the keyhole. Continue down the steps beyond and enter the Arch-Mage Gauldur's tomb. Approach the altar at the far (northwest) end of the elaborately constructed room. Here you'll find three Amulet Pedestals.

As you set the final Amulet Fragment down on the pedestal, three spectral forms congeal from the ether on an inaccessible balcony above you. The power of the Gauldurson Brothers is strong enough to defy death—twice! Now you must face Mikrul, Sigdis, and Jyrik again, only this time they attack one after the other!

Mikrul is the first to step forward, teleporting to the room's far end as sarcophagi burst open around him. His thralls are back, stronger than before and now fully armed. This time, your best bet is to avoid Mikrul and go after the thralls first; you don't want to be surrounded by weapon-swinging Draugr. Once you slay them, Mikrul should be easier to defeat. Again, you may be better off attacking him from range: That strategy is even more effective here, since you can leap across the gaps in the platforms, but he must walk around them. When Mikrul falls, he returns to the upper platform and drops to a knee.

Sigdis steps forward next, this time joined by three ghostly duplicates. Again, their helmets are a telltale clue: The real Sigdis has curled horns on his helmet, while the duplicates have vertical horns. Ignore the duplicates and crush Sigdis as quickly as you can.

Finally, Jyrik steps forward. He is not invincible here, but he's still a powerful sorcerer. At several points in the battle, he teleports away to regain a little composure before attacking again. Use the same strategies as before to target his elemental weaknesses and bring him down.

After you deliver the final blow to Jyrik, the three brothers regroup at the altar. Suddenly, the sarcophagus behind them opens. The brothers turn, Sigdis lets out a shout, and a brilliant blast of light wipes them from existence. When the dust settles, a spectral figure (could this be Gauldur?) appears and grants you what you seek: In a flash of light, the Amulet Fragments combine!

❖ OBJECTIVE: Take the Gauldur Amulet

Quest Conclusion

Claim the reforged amulet and wear it proudly—you've earned it. While you may never wield its unique abilities as the brothers once did, the amulet is still immensely powerful, fortifying your Health, Magicka, and Stamina all in one.

- Gauldur Amulet

Postquest Activities

After claiming the amulet, jump up to the high platform and inspect the newly opened sarcophagus. Search Gauldur's skeleton, and you can find a sizable gold reward as well.

MINOR SPOILERS

Enter the shrine and locate Eltrys, who is attempting a clandestine investigation of a conspiracy within the city. This isn't the first brazen killing by the Forsworn; indeed, the City Guard seem to be actively covering up this slaughter. Eltrys tasks you with finding out more information about the folks involved: the attacker, Weylin, and the victim, Margret. For further hints, ask Eltrys exhaustive questions about the Forsworn and those involved. For more motivation, Eltrys says he'll pay you handsomely for what you uncover.

Murder in the Marketplace

On your first visit to Markarth, just after you enter the entrance gate, you immediately hear a man shouting, "The Reach belongs to the Forsworn!" before he murders a market patron in cold blood. The Markarth City Guard quickly overpower and slay the maniac (watch your own sword swings if the lunatic turns on you, as you don't want to accidentally strike a Markarth inhabitant). You can quickly speak to the other traders, before a man named Eltrys approaches you. He surreptitiously hands you a note. Read it; he is requesting a meeting in the Shrine of Talos.

► Eltrys' Note

◆ OBJECTIVE: Read Eltrys' Note

◆ OBJECTIVE: Go to the Shrine of Talos

◆ TARGET: Shrine of Talos, in Markarth

Before the body of Margret—the woman who was cut down—is carried away for rites and burial, quickly check her corpse; you'll find a key that can come in handy.

► Key to Margret's Room

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find evidence about Margret

◆ TARGET: Silver-Blood Inn, in Markarth

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find evidence about Weylin

◆ TARGET: The Warrens, in Markarth

TIP You can undertake the following investigation in any order, and you can break off from one line of questioning to complete another. Each time your Quest Objective updates significantly, return to Eltrys (in the shrine) to inform him and receive a sizable reward (200 gold pieces each time).

TIP No Murder in the Marketplace: If you're quick, you can actually step in and kill Weylin before he has time to murder Margret. Should this occur, she offers the necklace she purchased just prior to being set upon as a way of thanking you. The quest continues with Eltrys handing you a note. Once you speak to him inside the Shrine of Talos, you can find Margret again (around the market or in the Silver-Blood Inn) and obtain more information about the attack, and why she is there.

Margret: Shadows Around Every Corner

Head into the Silver-Blood Inn, where Margret was staying, and have a quiet word with Kleppr the barkeep. Steer the conversation toward Margret, who Kleppr says prepaid an entire month's rent for the nicest room at the inn.

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Obtain the key to Margret's Room

◆ TARGET: Kleppr, in the Silver-Blood Inn, in Markarth

You obviously need to search Margret's Room, and for that you require a key or a Lockpick skill. There are various ways of entering Margret's Room:

Unlock the room using the key you uncovered from Margret's corpse, if you were quick-thinking at the start of this quest.

(Lockpick [Apprentice]) You can ignore Kleppr completely and—once the coast is clear—use Lockpicks to open the door.

(Persuade) You can sweet-talk Kleppr into giving you the key.

(Gold) Simple bribery does the trick, too.

(Intimidate) As does a not-so-veiled threat directed at the barkeep.

(Pickpocket) With an appropriate Pickpocket, you can ease the key into your possession.

➤ Key to Margret's Room

Inside Margret's Room, there's several trinkets to steal, but the real find is located inside the end table. Open it, and secure Margret's Journal.

➤ Margret's Journal

◆ OBJECTIVE: Read Margret's Journal

◆ TARGET: Margret's Room, Silver-Blood Inn, in Markarth

Open the journal: It seems Margret was an agent employed by General Tullius and was tasked to investigate the powerful Silver-Blood family, specifically Thonar Silver-Blood, the owner of Cidhna Mine. You have the information you seek; leave the inn. You're met outside by a city guard, who gives you what appears to be a threat if you continue poking your nose into the affairs of the Silver-Bloods.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find evidence about Thonar

◆ TARGET: The Treasury House, in Markarth

TIP You can complete all the investigations at once if you wish, although when you return from finding out more about Thonar or Nepos, a nasty fate has befallen Eltrys. Therefore, if you're after some coin for your troubles, complete the Weylin and Margret investigations first, turning them in before talking to Thonar or Nepos.

➤ Margret: The Spilling of Silver-Blood

Climb the hewn steps to the elaborate Treasury House, and enter. You're usually greeted by Rhiada, the Silver-Blood's maid, who challenges you on your antics after you ask to see Thonar. You can:

(Persuade) Pretend Thonar is expecting you.

(Bribe) Use some coin to win her over.

(Intimidate) Or attempt a fear-inducing utterance.

This allows you access into the dining room, where Thonar is usually eating. No matter your line of questioning, Thonar is the leader of this city, and he isn't happy at you butting into business that doesn't concern you. You're told to leave, just as you hear a commotion in an adjoining room. Thonar's servants, Donnel and Nana Ildene, reveal themselves to be Forsworn and have already killed Thonar's wife, Betrid, in cold blood! They now turn on you; defeat them both.

Thonar is shaken but ready to talk. He reveals he'd made a deal with the Forsworn. When the Nords conquered Markarth, Thonar spared King Madanach's life and locked him up in the Cidhna Mine. In exchange, the ousted king agreed to use his Forsworn to kill Thonar's enemies. But Thonar's grip on power is obviously slipping.

➤ Weylin: A Subsistence Existence

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Obtain the key to Weylin's room

◆ OBJECTIVE: Read Weylin's Note

◆ TARGET: (Optional) Garvey, and Weylin's Room, the Warrens, in Markarth

Weylin the murderer worked as a miner and lived in the grim underbelly of Markarth, in a place known as the Warrens. Journey here, and gain some further insight into Weylin's grim life. Start with the bullying foreman of the smelter, Mulush gro-Shugurz. He won't tell you what he knows; he doesn't care enough to be involved in Weylin's antics. React by leaving or by:

(Persuade) Saying he must know something.

(Bribe) Bribing him to reveal some information.

(Intimidate) Telling him he'd better start caring.

If you're successful, Mulush reveals Weylin was slipped a piece of paper the last time he was paid. Now move into the Warrens.

The second person to interview is Garvey, who runs the Warrens where the poor make their pitiful existence. He isn't keen on just handing over Weylin's key to you. You have the following options:

(Persuade) Tell him it is important.

(Bribe) Press some gold into his filthy hands.

(Intimidate) Inform him this wasn't a request; it was an order.

(Pickpocket) Display your impressive Pickpocket skills and take the key by stealthy means.

When you reach Weylin's room inside the Warrens, you'll notice it is locked (Very Easy). However, picking the lock simply raises the alarm and isn't recommended if anyone is watching. Neither is striking Garvey, who holds the key.

➤ Key to Weylin's Room

Once inside Weylin's room, steal from his chest. There isn't much to line your pockets with, but the chest does contain an important clue: Weylin's Note.

➤ Weylin's Note

Open the note, which contains the order for the assassination in the market. It is simply signed "N."

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find out who "N" is

◆ TARGET: Dryston, in Markarth

◆ Weylin: On the Nose

The moment you step outside from the Warrens, an armored man by the name of Dryston strides up to you and threatens to teach you a lesson. There's no way out of this brawl; expect a pummeling if you don't retaliate. After you punch him down, he squeals the name of his employer: the city's old administrator, Nepos the Nose.

Retaliate with your fists and beat Dryston to his knees. Do not use weapons or kill him; this causes mass hostility across Markarth!

CAUTION

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find evidence about Nepos

◆ TARGET: Nepos's House, in Markarth

TIP You should definitely catch up with Eltrys and secure some gold pieces before uncovering more of this conspiracy!

With Nepos's thug beaten into submission, ascend the steps to reach the administrator's house, and step inside. You're stalled by Uaile, Nepos's protective housekeeper. She refuses to let you speak with Nepos but relents when the old man beckons you to his hearth. Nepos is wizened, and he confesses to directing Weylin in the murder, under orders from Madanach, who he describes as the "King in Rags." Madanach used to rule Markarth before the Nords drove out the Forsworn. Somehow, he still commands the Forsworn. Nepos's servants think you've heard enough and attack you. Stay and fight, or flee the dwelling.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Eltrys

◆ TARGET: Shrine of Talos, in Markarth

Eltrys must be informed immediately! Unfortunately, as you enter the shrine and venture to his location, you see that Eltrys has been killed—almost certainly by the city guards milling about. Guards immediately accuse you of snooping and frame you for the recent murders, including that of Eltrys! You are to be banished to the Cidhna Mine. A place where no one escapes.

Quest Conclusion

Prior to Eltrys's demise, he rewards you with gold for your investigations of Weylin and Margret. Be sure to see him before your other investigations, or don't expect any coin!

◆ Imprisoned in a Forsaken Place

This quest does not commence if you're thrown into this mine due to your Crime level in the Reach!

CAUTION

◆ OBJECTIVE: Ask a prisoner about Madanach

◆ TARGET: Uraccen, in Cidhna Mine

You wake up to Urzoga gra-Shugurz shouting at you. He is the guard captain in charge of the prisoners in this mine, which is carved into the mountains of Markarth. Unlike prisons in other Hold Cities, you're expected to work, mining silver ore until you drop. You can reply with subservient or sarcastic remarks to Urzoga, before she opens up the cell door and you're allowed into the mine.

The quickest way to finding out more information about Madanach, who appears to run the prisoners on this side of the mine, is to speak with Uraccen. He's usually sitting by the campfire in the prison's middle chamber. You can make up whatever story you like about why you're here, and ask him about the prison's illicit Skooma trade, but be sure to ask him two important questions:

1. The location of Madanach. Unfortunately, nobody gets to speak with him without getting past Borkul the Beast. You may ask for more information about this Orc bodyguard, or step over to see him yourself.
2. Information on obtaining a Shiv a more subtle and cruel method of protecting yourself. A man named Grisvar has a spare one, if you're interested. This begins Side Quest: Grisvar's Shiv.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Get past Borkul the Beast

Borkul the Beast is standing guard by a locked gate close to the campfire. You can get on his good side by revealing your bloodlust, or offer a more measured response. When you ask to see Madanach, Borkul refuses until you pay the toll—a Shiv. You can:

Tell Borkul you don't have a Shiv. He suggests you get one. Complete Side Quest: Grisvar's Shiv from this point.

(Pickpocket) Use your impressive Pickpocket skill to pry Borkul's Key from his pocket without him knowing.

(Persuade) Tell Borkul that Madanach is expecting you.

(Brawl) Or offer to fight Borkul for access into Madanach's chamber. Fight the Orc, here by the campfire, and batter him with punches until he falls to his knees and tastes his own blood.

Once you succeed at any of these plans, Borkul hands over the key to Madanach's room, and you may progress.

➤ Borkul's Key

◆ Mining the Mind of Madanach

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Madanach

NOTE Forsworn or Nord Alliance: At this point, you can choose to side with Madanach, the leader of the Forsworn, against the Nords who have usurped his kingdom. Follow the quest sections marked with the alliance you wish to be associated with.

Forsworn Alliance: Madanach's Tasks

Forsworn Alliance: Open the barred door that Borkul was guarding, pass by a latrine and closed cell, and meet Madanach at his writing desk. He asks what it is that you want. You may answer in any way you wish, but Madanach points out that you are now a slave. The boot of the Nord steps on your throat. He mentions a man named Braig, who has been imprisoned almost as long as Madanach. You are to meet with him and ask why he's here. Madanach wants to know how widespread the injustice of Markarth really is. You can ask about the Forsworn and Thonar (the mine owner) before you leave.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Hear Braig's story

Search the mine's southern end for Braig, who greets you with a warning not to shiv him. Tell him Madanach has asked you to listen to his story, and he asks when you last had chains around your wrists. Answer him as you wish and again when he asks about your family. Then Braig tells of his daughter Aethra, an innocent caught up in recent entanglements when the Nords picked Braig up for being involved in the Forsworn uprising. Braig had only spoken to Madanach once,

SIDE QUEST: GRISVAR'S SHIV*

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Grisvar about getting a Shiv.

If you require a Shiv while in prison, head into the mine's southern part and hunt down Grisvar the Unlucky. He's here by the Jarl's request, due to his "problems." Ask for a Shiv, and he agrees—if you bring him back a bottle of Skooma from Duach.

Now head into the mine's north section and ask Duach about the Skooma. He isn't about to hand this over to just anyone, and your looks are beginning to annoy him. In that case, you should try:

(Persuade) Telling him you need the Skooma badly.

(Brawl) Demanding he hand the Skooma over and then fistfighting him for it. Remember, don't kill him!

When either of these plans is successful, you receive the Skooma from Duach.

➤ Skooma

Did you drink the Skooma before realizing you need to hand it to Grisvar? Then this quest fails!

CAUTION

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring Grisvar the Skooma

All that remains now is to return to Grisvar, hand him the Skooma, and accept a Shiv in return. You can use the Shiv to attack the prisoners (which is unwise, as they usually overwhelm you), or give it to Borkul the Beast if no other method of getting past him is working.

➤ Shiv

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

but that was enough for the Nords to execute her in front of him and throw him in this mine. You can ask Braig further questions, but this has satisfied Madanach's curiosity.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Madanach

Journey back to Madanach, who seems to have used Braig's story to drill into you the injustices of the Nords. Your responses can be sympathetic or accusatory, but if you are to escape, Madanach needs a show of loyalty from you. He certainly doesn't want a Shiv in the back during any planned breakout. He tells you to visit Grisvar the Unlucky—a thief and a snitch—and dispatch him so only prisoners loyal to Madanach remain.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Grisvar the Unlucky

You must kill Grisvar with your bare hands or with a Shiv if you previously received one from him. As he's the only prisoner not loyal to the Forsworn, he has to go. You can attack without even speaking to him, or tell him that Madanach says hello, which causes him to stand and fight for a bit, then flee. Hunt him down and kill him, again with a Shiv or your bare hands. Equip yourself with a Shiv from his corpse if you wish.

➤ Shiv

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Madanach

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Madanach

Your actions have proved to Madanach that you are one of them. He wishes you to accompany him so he can announce his plans to all his brothers. Follow Madanach into the main mine chamber with the campfire, where he informs his brethren that it is time to leave Cidhna Mine. There is a gate beside his quarters, and behind it is a tunnel. This leads right through the old Dwarven Ruins of Markarth and into the city. Duach, Odvan (the only prisoners you may not have met yet), and the others raucously approve.

Nord Alliance: Madanach's Death

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Madanach

◆ OBJECTIVE: Search Madanach's body

Nord Alliance: If you wish to side with the Nords and can't abide this Forsworn claptrap, you can ignore Madanach and instead begin to fight or pickpocket him. Killing him is obviously easier if you're carrying a Shiv rather than relying on your fists. Madanach is an accomplished mage, so this fight may be difficult to conclude in your favor. But if you do kill Madanach, you can skip any remaining conversations and search his body for the following important items:

➤ Madanach's Note ➤ Madanach's Key

The key unlocks the gate adjacent to Madanach's quarters, while the note informs you there's old Dwarven Ruins connecting this mine to Markarth, which is the only escape route. Time to earn an early pardon!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Escape Cidhna Mine

◆ TARGET: Markarth city exterior

▶ An Early Pardon

Whether you're fleeing with your Forsworn brothers or you've killed Madanach, stolen his key, and used it to open the gate beside Madanach's quarters, the time has come to leave. Maneuver down the tunnel to a gold door that opens into Markarth Ruins. Dash in a northeastern direction along the remains of stone steps and metallic walkways, and into a Frostbite Spider-infested stone corridor. Stand and fight, or run past these large arachnids. If the Forsworn are with you, attack the spiders as a team.

Continue into a tight connecting tunnel that opens into a large two-level corridor with winding pipes and more dwarven automatons at the far end of it. Venture forward, and they grind into life (depending on your level, these enemies could be spheres or a dreaded Centurion!). When the dwarven mechanical beasts finally topple, continue heading northeast, scrambling up the earthen tunnel toward a golden door.

Forsworn Alliance: The Forsworn stop at the base of the steps, where a woman named Kaie calls for Madanach, bringing him all the equipment you were stripped of when you entered Cidhna Mine. In addition, you are granted an ancient outfit of the Forsworn that is blessed with the old magicks. Then the Forsworn pour out of the ruins and into Markarth.

- Inventory Equipment
- Gauntlet of the Old Gods
- Armor of the Old Gods
- Helmet of the Old Gods
- Boots of the Old Gods

Nord Alliance: Head up the steps to the gold doors. Madanach's Key opens them and you stumble out of the ruins and into Markarth.

Quest Conclusion

Forsworn Alliance: Thonar Silver-Blood is waiting to greet Madanach as he exits the ruins. He isn't about to let the Forsworn escape from his prison, especially after what they did to his family. The quest ends with the Forsworn swarming Thonar and killing him.

Nord Alliance: Thonar Silver-Blood is waiting to greet you as you exit the ruins. He isn't about to let the person responsible for killing Madanach out of his jurisdiction without giving him some kind of reward, especially after the peace you brought to his family. The quest ends with Thonar handing you all your equipment back, as well as a special ring—one that a smith would cut off seven fingers for! Remain calm during this time too; if you side with the Nords but kill Thonar, you don't receive his ring.

- Inventory Equipment
- Silver-Blood Family Ring

Postquest Activities

If you sided with the Forsworn, they begin a bloody rampage through the city, eventually reaching the gates and fleeing to Druadach Redoubt deep in the Reach. If you helped them, the Forsworn in Druadach (and only at this location) will be friendly.

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Main

Quest: Bleak Falls Barrow

LOCATIONS: Bleak Falls Barrow, Riverwood

CHARACTERS: Camilla Valerius, Lucan Valerius

ENEMIES: Arvel the Swift, Bandits, Draugr, Frost Troll, Giant Frostbite Spider, Skeevers

◆ OBJECTIVES: Retrieve the Golden Claw, Cut Arvel down, Find the secret of Bleak Falls Barrow, Bring the claw to Lucan

MINOR SPOILERS

Pass through the spiderwebs, the burial urns, and the dead Skeeever, and engage another bandit on your way to a ceremonial entrance room. A portcullis blocks your path, and the lever nearby is currently inactive. In the alcoves to the left are a trio of three-sided pillars. Approach the first, and you'll notice they can be activated. Each side has a different animal carving: the Hawk, Whale, and Snake.

Puzzle Solution: Rotate the pillars so a Snake, Snake, and Whale face out. The carved Nord heads above the portcullis (and the fallen middle one) hold the answer in their maws.

Beneath the Barrow

Travel to Riverwood. You can overhear rumors about a recently robbed store; locate the Riverwood Trader. Inside, the proprietors Lucan and his sister, Camilla Valerius, are engaged in a heated discussion. It seems bandits have recently broken into their dried goods store and stolen a solid gold ornament in the shape of a dragon's claw. Offer your help to Lucan; the sibling bickering doesn't stop, but Camilla seems appeased and takes you out to the bridge on the edge of Riverwood.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Golden Claw

◆ TARGET: Golden Claw

TIP You can start this quest by simply adventuring into the Bleak Falls Barrow, without speaking to either Valerius sibling. You may also wish to cross-reference this quest with the Main Quest: Bleak Falls Barrow. Be on the lookout for a Dragonstone as you search.

Find your way up the mountain path north of Riverwood, passing the Riverwood Folly (where bandits roam), and to the summit, where the Nord tomb appears through the blizzard. Expect more bandit activity in this area. Locate the arched carved door leading into Bleak Falls Temple. Inside the first chamber, you hear two bandits speaking around a campfire talking about a Dark Elf heading farther into the Barrow. End their conversation swiftly before venturing down the stairs.

Descend the spiral steps beyond, battling a few Skeevers on your way. As the thick spider silk begins to cover the walls, you hear a voice up ahead and to your left. Cut through the doorway covered in webbing, and enter the lair of a Giant Frostbite Spider. Attack the arachnid before venturing toward the trussed-up Dark Elf: one of the bandits from the raiding party you slaughtered previously. This is Arvel the Swift, who is carrying the Golden Claw. He quickly tells you he knows how it works, how it fits into the door in the Hall of Stories. The bandit is babbling. But he needs cutting down first. Oblige him.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Cut Arvel down

◆ TARGET: Arvel the Swift

TIP Having trouble dispatching such a large arachnid? Then search for a Potion of Paralysis on a shelf in the hallway before the puzzle chamber and a Fireball Scroll on the table in the room just after you descend the spiral steps. Use these if you need to.

After a couple of weapon swipes (or magical blasts), Arvel's sticky prison gives way. He immediately flees, laughing that he won't be sharing his treasure with the likes of you. This is correct, but that's because you'll be taking him out—use a quick arrow or two in the back or other ranged attack—or letting the denizens who lurk deeper into this crypt deal with him.

It isn't wise to rush after Arvel; you'll soon catch up with him, and it is better to be prepared rather than rush headlong into an unknown chamber.

CAUTION

Follow Arvel's trail, passing through the crypt entrance and down into the catacombs. The swift soon meets the dead as Arvel falls under a flurry of Draugr attacks. The Nord undead now turn their attention to you. Battle them back using your combat mettle or run north toward the open spiked gate and pressure plate. Keep to the extreme left, and you can activate the swinging gate trap without being hit. Instead, use it as a skewering device against the Draugr. Then search Arvel. Among his belongings is the Golden Claw and the Dark Elf's journal. Read it for more clues on this Barrow's secret.

- Golden Claw
- Arvel's Journal

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the secret of Bleak Falls Barrow

◆ TARGET: Hall of Stories

You have Lucan's trinket, but don't return it until you completely reconnoiter this Barrow. Continue down, battling Draugr and searching corpses, both resting and animated, as you go. At the swinging blades, sprint forward the moment the closest blade swings past you. Brandish your weaponry, but don't be overzealous with fire in the passageway with puddles; this is actually oil leaking from a hanging lamp, and the corridor erupts if flames touch the ground; use this as a trap against your bony foes.

Eventually, you climb steps into a tall chamber with a waterfall and another Draugr. Although a treasure chest can be ransacked, the Barrow's secret lies past a portcullis above the rushing stream. Locate the chain next to the portcullis and activate it, before splashing down the stream and into a larger, curved cavern with an opening at the far end. Ready any ranged attacks you can muster; a Draugr (or if you're at higher levels, a Frost Troll) is pacing the snow bridge directly below the waterfall opening. Strike it with as many projectiles as you can to weaken it, then engage it in a fierce battle throughout this upper cavern and lower bridge. Flee to regain Stamina or Magick if necessary. Another option is to simply flee entirely, although you'll miss the scavenging on the curved path below the bridge. Here you'll find the body of Thomas. Follow the path around and into the illuminated entrance to Bleak Falls Sanctum.

Open the Sanctum doors, and weave your way to another bladed corridor. Coax the Draugr beyond into this trap, before dashing through it, into the Great Chamber. Expect attacks from Draugr bowmen on the bridge above, as well as melee strikes from the ground. You can drop oil lamps and burn the decaying flesh of these foes as you head up and over the bridge, to the Iron Door leading into the Hall of Stories. The Hall is a long corridor with intricately carved Nord stonework on either side and an ornate door at the far end.

Puzzle Solution: The door consists of three "rings" that rotate when you activate them. Each has three animals plated into the structure, while the central keyhole is unlocked using the Golden Claw. This puzzle is inaccessible without it, as the solution is on the palm of the Golden Claw. Rotate it in your inventory to see the three circular petroglyph carvings on the Claw's palm. Move the rings so the Bear, Moth, and Owl appear on the outer, middle, and inner rings, respectively. Then insert the Golden Claw into the keyhole.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring the claw to Lucan

◆ TARGET: Lucan Valerius

This reveals the Barrow's secret at last: a ceremonial burial grotto with waterfalls surrounding the long-forgotten chamber. Move to the carved stone center and check the chest. Scavenge what you need; then inspect the Word Wall, where you're granted a Word of Power! However, this stirs a high-level Draugr Lord from his rest, and you must defend yourself from this final Barrow guardian.

After the fight, inspect the Draugr's corpse; he is carrying a Dragonstone! Now take the staircase on the chamber's left side, activating the handle to raise a secret stone slab door out into an upper Barrow alcove, a ceremonial alcove, and an exit out into Skyrim.

Now it is a simple matter of returning the Golden Claw heirloom to Lucan to complete this quest.

MINOR SPOILERS

Siding with Saadia: Further Information

Whether you intend to side with Saadia or not, it is worth finding out more about this woman's predicament. Away from the main hearth of the place, Saadia pulls a knife and demands answers, but this is more in an act of desperation than violence. After answering her, she pleads with you to help her. Agree, or request a reward, and Saadia reveals she is a noble from Hammerfell who fled to Skyrim and has been forced into hiding after an attempt on her life. She says that her attackers are hired by a rival house to turn her blood into gold and drag her back to be executed.

Saadia wishes to hire you to drive the assassins out. Most of the Alik'r forces are mercenaries led by a man named Kematu. Remove him and the remaining forces are likely to scatter. You need to find the Alik'r hideout.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to the Alik'r Prisoner

◆ TARGET: Dragonsreach Dungeon, in Whiterun

A Wanted Woman

Once you've finished Main Quest: Dragon Rising and you enter the great city of Whiterun via the main gate, expect a commotion there. Cloaked Redguard warriors (who you find out are of the Alik'r Coterie) are in a heated discussion with the city guard. The Alik'r have already been banned from most of the city after an incident and jailing, but the men are determined to try and find a Redguard woman somewhere inside the walls. Speak to one of the Alik'r if you wish, or they stop and talk to you.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the Redguard woman

Siding with Saadia or the Alik'r: Base Location

If you spoke to Saadia, she will tell you the location of the Alik'r Prisoner: Speak to her to continue this quest. Then journey to Dragonsreach Dungeon, enter the cells, and speak to the Alik'r Prisoner through the bars. Ask about Kematu (which is possible only if you were told the leader's name in an earlier conversation). The prisoner will give up Kematu's whereabouts if you pay the fine for his release.

(100 Gold) Pay one of the guards the fine, and return to the cell to let the prisoner know. He then gives you instructions on the location of Kematu's base of operations. The guards intend to let the prisoner out "eventually."

TIP The other, less ingenious method of finding out where Kematu is located is to simply stumble across the Swindler's Den on your adventures, once this quest is active.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Kematu
OR

◆ OBJECTIVE: Inform the Alik'r of Saadia's location

◆ TARGET: Swindler's Den

Not Just a Pretty Face

Due west of Whiterun, among the great granite protrusions, is a den hewn into the dense rocky Tundra. Enter the Swindler's Den and bring your offensive combat to bear on the bandits lurking within. You must defeat (or sneak past) these thugs whether you intend to side with the assassins or not. Pass through the rocky crags into a waterlogged corridor, deep into the tunnel system. Kematu and his troops are waiting above you.

The woman in question is Saadia, who is a barmaid in the Bannered Mare. Enter this drinking establishment and let her know about the Alik'r warriors looking for Redguard women. Saadia appears agitated at this news and asks to speak to you privately.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Saadia

◆ TARGET: The Bannered Mare, in Whiterun
OR

◆ OBJECTIVE: Inform the Alik'r of Saadia's location

◆ TARGET: Redguard, on the road to or in Rorikstead

No matter who you've sided with previously, Kematu allows you to speak and question him. You can find out why Saadia is being hunted. According to Kematu, she betrayed her people and a Redguard city fell during the war, and the Redguard houses wish to bring her back alive to face justice. At this point, you have a pivotal choice to make: Kill Kematu or talk to him.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Kematu or talk to him

◆ TARGET: Swindler's Den

NOTE The more investigative of adventurers may wonder who is telling the truth: Kematu or Saadia. Alas, it is simply the word of one against another, and no firm evidence is ever found!

Siding with Saadia: Assassination!

If you are determined to save Saadia from the clutches of the Alik'r, you may attack them as soon as you can, or after another rather fruitless conversation with Kematu. Bring your best offensive weaponry to this slaughter! Gather any valuables you wish from the corpses, and then return to the Bannered Mare in Whiterun and inform Saadia of your success.

Siding with the Alik'r: A Wanted Woman

Speak again to Kematu, who informs you that his troops aren't assassins, but agents acting on behalf of Redguard Houses and ready to bring back a fugitive. Ask what they want you to do, and Kematu asks you to return to Saadia and convince her to meet you at the stables, where she'll be caught and brought to justice.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Lead Saadia to the Whiterun Stables

◆ TARGET: Saadia, the Bannered Mare, in Whiterun

Head back to the Bannered Mare and quickly speak with Saadia.

(Lie) Tell her you weren't able to defeat all the Alik'r forces, they are coming for her, and you have a horse ready for her.

Now exit Whiterun with Saadia following you. Move along the main cobbled road to Whiterun Stables and around to the side of the stable house, where Kematu is waiting for you both. He expertly immobilizes Saadia, and you may speak with him one final time to collect your reward.

Alternate Plans

At any point after speaking to Saadia, you can speak to the original Alik'r warriors you met at Whiterun's gate. They have moved to Rorikstead. Informing them that you've found Saadia completes the quest to the point where you're instructed to escort Saadia to the Whiterun Stables.

If you want to help Saadia but don't want to battle all of the Alik'r in Swindler's Den, there's always a cunning double cross you can pull (although the timing is difficult): Agree to help Kematu, and he'll appear in the stables alone, only after you've lied to Saadia and told her it is time to go. If you can kill Kematu before he paralyzes Saadia, she chastises you for using her as bait, but you can still claim the reward from her!

Quest Conclusion

If you slaughtered Kematu and saved Saadia, you receive the following:

➤ 500 gold pieces

If you sided with Kematu of the Alik'r, you receive the following:

➤ 500 gold pieces

Postquest Activities

If you helped Kematu capture Saadia, they are both gone the next time you return to Whiterun, and there is no further Alik'r presence in Skyrim. If you helped Saadia, she returns to her duties in the Bannered Mare, and no one is the wiser.

◆ OBJECTIVES: Defeat the Guardian Mudcrab, Defeat the Guardian Skeever, Defeat the Guardian Wolf, Return to Froki, Defeat the Guardian Bear, Defeat the Guardian Mammoth, Defeat the Sabre Cat, Return to Froki, Defeat the Guardian Troll, Return to Froki

Honoring the Old Ways

Nestled just below the snow line, high in the Jerall Mountains, Froki's Shack overlooks the southwestern rim of the Rift. Froki Whetted-Blade himself is usually inside his modest dwelling, with his grandson Haming. Judging by the animal heads festooned about the shack walls, Froki is something of a hunter. He is also somewhat mocking of the city dwellers and their new beliefs in the Divines. Not Froki; he believes in the Nordic gods of yore, especially Kyne the Blessed Warrior-Wife and widow of Shor, the mother of men and beasts. The Sacred Trials are named for her. Ask about the trials, and Froki explains this is an old Nord tradition: a test to prove your worth in the eyes of Kyne. Agree to begin the trials, and you are told to defeat the guardian beasts blessed by Kyne. Froki anoints you with the symbol of the Wolf, the Crab, and the Skeever. You can ask Froki for further information on the trials, his child, and the worship of Kyne, before the great hunt begins.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat the Guardian Mudcrab
- ◆ TARGET: Mudcrab Guardian Spirit, near Gjukur's Monument
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat the Guardian Skeever
- ◆ TARGET: Skeever Guardian Spirit, near Windward Ruins
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat the Guardian Wolf
- ◆ TARGET: Wolf Guardian Spirit, near Pinewatch

Defeat the following three Guardian animals in any order you wish.

◆ Sacred Trial: Parts I, II, III

Mudcrab Guardian Spirit: Find this spirit in the marshy ground between Gjukur's Monument and Broken Fang Cave. Expect Mudcrabs to scuttle in and attack as you deal with the Spirit.

Skeever Guardian Spirit:

Locate this spirit in the snowy cairn marking the entrance to Windward Ruins, just southwest of Dawnstar. Prepare for Skeever to nip at you as you defeat the spirit.

Wolf Guardian Spirit:

Search for this spirit close to Lake Ilinalta, just northwest of Pinewatch. Combat is likely to include dispatching wolves, and sometimes cave bears as you finish the spirit.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Froki

After you dispatch all three animal Guardian Spirits, return to Froki's Shack and speak to him. He softens his attitude to you slightly, realizing you're probably ready for a real challenge. He anoints you with the symbol of the Bear, Sabre Cat, and Mammoth. He warns you to tread carefully, as these are mighty beasts.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat the Guardian Bear
- ◆ TARGET: Ursine Guardian Spirit, near the Twilight Sepulcher
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat the Guardian Mammoth
- ◆ TARGET: Mammoth Guardian Spirit, Mammoth Graveyard, near Loreius Farm
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat the Sabre Cat
- ◆ TARGET: Sabre Cat Guardian Spirit, near Bleakcoast Cave

Defeat the following three Guardian animals in any order you wish.

◆ Sacred Trial: Parts IV, V, VI

Ursine Guardian Spirit:

Find this spirit in the copse of trees above the rocky terrain northeast of Twilight Sepulcher. Unlike the previous Guardian Spirits, the bear is usually encountered alone.

Mammoth Guardian Spirit:

Locate this spirit due west of Loreius Farm, north of Whiterun. Venture to the Mammoth's Graveyard (a Secondary Location), and slay this solitary spirit.

Sabre Cat Guardian Spirit:

Search for this spirit at the base of the glaciers along the icy shores of the Sea of Ghosts, just southwest of Bleakcoast Cave. Other wild animals are close, but not with this spirit.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Froki

Visit Froki's Shack once more, and inform the old man of your continued successes. You do Kyne proud, and only one challenge remains: to defeat the troll champion!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat the Guardian Troll

◆ TARGET: Guardian Troll Spirit, in Graywinter Watch

◆ Sacred Trial: Part VII

Guardian Troll Spirit:

Prepare for a battle with three trolls, taking all necessary equipment, provisions, and precautions before you travel to Graywinter Watch in the foothills east of Whiterun. Try attracting the trolls one at a time once you're inside the cave, backing out of the entrance if combat becomes too dangerous. Do not rest until the Guardian Troll Spirit falls back into the ether. Then search the location for an impressive bow:

► Froki's Bow

NOTE This bow can be taken whether this quest is active or not. Should you speak to Froki after obtaining this weapon, he permits you to keep it.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Froki

Quest Conclusion

Back at the shack for one final visit, inform Froki of your final triumph. He is pleased to call you a friend and that you finally know what it means to be a true hunter, in the Nordic tradition. For this, you earn an amulet imbued with the Blessing of Kyne.

► Kyne's Blessing (-10% damage taken from wild animals)

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Morthal, Alva's House, Highmoon Hall, Moorside Inn, Movarth's Lair, Hroggar's House, Morthal Cemetery

CHARACTERS: Alva, Helgi's Ghost, Hroggar, Jarl Idgrod Ravenchrone or Sorli the Builder, Jonna, Thonnir

ENEMIES: Frostbite Spider, Laelette the Vampire, Movarth Piquine, Vampire, Vampire's Thrall, Alva

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Talk to the Jarl, Investigate the burned house, Find Helgi after dark, Ask Thonnir about Laelette, Investigate Alva's house, (Optional) Tell the Jarl about Helgi, Show Alva's Journal to the Jarl, Kill the master vampire, Return to Morthal's Jarl

MINOR SPOILERS

This quest involves you finding clues to convict Hroggar or prove his innocence. Although the townsfolk aren't fond of the man for his wanton ways so soon after a tragedy, they are even less happy with you murdering him and his new lover. So don't, unless you want this quest to be much shorter, and failed.

CAUTION

The burned house is adjacent to the Moorside Inn. Head up the wooden steps and investigate the odd little glow in the corner. It turns out to be the spirit of the child who died in the fire, a girl named Helgi. The little mite is frightened and confused, but continue to ask her your preferred questions and she recalls the fire. She wants to know if you'll play with her. Agree, and she wants to play a game of hide-and-seek, but not until after dark. That's the time "the other one" comes out. She disappears before telling you anything else, although she seems afraid of this other entity.

Answers in the Ash

The Hold City of Morthal has more than swamp critter encroachment to worry about; there's rumor around these parts about one of the homes in the city burning to the ground. Suspicions are rife. Nobody is trustworthy, and two villagers are arguing with the city steward Aslfur as you arrive. You can converse with the townsfolk, but a more elaborate version of the rumor can be gained when you visit the Moorside Inn and speak to the barkeep Jonna. Ask her about the story behind the burned down house. She refers to it as Hroggar's house. It burned recently; the dying screams of his wife and child woke half the town. Now people fear the place, thinking it is cursed. Hroggar claims it started as a hearth fire. Some folks started a rumor that Hroggar was to blame, especially since he took up with a new woman named Alva the day after the fire. Jonna thinks the Jarl might even pay someone to get to the bottom of this.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to the Jarl

◆ TARGET: Jarl Idgrod Ravenchrone, inside Highmoon Hall, in Morthal

It's only a few steps across to Highmoon Hall, and a few more to reach Jarl Idgrod Ravenchrone (or Jarl Sorli if the Civil War has forced her from power), who is usually seated on her throne next to Aslfur, her husband and steward. Address the Jarl regarding the ruined house. She knows that Hroggar blames his wife for spilling bear fat in the fire, but most believe his lust for Alva resulted in the arson. Now with the rumors of the cursed dwelling, no one will touch the ashes. Except for you.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Investigate the burned house

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find Helgi after dark

◆ TARGET: Helgi's Ghost, graveyard in Morthal

Once darkness falls, after 8:00 p.m., journey to the western side of Morthal, to the small grave among the rocks with the coffin poking out. You won't have a quest target to it, but if you mention your conversation with Helgi to the Jarl, she can tell you where to look, which activates a quest target. Standing nearby is a woman. Laelette the Vampire comes at you with a vicious draining attack. Defeat her at once. Before she attacks you, she screams that Helgi is some kind of "reward." Slay her, and then inspect the child's coffin. Helgi's tiny voice tells you that Laelette was also playing this game, but she's glad you found her first. Helgi goes back to sleep in her ghostly world, leaving you to find Laelette's husband, Thonnir.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Ask Thonnir about Laelette

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Tell the Jarl about Helgi

◆ TARGET: Thonnir, in Morthal

A Morthal Enemy

Thonnir is an anxious-looking man who usually comes running to grieve over the dead body of his wife, Laelette, who vanished months ago. He had assumed his wife had joined the war effort. If you question Thonnir about his involvement in all of this, he tells you that Laelette and Alva (Hroggar's new lady) were good friends. Perhaps Alva is part of the arson?

◆ OBJECTIVE: Investigate Alva's house

◆ TARGET: Alva's House, in Morthal

Alva's house is one of the sturdy buildings of Nordic construction in Morthal. During the day, you may see Hroggar exiting the structure. You can tell him about Helgi's ghost or that Alva was the last person to see Laelette alive. Hroggar shows an amazing lack of compassion for his dead daughter and isn't too concerned about Laelette's fate, either. It seems the only way to gain more information is to search the dwelling. You can:

(Lockpick) Try the lock on the door to Alva's House (Adept) and pick it.

(Pickpocket) Or remove the key to Alva's House from Hroggar, ideally without being seen and fined by the Morthal Guards.

Once inside the residence, head down the stairs. During the day, you usually see Alva sleeping in the coffin. At night Hroggar might be sleeping in the bed upstairs. If she's awake, she viciously attacks you, revealing her vampiric nature to you. Bring her down if necessary, but don't leave the house without checking out her coffin. Alva's Journal is here and proves that Morthal is under attack from vampires under the command of a Vampire Lord named Movarth. But this isn't an assault using steel or spells; this is a subtle infiltration of the guards and residents, and Alva is one of the key succubi in this!

➤ Alva's House Key ➤ Alva's Journal

NOTE If you find Alva's Journal without killing her and show it to the Jarl, Alva flees town. She heads to a place of evil known as Movarth's Lair.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Show Alva's Journal to the Jarl

◆ TARGET: Highmoon Hall, in Morthal

Return to Highmoon Hall and approach the Jarl. Inform her that Alva is the murderer who set the fire. When you tell her Alva is a vampire, the Jarl understandably wants proof. After showing her Alva's Journal, the Jarl is both perturbed and in your debt, rewarding you with gold. Not wishing Morthal to become Movarth's feeding grounds once again after a hundred years of peace and quiet, Jarl asks whether you can clear out Movarth's lair and remove his presence for good this time. The townsfolk are assembling outside to help with this threat. This mob (which includes Thonnir) is yelling to slay the vampire and all his ilk. As soon as you move away from them, they head for Movarth's Lair.

➤ Leveled gold pieces

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the master vampire

◆ TARGET: Movarth, in Movarth's Lair

Massacring Movarth's Minions

Head north over the bridge and out of Morthal, with your weapon-wielding townsfolk following you. As you approach the lair, the residents' bravado begins to wane, and they falter, leaving only you and Thonnir to deal with the vampires. No matter; a more subtle approach (or coming in with a Follower or Thonnir, whom you can stop at the entrance if you wish to explore alone) is preferable anyway. Enter the cave and descend the curved earthen pathway down to an initial confrontation with Frostbite Spiders. Head through the small tunnel to the south, working your way into a long cavern with a Vampire's Thrall guarding a side tunnel. Slay the thrall before he assaults you. Then enter the side tunnel to the left (north), which leads to a foul-smelling chamber of corpses. A thrall is busily going over a dead villager's pockets. Dispatch this foe close to the mass grave. Take whatever stolen possessions you need, then exit to the north.

This passage leads around to either a ground tunnel or a wooden platform useful for long-range arrow or magical attacks or a place to retreat to. The main chamber is ahead of you, where two vampires, thralls, and Movarth Piquine reside. To stay alive, attack one at a time, coaxing foes into narrower tunnels instead of becoming surrounded. The vampires and Movarth are formidable opponents, so use your judgment and favored fighting implements to get the job done.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Morthal's Jarl

◆ TARGET: Jarl Idgrod Ravenchrone or Sorli the Builder, in Highmoon Hall, in Morthal

Quest Conclusion

With the vampiric threat over, feel free to explore the north chamber to grab Movarth's Boots (which add to your Sneak), and search the storage room with the Alchemy Lab and the connecting cavern. There's another thrall to optionally take down before the lair's chambers join, allowing you to head back up through the earthen entrance chamber, where a small ghostly figure thanks you for making her mother feel better. Back in Morthal, convene with the Jarl one final time, and tell her that the Master Vampire is dead. You are paid handsomely for your troubles and are congratulated by the Jarl and the townsfolk...who also take a rather large amount of credit for themselves.

➤ Movarth's Boots ➤ Leveled gold pieces

Postquest Activities

Veteran explorers may be interested to know that Movarth Piquine was previously seen as a character from the book Immortal Blood that appeared during adventures in Oblivion. In this book, he is a man betrayed by a vampire.

MINOR SPOILERS

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Jaree-Ra

◆ TARGET: Jaree-Ra, near the East Empire Company Warehouse

Scuttled and Plundered!

Find Jaree-Ra on the docks outside the East Empire Company Warehouse. Speak to him: Your actions have already caused the Icerunner to run aground on the shoals across the bay. Jaree-Ra has already dispatched his sister and his gang, the Blackblood Marauders, to strip the ship of valuables. You are to join them.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find Deeja at the Wreck of the Icerunner

◆ TARGET: Deeja, inside the Wreck of the Icerunner

TIP The Icerunner runs aground only during this quest; you cannot stumble upon it until you have extinguished the beacon for Jaree-Ra.

Snuffing the Lights of Solitude

When you visit Solitude, be on the lookout for a shady Argonian character who usually lurks outside of Angeline's Aromatics, close to one of the city gates. He sometimes beckons you over. Step up to him and ask what he wants. He explains that he and his sister Deeja are treasure hunters. With the advent of the war, and as Solitude is one of the Empire's major ports, the Solitude Lighthouse serves a vital purpose keeping ships safe in the treacherous waters of the Northern Coast. Now, if the lighthouse went dark, one of the cargo ships that Jaree-Ra has had his eye on—the Icerunner—could run aground and yield some sizable plunder. Are you in?

If you are, agree to put out the lighthouse fire. You can also ask about the ship's crew or turn him over to the guards, but neither helps your success with this quest.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Put out the fire in Solitude Lighthouse

◆ TARGET: The top of Solitude Lighthouse

Beyond the giant arch of Solitude on the cusp of the Northern Coast is the Solitude Lighthouse. Climb the stairs in the exterior, being careful not to alert the lighthouse keeper, Ma'zaka. Although he sometimes confines himself inside his quarters within the Lighthouse, he may be wandering the building. Simply avoid him, or if you encounter Ma'zaka, kill him or sneak up the tower so you're not spotted. Ma'zaka won't spot that the Lighthouse fire is out until it is too late and the ship Jaree-Ra was eyeing runs aground. Once atop the Lighthouse tower, snuff the flames (there isn't any special equipment needed for this).

You can wade, swim, or Fast-Travel to a nearby location and clamber across the rugged terrain to the ship that has scraped the jagged rocks along the coast. As you draw near, you can see Blackblood Marauders are already stripping the cargo from the vessel. The corpses suggest that the ship's former crew have already been dealt with.

You can talk to one of the Marauders, who tells you Deeja is expecting you down in the hold of the ship. Enter the ship, and head south along the main corridor, opening the second door on your left. Wind your way down the steps to the waterlogged hold. Now head north to a storage alcove where Deeja is checking the contents of a large treasure chest.

Deeja says she's supposed to give you a cut of the loot. But as most of the loot has already been moved, she has another offering: a quick death!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat Deeja

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find out where Jaree-Ra's bandits took the loot

The Argonian shouldn't be too terrifying an opponent for you; quickly cut her down and then search her still-twitching corpse. The note from Jaree-Ra refers to both the "fool who did our work at the lighthouse" and the location of the plundered loot: Broken Oar Grotto. Battle the remaining Blackblood Marauders who attempt to halt your progress from the Icerunner, and fight your way onto the exterior deck; expect to dispatch about five before the ship is empty of double-crossing cutthroats!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Travel to Broken Oar Grotto

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat Jaree-Ra

◆ TARGET: Broken Oar Grotto

When you get back outside, you'll notice that the rowboats loaded up with loot are already gone, as are most of the Marauders. Only one remains on the shore, with the boat that would have carried the last few stragglers away. Deal with him.

TIP An Alternate Path—Violence Is Golden: Did you suspect something was amiss when you arrived on the Icerunner's deck? Couldn't keep your hands off the rowboats loaded with treasure, could you? Or did you "accidentally" impale one of the Marauders on your blade? Then there's an alternate method of continuing: If you attack any Marauders or steal any of their loot, all the folks on the Icerunner turn hostile. You'll have to fight your way down to Deeja to claim the note from her corpse to continue this quest! The best part of this plan is that although you have a harder fight on your hands, your reward is greater, as the Marauders never leave with the loot, so you can claim it for yourself, either now or once the quest concludes!

Seeing the Light

Optimally Fast-Travel to Solitude Lighthouse and walk west along the Northern Coast, as the Broken Oar Grotto is nearby. There's a scuttled boat and two recently moored rowboats at the entrance. Enter the smuggler's hideout, fashioned from wood and cavern pathways, and maneuver through this large and looming place. Prepare for protracted combat at long and short ranges with Blackblood Marauders.

TIP Remember to locate the levers to lower the bridge sections to make your traversing a little easier. There are occasional oil lamps to strike and cause a ground fire, too. Better yet, simply submerge yourself and swim along the inlet (ideally while shrouding yourself using magic) to reach the rickety unloading building at the grotto's far end.

Farther into the grotto, Marauders guard a rickety building used for unloading ill-gotten gains. The end of the grotto, where a sunken ship decomposes in the turquoise water, is where Jaree-Ra is counting his loot. Battle up the wooden ramps to the top of the dock structure, and slay the dishonorable lizard with whatever death-dealing implements you consider most suitable. Then scour the Broken Oar Grotto for any remaining foes and any valuables you can scavenge.

TIP Fallen into the water? Then use the half-submerged jetty steps throughout this grotto to reach dry land. Fighting foes? Then utilize the jagged rock walls and passageways to hide in, if you're becoming overwhelmed.

Quest Conclusion

Consult the Atlas chapter for any valuables you can scavenge from the Wreck of the Icerunner or Broken Oar Grotto. Expect no other rewards.

THE AETHERIUM WARS: BOOK NOW TO AVOID DISAPPOINTMENT

The book you're interested in looks like this. You can find 24 copies in fixed locations across Skyrim, although the book may also appear at random on bookshelves or in containers. The three easiest locations to try are:

Volkihar Keep (Haafingar Hold): On a small table, on the library balcony overlooking the main banquet chamber.

Dragonsreach (Whiterun Hold): On the bookshelf, inside Farengar's small antechamber study.

Fort Dawnguard (the Rift): On a corner bookshelf in the barracks room.

► The Aetherium Wars

NOTE Below is one of the paths you might take through this quest. There is no "correct" order for the places you visit (aside from the last one), but this route allows you to see all the locations in a logical progression, with minimal back-and-forth traveling.

◆ In Preparation

You can start this quest in several different ways. There's no "optimal" way to begin, and you're most likely to simply stumble across it somewhere as part of your adventure. Here are the methods of learning about this quest:

1. Read a copy of a book called The Aetherium Wars, which starts the Miscellaneous Objective: Investigate the ruins of Arkngthamz.
2. Visit one of three Dwarven Ruins (Deep Folk Crossing, Raldbthar, or Mzulft), and find an Aetherium Shard without the knowledge gleaned from the book. The shard is initially known as a Glowing Crystal Shard, and once it is in your possession, you're prompted to locate a copy of The Aetherium Wars, which appears on your compass.

◆ OBJECTIVE (MISCELLANEOUS): Identify the Crystal Shard

◆ TARGET: The Aetherium Wars, located nearby

Find the book (usually on the corpse of an adventurer), and the objective updates.

◆ OBJECTIVE (MISCELLANEOUS): Investigate the ruins of Arkngthamz

◆ TARGET: Arkngthamz, the Reach

3. Or, visit the Dwarven Ruin Arkngthamz, gain entry, and speak to Katria directly. Optionally, you can secure (and read) a copy of the book from her corpse, as detailed later to this quest.

◆ Adventuring to Arkngthamz

Arkngthamz is a previously hidden Dwarven ruin located in the Reach. It is just southeast of the Orc Stronghold Dushnikh Yal, and also a short romp south from Reachwind Eyrie. As you approach its ancient exterior steps, you feel a slight vibration, an earthquake from down below. Push the imposing Dwarven doors open, and enter this ancient city.

A massive earthquake has recently decimated the ancient caverns and reinforcing structures. As you press forward, you must cross a fallen pillar over a fast-flowing stream. Continue down the hall, and listen carefully as a ghostly voice urges you to flee from this dangerous place. Moments later, as you emerge into the gigantic entry chamber, a pillar topples into the great watery chasm below. Stop for a moment, as a spectral entity named Katria approaches you.

Listen to Katria as she asks why you're here—though she can already tell: You're after the treasure, just like all the others. If you've read The Aetherium Wars, you may recognize her name from the book's dedication. Ask her about it to learn a bit more of her history with the book's author. You can also ask about the treasure itself, which prompts her to explain her search for the Aetherium Forge and how she ended up here. She again asks you to turn back. You can:

(Persuade) Tell her you can handle yourself

Answer in any other way you wish

Ignore Katria completely.

When you make it clear that you intend to press on, she offers to accompany you. You can accept or decline this offer.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Reach the summit of Arkngthamz
 ◆ TARGET: Tonal Lock Chamber, Arkngthamz Summit

TIP Take her up on it! Katria is an accomplished archer and close-quarters specialist, and she's lost none of her prowess, despite her ethereal state. She also has a wide range of helpful commentary as you make your way through the ruins, from warning you of danger to pointing out hard-to-find treasure. Better yet, she won't replace your current follower (if any), so you have nothing to lose.

Shard 1: Arkngthamz Ascent

Approach the chasm, which has telltale signs of Falmer camps on the opposite side. For the moment, however, peer down over the precipice, to a fallen pillar that leads to a small island attached to a series of steaming pipes jutting out of the cliff wall opposite. Carefully climb down the pillar to the island and inspect the body you find there. This turns out to be Katria's corpse. Look up and you'll see she had quite the fall. She recommends you search her body for the journal she was keeping; she knows you're going to need it. Grab any other items she was carrying if you need them.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: [Optional] Retrieve Katria's Journal
 ◆ TARGET: Katria's corpse

► Katria's Journal

Cross into the pipe vent tunnel, and make your way along as the entire structure continues to vibrate. Bring down a couple of Dwarven Spiders, then use the snaking golden pipe to navigate above the water-logged chamber and down past the metal fence. At the far end of the sagging corridor is a strange spinning device, which periodically rotates up and down, triggering the gate in front of you to open and close. Enter the cog room where Katria explains that these are Kinetic Resonators. When they're working properly, they trigger a mechanism nearby. To proceed, strike the second resonator (either with a bash or an arrow) and the nearby gate swings open. Onward!

Head southeast up the steps and around the corner to your first combat with the Falmer. There are two atop the steps and another lurking on this side of the pillared chasm. Cross the ground heading southeast, as another pillar crumbles under a fierce tremor. The pathway narrows to a snaking route across each side of the narrowing chasm. There is a Falmer to thwart on a high ridge opposite and two to tackle as they drop from their nests.

- TIP Check the pathways all around and above you; occasionally there are Falmer you can strike from a long distance.

After the Falmer nests embedded in the chasm wall, there's a fallen pillar bridge to head over. However, if you inspect the sealed door to your left (south), Katria remarks that it's sealed tight. She's correct, although to open the chest behind the door, you can utilize the instability of this environment to your advantage. Head west to the cliff edge, looking down at the pile of pipes and giant carved dwarven head. Drop down to the riverbank, turn south, and trek up an inlet stream tunnel. This leads to the half-fallen rear of the chamber behind the door. Expect Dwarven Sphere combat before working your way around and to the east, to the chest. Use the lever to open the door from the chamber, and step back out onto the fallen pillar bridge.

Cross the fallen pillar, then turn left (west) and head farther along the ledge as more of the rock wall detaches and plummets into the river below. Continue up the chasm ledges to a large grotto with several cascading waterfalls and a natural bridge spanning the chasm. Engage a couple of Falmer and a Chaurus, then head across the bridge, along a small winding tunnel to a Falmer hut and two more enemies. When they're both nullified, you have a choice of paths. The main route continues behind the hut, to your right (north).

However, there's a side tunnel to the southwest. Head up the narrow tunnel, face some more Chaurus in combat, and climb up the ledges leading to a tunnel stream. This brings you out among the grotto waterfalls. Watch your step! Tackle the Falmer that drops down on the narrow ledge with the chest to your left (north), loot the chest, then take the plunge: dive into the water here and look for an underwater tunnel that leads to a cavern with a chest. Then retrace your steps back to the hut room.

From the room with the hut, continue up the path on the right (north) to emerge into a large cavern dotted with pine trees. The sky of the Reach is visible above, while a gaping hole in the floor overlooks the chasm you crossed earlier. As the ground shakes, Katria remarks that her trusty bow, Zephyr, is lying on the log protruding halfway out above the increasingly deep chasm. She suggests you retrieve it. Carefully inch out onto the log, optionally crouching so you don't make any fast movements and fall, and grab the bow. Return to the relative safety of the ledge. Katria hopes you'll take good care of her beloved weapon.

► Zephyr

Look for the tunnel to the east. Follow it around to the north, and it opens out at the spectacular summit and the Tonal Lock Chamber. Descend under the dwarven arches, to a relatively flat lower area with a variety of crumbling masonry and scattered skeletal remains. Katria informs you that she mentioned "one more danger," and this is it: the Tonal Lock wall in front of you. She motions to the five resonators and tells you that hitting them (with an arrow) in the right order allows the doors to open. Get the order wrong, and you'll need to prepare for an earthquake...or worse.

NOTE If you haven't met Katria yet, or refused her help earlier, she appears at this point and explains her current predicament. Which is also now yours.

TIP Before you leave, pick up and read Katria's Journal, if you haven't already. Otherwise, the quest targets won't even appear on your compass.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Solve the Tonal Lock

Puzzle Solution: There are five resonators that make up the Tonal Lock. Bring out your favored bow (or Zephyr), utilize the scattered arrows on the ground if you run out of ammunition, and figure out the correct order to hit each resonator. There are two clues to help you:

The first clue is the correct listing of the first two resonators to hit. This is the sketch on the last page of Katria's Journal, which you found on her corpse earlier in the dungeon.

The second clue is on the corpse of the only non-skeletal Adventurer lying on the ground near your feet. Search him for a Scrap of Paper, which correctly lists the second and third resonator. Now take careful aim...

It's a great idea to save your game before hitting any resonators. If you strike them in the wrong order, the dwarven head above the lock glows red, and something untoward occurs: The first failure causes Dwarven Spiders to emerge; fend them off before trying again. The second failure results in the appearance of Dwarven Spheres, while the third failure fires the ballistae, and the fourth causes the Dwarven Centurion behind the middle door to clank into life! Keep failing, and the ballistae keep firing. If you're still having problems, listen for Katria's hints.

CAUTION

◆ OBJECTIVE: Claim the treasure of Arkngthamz

Step through either the left or right open door, and around to the treasure room beyond. In front of the embedded dwarven chest is an Aetherium Shard. Pick it up, along with any other dwarven valuables you wish to gather.

➤ Aetherium Shard (1 of 4)

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Katria

Katria is surprised that the Aetherium Shard is indeed real. She remarks that another piece, around the same size, would snap into place next to this one. So it seems there is more than one shard to find. In fact, she surmises there are three more, one for each of the cities that worked on the fabled Aetherium Forge. Together, they form the key needed to unlock the Forge. As your quest updates, she tells you to check her journal, which has more information on the places to look and reveals the location of the Forge. At this point, Katria disappears.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Search for the Aetherium Shards (4)

◆ TARGET: Deep Folk Crossing (the Reach), Raldbthar (Winterhold Hold), and Mzulft (Eastmarch)

Exit the ruins of Arkngthamz by either retracing your steps or, better yet, by looking for the waterlogged tunnel in the western wall of the Tonal Lock chamber. Follow the tunnel to a frighteningly high drop down to the initial waterlogged chamber, and then dive off into the water below. Make sure you hit the river and not something solid, or this turns into a death plummet! Clamber back onto the small island where Katria's corpse is, then leave the same way you came in.

NOTE So where are the other shards? Depending on how thorough you've been in your exploration, you may have quest targets to none, one, two, or all three of them. You receive a quest target only after you've read Katria's journal and visited the location described by the journal. So you may well have quest targets to the shard in Raldbthar (the dungeon for Dark Brotherhood Quest: Mourning Never Comes) or Mzulft (for The College of Winterhold Quest: Revealing the Unseen), but you'll likely need to find at least Deep Folk Crossing by following the journal's map and clues.

Shard 2: Deep Folk Crossing

According to Katria's Journal, the second city is mentioned as "Bthar-zel" (which is Dwarven for "allied city"). It isn't Bthardamz but a smaller site north or northwest of there, on the river. The location is known colloquially as Deep Folk Crossing in the Reach and is a previously discoverable location. Head north from Bthardamz and locate the rushing river. Use the crossing bridge, heading north up the embankment on the other side, and pry the Aetherium Shard from its encasing. Katria appears to congratulate you before disappearing again. That was curiously straightforward....

Shard 3: Raldbthar

Katria has listed the third shard as being hidden at the primary source of Aetherium and "extracted from some deeper mine." As this material has long since vanished from Tamriel, all you have to go on is Katria's scrawled map.

Look carefully, as the number 3 is written just south of Lake Yorgrim. There are two previously discoverable Dwarven cities in these parts: Irkngthand and Raldbthar. Choose the latter, entering the ruins via one of three possible locations:

Enter from the Raldbthar elevator, if you've explored Raldbthar already.

Enter from Blackreach, if you've explored it already.

Or, you can clamber up the steep steps to quickly remove the local bandit population. Then enter the ruins via the main doors.

If this is your first time adventuring in Raldbthar, head down the slope to the fire trap, and dodge around the side corridor to the left (southeast), killing bandits as you go. At the end of the southwest corridor, you can unlock a gate [Master], allowing you to sneak around and strike three bandits from above with arrows or the dwarven ballista. Or you can head right and tackle three bandits around the campfire from the ground. Open the gate that's in the left (south) corner near the roasting fire, take down another bandit, and open the dwarven doors to the southwest.

Expect Dwarven Spiders and Spheres as you continue through another door, heading southwest to a left turn and a spinning blade trap. Navigate these rooms, watching for spilled oil as you head up through a pipe room with more automatons to dismantle. Locate the elevator and pull the switch, descending into a Falmer hive.

Dodge the spinning blade on the next slope, and the air fills with a strange mist. Bring down Falmer in or near their huts before rushing the steps to the northwest. Head up to the second floor, delivering death to more Falmer. Cross a small bridge to the northeast, en route to finding a button on a curved stone table in one corner of this upper level. This lowers a bridge to the southwest, allowing you to head across the rooftops above the first Falmer chamber, around a golden fence, through a door, and down into a pipe-filled steam room.

Watch for two pressure plates that set off crushing traps. Work through the automatons, heading north and then west, through a door and up a ramp to a corridor with four buttons to try. Ignore the other buttons and simply press the third one from the left; this one doesn't launch a trap. Pass the lowered bars, through the gate, and into another Falmer camp. After defeating all of the undesirables, inspect the grinding cogs close to the raised bridge. Four cogs have been jammed with bones or other implements, and they need to be released so both lamps to either side of the bridge button are lit. Find the following cogs:

Cog #1: Bone leg jammed into it. In front of the bridge, to the right (north) side, on a small lamp pillar.

Cog #2: Skull jammed into it. On the left (south) side of the water pool, attached to the perimeter wall.

Cog #3: Human spine jammed into it. On the right (north) side of the water pool, attached to the perimeter wall.

Cog #4: Dwarven Scrap jammed into it. In the pool underwater, below the button and section of bridge.

Return to the bridge and hit the button, but be prepared for combat with a Dwarven Centurion as the bridge connects and the door in the far wall opens. Head through, using the wall lever to drop the bars, and enter the inner chamber. As you enter, Katria appears to assist you in fighting off a swarm of automatons. Dispatch them, then claim the shard at the end of the nearby hall.

TIP When leaving Raldbthar, exit via the lift in case you wish to quickly return here in the future. If you have the Attunement Sphere (from Daedric Quest: Discerning the Transmundane), you may wish to use it to activate the mechanism in this room so you can descend into Blackreach from here as well.

▶ Shard 4: Mzulft

Katria's Journal mentions the final location as a storage site for raw Aetherium, just outside a Dwarven city. The city in question is Mzulft, on the far eastern edge of Eastmarch Hold. Mzulft is a previously discoverable location, but unlike the trek through Raldbthar, you don't need to enter the city itself. Instead, follow the journal's lead to search "just outside" the city, and enter the Dwarven Storeroom structure nearby.

Katria is already inside, wondering how best to break through the locked door. You have two choices:

Approach the gate [Expert], and pick the lock.

Locate the metal door to the right of it [Apprentice], open that, and then the second door [Apprentice] in the storage area beyond. Both allow you access into the shard storage area, where the final piece of this puzzle is found. Katria is elated and vanishes once again, heading for the Forge.

➤ Aetherium Shard (4 of 4)

◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate the Aetherium Forge

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Katria

◆ TARGET: Ruins of Bthalf, the Rift

▶ Forging Ahead: Ruins of Bthalf

Of course, you must utilize your cartographical skills and figure out from the Journal that the Forge seems to be below the Ruins of Bthalf, south of Lake Geir, just off the main east-west road from Ivarstead to Riften.

When you reach the ruins, Katria is likely to be fending off bandits or other unfortunate fodder for your weapons. She urges you to inspect the strange device on the circle of flagstones. The gear in the middle of the device seems to fit the shards. Why not try it out?

◆ OBJECTIVE: Place the Aetherium Shards

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Aetherium Crest

◆ OBJECTIVE: Stand Clear

After slotting in all four shards (which you can do one at a time, if you're not attempting this quest in any kind of succinct order)...nothing happens. Katria reckons you should retrieve the shards, which appear to have fused into some kind of crest. Yep! That seems to do the trick!

➤ Aetherium Crest

The ground beneath you rumbles violently as the device and the flagstones shift and ascend into the sky, forming the roof of a giant, circular tower and elevator entrance! This must be the entrance to the Forge. Head inside and pull the lever when you're ready.

TIP Preparation for Battle: Come prepared! Health, Magicka, and Stamina Potions are vital when you face the final entity deep within the bowels of the Rift. You should also bring Fire Resistance potions; they are especially useful here.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the Aetherium Forge

Footfalls after Four Thousand Years

When you reach the bottom, Katria mentions that the ride down took longer than normal. Just how deep are you? Follow the pathway, and continue into a gigantic subterranean chamber, even after the lanterns flicker on automatically. Head across the connecting bridges and up the stone steps to the top of this massive forge entrance. Beyond the tree are two resonators. Aim and hit both of them (the order doesn't matter) to open the door. Then head down the slope, as the air becomes more acrid. Open the door to the south, and enter the Aetherium Forge.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Shut off the steam

With its ornate forge powered by the lava fires of Tamriel, this marvel of ancient technology is currently choked with harmful steam. Using the two steam valves on both of the raised platforms disperses the steam, allowing you to investigate the forge. But your investigation is interrupted by a familiar clanking. The guardians of the forge have appeared!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat the Guardians of the Forge
◆ TARGET: Dwarven Spiders, Spheres, and the Forgemaster

Facing the Forgemaster

You're now locked in battle with the Guardians of the Forge. Below is advice on defeating them.

Initially, you're swarmed by a wave of Dwarven Spiders from the hatches on the lower grating level. These are followed by a wave of Dwarven Spheres from the upper hallways, along with additional Spiders. Prepare yourself for these waves with the weapons you choose, the incantations you prep, and the direction you're facing. Expect between four and six foes in each wave.

Be fleet of foot! Staying mobile, leaping from the upper platform near the valves, and sprinting across the lower grating allows you to outpace your enemies and swing around and prepare combat, potions, or ranged attacks more easily.

Don't get surrounded! Move to the opposite side of the chamber, leaving your foes trailing behind, and deal with them one at a time.

Beware of dead ends! Stay on either of the valve platforms, or the grating, and don't head up the passages where the foes appear, the alcoves to the sides of the grating, or down toward the lava; these are dead ends. If you make this mistake, expect to be overwhelmed easily.

It is worth turning the steam off when prompted, as it allows you to move around the chamber more freely. Do this as soon as you have an opportunity. Unlike you, the automatons aren't hurt or hindered by the steam.

In either the initial waves or the final battle, if you're close to death or having extreme difficulty in combat, step back and let Katria take most of the damage. Even if her ghost is snuffed out, she reforms moments later, none the worse for wear.

If you survive the initial waves, the Forgemaster clambers up out of the lava pool to one side of the forge. Check the compass so you know which side he's coming from.

As the Forgemaster emerges, you may wish to bombard him with long-range attacks, especially if you're hidden and can claim sneak bonuses.

Just before combat begins, it is most wise to consume your very best Fire Resistance potions. The steam also blasts forth again, so be sure to turn it off just like before, if you're set on rushing out to combat him, as you'll be damaged by the steam as well.

The Forgemaster is a unique Dwemer Automaton and glows red with heat. It is immune to fire but weak against frost. Frost spells and frost-enchanted weapons deal significant damage against him.

After emerging, the Forgemaster spends the first part of the battle close to the center of the chamber, alternating his Fire Breath and Fireball bellowing. Keep your distance, using ranged attacks or spells, and utilize the room's pillars for cover.

Once damaged below 50 percent, the Forgemaster tends to battle more aggressively, and actively searches for and attacks you. Also expect to feel the beast's two hammer arms if you try to engage in close combat. Once again, ranged attacks are safer.

If you're sure you want to face the Forgemaster in melee combat, be aware that he is constantly bathed in a Flame Cloak, so simply standing close to him is damaging to you!

Beware! That lava is as deadly as it looks!

CAUTION

Quest Conclusion

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Katria
◆ OBJECTIVE: [Optional] Search for crafting materials
◆ OBJECTIVE: Use the Aetherium Forge

Once the Forgemaster finally topples, speak to Katria once more. She wants to confirm this is the real Aetherium Forge, and you're the smith to test it out! After optionally opening a dwarven chest in a nearby alcove, which contains the other necessary materials you need to craft a particularly impressive item from the Aetherium Crest you're carrying, approach the forge. You have a choice of three items and can craft only one.

Once the item has been forged, Katria seems satisfied that the quest she undertook in both life and death has been completed. She leaves you, and the quest completes.

Postquest Activities

Aside from utilizing your newly crafted item, the Wilderness Encounter: Taron Dreth (see page 682) may randomly occur. Here you meet Katria's treacherous former apprentice!

NOTE The Forgemaster (a giant, fire-breathing dwemer automaton) and the Forgemaster's Fingers (a pair of enchanted gauntlets prized by orcs) don't seem to be directly related to one another. However, some scholars have hinted that the Forgemaster may have been referenced into Orcish lore and legend....

AETHERIUM FORGE: CRAFTING TIPS

There are three items you can craft at the Aetherium Forge but only enough Aetherium to make one of them. It is therefore wise to figure out which item you value the most. Also, remember that you keep anything you don't forge: If none of them are of interest, you might think to craft the crown (as it has the highest value), but that's a mistake, as it requires two Flawless Sapphires (worth 1,000 gold) to make. Instead, pocket the Sapphires and craft one of the other items.

Katria's suspicions are also correct: There isn't any more Aetherium in Skyrim.

Aetherial Crown

Retains the last Standing Stone ability you held, granting you its effects in addition to those of your current Stone.

The Aetherial Crown is the most versatile of the three items, and potentially the most powerful, but it also requires an investment on your part—it doesn't do anything by itself; you must track down the standing stones you want to empower it with.

The Crown also occupies your head armor slot, preventing you from wearing another helmet or a complete set of either light or heavy armor.

The skill improvement stones (Warrior, Mage, Thief, and Lover) are compatible with one another, and their abilities stack. So if you take both the Warrior Stone and the Lover Stone, your combat skills will increase 35 percent faster, and your magic and stealth skills increase 15 percent faster.

The Lord and Lady Stones make a good defensive combination, giving you 50 Armor, 25 percent Magic Resistance, and 25 percent faster Health and Stamina regen. If you use Heavy Armor, take the Steed Stone in place of one of these for its carry weight and movement benefits.

The Apprentice and Atronach stones work well for mages, giving you +50 Magicka, +100 percent Magicka Regen, and 50 percent Magicka Absorption, at a cost of being weak to magic in turn. Note that the Atronach's Magicka Regen penalty is completely negated when you have both Stones; you receive all of its benefits without the drawbacks!

If you prefer more active abilities, you can pick two of the Ritual, Serpent, Shadow, and Tower stones, and use each power once a day.

Aetherial Shield

Enemies struck by this shield become ethereal for 15 seconds, making them unable to attack or be attacked.

The Aetherial Shield is a fast, effective way to take an enemy out of combat for a few seconds, at the cost of a little stamina (for the bash). It's easy to underestimate this ability, as it's actually surprisingly powerful.

Once made ethereal, most enemies will also flee from you, effectively extending the amount of time they remain out of combat. Only Daedra, Atronachs, and Dwarven Automotons will stand their ground.

Unlike most Illusion or undead-repelling spells, this effect works on all enemies regardless of level. Only dragons and a select few opponents (such as Lord Harkon) are immune to its effects. A few enemies (such as vampires) can break this spell by using their own magical abilities.

The Aetherial Shield is great for dealing with a crowd of foes, allowing you to take one or more enemies out of the fight for a few seconds so you can focus on other adversaries without distraction. The only limit to the number of enemies you can affect is your stamina.

The shield also works well against powerful single foes, such as Dragon Priests or Draugr Deathlords. If you find yourself on the verge of death, bash them, then take some time to heal up while they flee in terror.

Aetherial Staff

Summon a Dwarven Spider or Sphere for 60 seconds wherever the caster is pointing.

The Aetherial Staff allows you to conjure some interesting allies you can't otherwise obtain. Dwarven Automotons tend to have more health and better resistances than a comparably leveled Atronach. This is more beneficial still for adventurers who aren't focused on magic and want a tough ally for a fight. However, what you actually conjure from the staff is random and depends on your level.

Additionally, there is always a 15 percent chance of a "mishap." If your level is less than 15, this chance doubles to 30 percent. Mishaps include summoning a spider or sphere that dies immediately, or summoning in only scrap metal. Ack!

If your level is less than 15, you usually summon the basic Dwarven Spider Worker, although you have a small chance of a Dwarven Sphere appearing.

At Levels 15 to 29, you receive either the Dwarven Spider Worker or a Dwarven Sphere.

At Levels 30 to 44, you receive either the Dwarven Spider or Dwarven Sphere.

At Levels 45 and higher, you receive either the Dwarven Spider or Dwarven Sphere Guardian.

If you haven't put much effort into Conjunction magic or just want to have a cool Dwarven Sphere rolling around after you, the Aetherial Staff can be an entertaining choice. Experienced conjurers or those focused purely on making their adventurer as powerful as possible may want to choose another item.

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Side

Quest: The Wolf Queen Awakened, Daedric Quest: The Mind of Madness

LOCATIONS: Solitude, Blue Palace, Wolfskull Cave, Wolfskull Ruins

CHARACTERS: Falk Firebeard, Jarl Elisif the Fair, Sybille Stentor, Varnius Junius

ENEMIES: Draugr, Necromancer, Necromancer Leader, Potema the Wolf Queen, Skeleton

◆ OBJECTIVES: Clear out Wolfskull Cave, Speak to Falk Firebeard

MINOR SPOILERS

As you reach the first large chamber, tackle a couple of necromancers before passing through the wooden door. Undead Draugr and skeletons attack as you reach the top of a snowy fissure. Fight or flee from them, and enter Wolfskull Ruins.

As you reach the subterranean fortress, across the canyon-sized hole in the center of this vast natural cavern, something is frighteningly wrong. A gathering maelstrom of energy is congealing atop the central tower of the ruins. But there is no time for sightseeing; attack another incoming necromancer as you work through some craggy tunnels and oil lamp traps. As you reach the edge of the fortress ruins, you hear a chant. A group of necromancers are attempting to summon the spirit of Potema the Wolf Queen, an insane necromancer who challenged Uriel III for the throne of the Empire 500 years ago!

In the face of this evil, act swiftly: Head down the exterior steps and through the first tower archway, dispatching enemies as you go. Climb the tower and go out the eastern exit archway. Climb more steps as the Wolf Queen begins to stir and speak. Continue around the battlements, finishing more necromancers and Draugr. Potema warns her followers of an intruder. Enter the main tower as the maelstrom increases, and prepare for a fraught battle against more powerful necromancers and any undead they may conjure. With the leader dispatched and all enemies defeated, Potema becomes unbound, and the maelstrom dissipates.

TIP You can use the stairwell as cover during this fight, and coax the necromancers down to fight you one at a time.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Falk Firebeard

Malevolence Stirring

While you're in the spectacular city of Solitude, visit the Blue Palace, where Jarl Elisif the Fair is holding court. While listening to those seeking an audience with the Jarl, you may wish to strike up a conversation with Falk Firebeard, the Jarl's steward and manager of the housecarls. You can chat about General Tullius and Elisif's decisions regarding the war. Now wait for a man named Varnius Junius—a representative of the serfs of Haafingar Hold—to speak before the Jarl. He seems frightened and speaks of "unnatural magic," strange noises, and lights emanating from a place known as Wolfskull Cave. The Jarl promises to keep her population safe, but Court Wizard Sybille Stentor thinks this is just superstitious hokum. Falk agrees that a show of strength isn't necessary, but someone should investigate the cave system just to be safe.

Now speak with Falk Firebeard, asking him if he needs help with Wolfskull Cave. Falk was initially going to dismiss this as fanciful talk from an overly imaginative populous, but he agrees to pay you if you'll clear out the cave. You can also ask him about the cave's sordid past, when it was used for necromantic rituals. Nowadays, Falk reckons the place has a few brigands lurking inside.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Clear out Wolfskull Cave

◆ TARGET: Wolfskull Cave

Few Wolves but Plenty of Warlocks

Travel to the mountains north of Dragon Bridge and west of Solitude. As you reach the vertical fissure in the mountainside, you're attacked by a bony fiend. Defeat the skeletons guarding the cave entrance before disappearing inside. The initial cavern tunnels are suspiciously quiet, with a skeleton and Draugr likely to be roaming the otherwise-empty tunnels.

Quest Conclusion

Using the lever atop the tower, lower the drawbridge. This allows for a swift escape back into Wolfskull Cave and back outside, collecting any treasure as you go. Back inside the Blue Palace, inform Falk Firebeard that a group of necromancers were attempting to summon and bind Potema and that the ritual was interrupted. He is thankful this was stopped and rewards you almost appropriately for your troubles.

Postquest Activities

Side Quest: The Wolf Queen Awakened begins shortly. This quest has the benefit of beginning a firm and friendly relationship with the Jarl of Solitude. If you speak to her after this quest, you can complete her Favor (see the Favors section starting on page 497 for more information) and place Torygg's Warhorn at a Shrine to Talos. This also aids in your relationship with Falk, allowing you to obtain a key from him that opens a wing of the Palace that is normally sealed, allowing you, in turn, to begin. INTERSECTING QUESTS: Side Quest: The Man Who Cried Wolf

LOCATIONS: Solitude, Hall of the Dead, Potema's Catacombs, Potema's Refuge, Potema's Sanctum, Temple of the Divines

CHARACTERS: Falk Firebeard, Styrr

ENEMIES: Draugr, Vampire

◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak to Styrr, Defeat Potema, Retrieve Potema's remains, Give Potema's remains to Styrr, Return to Falk Firebeard

Venture down the corridor to the barred archway. Potema's spirit surrounds you, mocking you and promising to raise your corpse to serve her once she slays you. The bars recede, allowing you farther into the stone corridors, down more steps, and to your first encounters with a group of Draugr.

Descend the steps in the chamber with the hanging corpse cages, and slay your first vampire. Beware of more attacks from dark alcoves before activating the wall lever to open the portcullis in the archway to the northeast wall. Enter the sunken corridors, and head southeast, up into a large, natural cavern. Expect more Draugr and vampire incursions as you reach the flooded pillar chamber. Seek the exit to the south, which leads into a wider natural cavern and a large stone entrance flanked by Draugr.

The lever atop the circular plinth activates a rotating stone and iron grating; step through when there's a gap as the grating rises. A cauldron in the next room indicates the resurrection may be under way. Burst through the wooden doors and into Potema's Refuge.

Malevolence Rising

Once you complete Side Quest: The Man Who Cried Wolf and continue your adventuring, the next time you enter a Hold City (such as Dawnstar or Whiterun), a courier runs up and hands you a message. It is an urgent communication from Falk requesting that you return to Solitude, as Potema's spirit is now free and a dangerous threat to Skyrim. There is one man who may be able to help you: Solitude's cemetery keeper, a wizard and Priest of Arkay named Styrr.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Styrr

◆ TARGET: Styrr, in the Hall of the Dead, in Solitude

Locate the Hall of the Dead in Solitude, and enter this eerie place. It is made even more strange by the slightly befuddled nature of the man you're meeting. Styrr beckons you over, and you may ask several questions about Potema, which he is happy to answer. Potema has been summoned in spirit form but fortunately was not raised from the dead; she will require help before she returns to the land of the living. For now, she lurks in a place where the dead eagerly serve her—the old catacombs. You are to find Potema's physical bones and bring them back to Styrr for sanctification. He hands you a key to enter the Catacombs.

➤ Potema's Catacombs Key

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat Potema

◆ TARGET: Potema, in Potema's Catacombs, within the Temple of the Divines, in Solitude

Wrecking a Resurrection

Brave the wintry weather and scale the battlements in the northern part of Solitude. Open the door to the Temple of the Divines, passing Freir at the shrine. Work your way past the temple nave and chancel, down some side steps, and through the barred door. Then open the door leading into Potema's Catacombs.

Strike down more Draugr as you twist and turn around the stone tunnels. Locate the trio of levers on the plinth, and expect a vampire attack from the barred door to your right (north).

Puzzle Solution: The levers have three positions: The center one freezes the corresponding rotating stone disk, and left or right rotates the disk in either direction. The optimal plan is to set all of them to the center and then manually rotate and freeze each one in the open position, one by one, beginning with the nearest rotating stone.

Pass the rock column room and up steps into a throne room with a floor grating and a powerful Draugr and vampire to either battle or stealthily avoid. The double wooden doors (Master) can be easily opened if you take Potema's Sanctum Key, which rests on the right throne arm. This allows access down into the Sanctum.

➤ Potema's Sanctum Key

The frequency of foes (both vampiric and undead) increases now as you pass through an embalming room and past the slumped remains of a Draugr on a throne. He soon stirs. Dispatch any foes troubling you as you open more iron doors. Pass under the grating in the throne room, stepping over corpses as you go. Wait for Potema to mock you before raising the final portcullis that leads to her summoning chamber.

Potema is not yet fully formed but has a shock beam that emanates from her essence. Avoid this at all costs, as it is hazardous and inflicts shock damage upon you. The Wolf Queen has also summoned her inner council to stop you dead in your tracks. Summon your own power and remove any and all Draugr that advance out of their coffins or ceremonial alcoves. Expect to attack at least eight Draugr, with more appearing at once after you dispatch the first five or six. Once the Draugr are down, you can pass the deep purple glow and access the metal door at the far end of Potema's chamber. The skeletal spirit of Potema begins to congeal! Take her down immediately, before she can begin to resurrect more of her fallen lackeys. Then gather the bones from the throne beyond.

➤ Potema's Skull

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve Potema's remains
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Give Potema's remains to Styrr
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Falk Firebeard

Don't miss the iron door behind the throne! Open it to reach a tall natural rock chimney. Scale the steps and remove the bar from the next iron door, where your final Draugr turn restless. Exit outside, and either carefully descend the rock gully or Fast-Travel safely away. You appear to the north of Solitude, near the pass that passes the Dainty Sload ship. Return to Solitude and to the Hall of the Dead, and hand Potema's Skull over to Styrr, who promises to consecrate the remains.

Quest Conclusion

Now return to the Blue Palace and talk with Falk Firebeard one more time, informing him that you've taken care of Potema. His relief is palpable, and both Falk and the Jarl consider you a Protector of Solitude. You are awarded a shield to back this honor up.

- Shield of Solitude
- Gold pieces (Leveled)

Postquest Activities

Your dalliance with the Wolf Queen is over! Should you equip the shield, expect an occasional comment from the Solitude guards.

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Northwatch Keep, Whiterun, Arcadia's Cauldron, The Bannerman's House, House of Clan Battle-Born, House Gray-Mane

CHARACTERS: Avulstein Gray-Mane, Fralia Gray-Mane, Idolaf Battle-Born, Jon Battle-Born, Olfin the Golden, Thorald Gray-Mane

ENEMIES: Northwatch Archer, Northwatch Guard, Northwatch Interrogator, Northwatch Mage

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Meet Fralia in her home, Find evidence of Thorald's fate, Deliver proof to Avulstein, Find a way to release Thorald from Thalmor custody, Rescue Thorald from Northwatch Keep, Lead Thorald to safety, Return to Fralia Gray-Mane

He explains his brother's disappearance; the family believes Thorald is still alive, captured by the Imperials and held in a location that the Battle-Borns are aware of. Without proof, the family has nothing. You're going to find the proof.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Find evidence of Thorald's fate
- ◆ TARGET: House of Clan Battle-Born, in Whiterun

At this point, you have three main ways to prove what the Grey-Manes have suspected:

House Hunt: You can locate the House of Clan Battle-Born (ideally while you're not being seen or when no one is at home, or you risk a Bounty increase), locate the ground-floor bedroom on the northwest side of the dwelling, enter it, and pry open the door (Expert).

Idolaf's Key: You can find Idolaf Battle-Born and attempt one of the following:

(Persuasion) Speak to him and get him to tell you what he knows.

(Pickpocket) Stealthily extricate the key from his person. This opens the door in the northwest bedroom.

➤ Key to House Battle-Born

Once inside the small study, look for the Imperial Missive on the table. It reveals the Gray-Mane family's suspicions: Thorald has been moved to a Thalmor stronghold called Northwatch Keep. This is the evidence Avulstein has been hoping for.

Battle-Born's Note: Both Olfin and Jon have notes on their person, which inform you of a secret relationship they are having. Approach either of them, and pickpocket the note. Then speak to Jon, telling him you know of his clandestine affair. In return for your silence, he agrees to bring you the document you need. Meet him at the Statue of Talos at the foot of Dragonsreach, in a few hours. Wait to pass the time until he arrives.

➤ Imperial Missive

Gray-Mane Grief

The first or second time you leave one of the buildings around Whiterun's market area, you witness the verbal wrath of an old woman named Fralia Gray-Mane, the matriarch of a powerful family in Whiterun.

She shouts in an accusatory tone at Olfrid and Idolaf Battle-Born, who are from a rival family also living in this settlement. Fralia blames them for the disappearance of her son, Thorald. Most of the inhabitants believe Thorald died in a Civil War battle fighting the Imperials. If you speak with Fralia, she blames the Battle-Borns again, calling them liars. Call her on this point, and she quiets slightly, telling you that if you truly wish to help her, you should meet her at her home.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Fralia in her home
- ◆ TARGET: House Gray-Mane, in Whiterun

Either follow Fralia to her house and enter or head there yourself, wait an hour if Fralia hasn't arrived, and step inside. A large man carrying an equally immense axe growls at your trespassing, until Fralia tells her other son to put the weapon away, as you're here to help. Talk with Avulstein and answer that you're here to help or that you need more information on what is going on.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Deliver proof to Avulstein

Return to Avulstein, who is still hiding out in House Gray-Mane. Tell him you have proof, and Avulstein is both happy and a little concerned. Northwatch Keep is heavily guarded by Thalmor justicars, and battling through them won't be easy. But Avulstein is ready to swing his axe. You can:

Agree that he joins you in the fight.

Tell him to stay. Then optionally add that you'll attempt to bring Thorald back without spilling any blood.

Avulstein agrees to these options. If you bring him with you, he acts as a Follower until his brother is found.

➤ Follower: Avulstein Gray-Mane

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find a way to release Thorald from Thalmor custody

◆ TARGET: Thorald Gray-Mane, Northwatch Keep

◆ Not for Keeps

There are three different ways you can approach your assault on Northwatch Keep:

You (without Avulstein) can attack every Thalmor enemy on sight.

You and Avulstein can attack every Thalmor foe on sight.

(Sneak) You (without Avulstein) can avoid every Thalmor enemy's line of sight. Although this plan is initially cunning, once Thorald is freed, he usually alerts all the guards you've avoided, making your escape extremely difficult!

Once you pick a plan of action, locate the Keep and either of the two entrances. The south entrance is unlocked, while the north one features an exceptionally difficult lock to pick (Master). Assuming you slew the half-dozen Northwatch Guards under and on the battlements (or you'll have to attempt this on your way out, along with one or both Gray-Mane brothers), enter the unlocked door.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Rescue Thorald from Northwatch Keep

Descend the steps from the southern entrance and hack or sneak through the mead-tasting chamber, which has two or three Northwatch Guards and a mage to worry about. Continue north, down some steps, and make a right turn, heading (east) down more steps. Turn left (north), fighting your way into a tavern room. Follow the corridor to an adjoining passage and head west into a two-tiered hallway. There are at least six more Northwatch Guards (and a mage) to fight or flee from along the way.

Climb the steps, and head to a cobwebbed storage room junction and torture room to the west, where Thorald is being held. Kill the interrogator who attacks from this room and search the robbed corpse; there's a key here allowing you to unlock the northern door. Approach Thorald after you nullify all nearby enemies. Thorald Gray-Mane is hanging in an iron wall grip. Free him from his binds. He agrees that leaving would be the best plan.

➤ Northwatch Keep Key

◆ OBJECTIVE: Lead Thorald to safety

You can lead Thorald back the way you've fought. Or, for a shorter, bloodier excursion, head north through the jail cells and take down the remaining three Thalmor in here before racing up the steps and unlocking the door to Skyrim. You may elect to flee quickly out of the gap in the perimeter fence just by the door and forge, or remain in the exterior courtyard and kill any remaining foes. Assuming Thorald Gray-Mane is still alive, move away from Northwatch Keep.

When you're at a safe distance from the keep, approach Thorald, who asks why you came for him. Once you reveal you're working with his family, he asks where Avulstein is:

If you brought Avulstein along, the two greet each other heartily and agree that Whiterun isn't the safest place to return to.

If you rescued Thorald alone, you tell him Avulstein's in Whiterun, and he tells you it isn't safe for either of them.

Thorald is off to join the Stormcloak Army, and Avulstein will follow this plan too (either from here or Whiterun). He gives you a final task: to tell Fralia "to suffer the winter's cold wind, for it bears aloft next summer's seeds." She'll know the meaning of this.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Fralia Gray-Mane

Quest Conclusion

Back in Whiterun, search out Fralia at her stall near the Bannered Mare or at her family home. Inform her that Thorald is safe but that he didn't think it was safe to return. Repeat the phrase Thorald mentioned so she believes you, and she finds peace that both her sons are still alive, if not with her. In return for your good deeds, she presents you with a gift, forged by Eorlund at the Skyforge. If Eorlund has died, Fralia has only 200 gold pieces to reward you with.

PREREQUISITES: None

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Black-Briar Lodge, Riften, The Bee and Barb, Riften Jail

CHARACTERS: Frost, Louis Letrush, Maven Black-Briar, Sibbi Black-Briar

ENEMIES: Black-Briar Mercenary

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak to Sibbi Black-Briar, Steal Frost's Lineage Papers, (Optional) Steal the Lodge Stash, Steal Frost, Return to Louis Letrush

MINOR SPOILERS

Black-Briar Entanglements

If you're ever resting your weary bones in the Bee and Barb public house in the township of Riften, you may wish to strike up a conversation with one of the patrons, Louis Letrush. He usually beckons you over for a quiet talk. He needs someone to deliver a message to Sibbi Black-Briar. He explains that he recently purchased a fine Thoroughbred horse named Frost and paid Sibbi half of the cost up front. Unfortunately for Louis, Maven (Sibbi's mother) had him placed in the jail for other crimes (that Louis has no idea of), and the Black-Briars believe this debt to be nullified. You're to speak to Sibbi, then bring Frost and the lineage papers back to Letrush.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Sibbi Black-Briar

◆ TARGET: Riften Jail, in Riften

TIP If you're running with the Thieves Guild and worried about the repercussions this quest will have with Maven Black-Briar, rest easy. You can:

Speak to Maven, who appreciates the heads-up and tells you to let the situation play out. If you don't kill Letrush yourself, once you go away and return after completing another quest or favor, you'll find that Maven has settled accounts with Letrush.

Complete this quest without speaking to Maven at all; assuming you keep your plans to yourself, Maven never discovers your part in this caper.

Head out of the Bee and Barb, across to Mistveil Keep, and to the door to one side, which leads to the jail directly underneath the Keep. At this point, a guard stops you.

You can:

(Persuade) Request that you're let in to see Sibbi.

(Bribe) Offer a little coin for the guard to look the other way as you enter the jail.

Or descend the steps and open the door (Hard) that leads to the jail's upper floor. You risk the guard raising the alarm, increasing your Crime.

Move along to the cells on the upper level, where Sibbi is being held. Speak to the lad, and it becomes increasingly clear that Sibbi didn't own the horse in the first place: In fact, the horse belongs to the family, and it is staying at the Black-Briar Lodge, as far as Maven is concerned. However, as far as Sibbi is concerned, he'll pay you the other half of Letrush's payment if you'll steal the horse and return it to Letrush. You can:

Agree to this.

(Persuade) Tell Sibbi that Maven would likely pay even more for the information he just revealed.

Or tell Sibbi that Letrush already agreed to a payment (which isn't an optimal plan—you want to gain as much coin as possible from these two).

If your Persuasion works, Sibbi tells you of a hidden stash inside the lodge that could be yours if you can find it. He gives you the Stash Key to open it.

Sibbi's Stash Key

◆ OBJECTIVE: Steal Frost's Lineage Papers

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Steal the Lodge Stash

◆ TARGET: Black-Briar Lodge

Stealing the Stallion

Journey to Black-Briar Lodge and scout the perimeter. It has obviously been constructed with defense in mind. It is all but inaccessible from the north, so approach from the south or western sides. There are three structures in this compound: a tower, the main building, and the stables where Frost is waiting. Expect one or two Black-Briar Mercenaries to be guarding either side of the main building. Utilize your sneaking talents or your combat prowess to navigate past these enemies who attack unwanted visitors on sight. Loot or pickpocket a key to the Black-Briar lodge from any guard, or pick an entrance to open:

(Lockpick [Novice]) The door on the lodge's northern side can be picked.

(Lockpick [Adept]) As can the (more difficult) door on the southern side, one floor below.

(Lockpick [Expert]) Or you can enter via the side door in the western wall, which is expertly sealed.

Key to Black-Briar Lodge

Prepare to sneak or pummel your way through the lodge premises, as there are at least six Black-Briar Mercenaries on guard in this structure. Your infiltration leads to two separate locations, usually via the large central great room with a banquet table and a large fireplace. However, if you entered via the southern door, you appear in the cellar area, where you find both the Lineage Papers (hidden inside an end table) and the Lodge Stash (hidden inside the strongbox, which is otherwise extremely difficult [Master] to unlock).

➤ Frost's Lineage Papers

➤ Gold pieces (Leveled)

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Steal Frost
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Louis Letrush
- ◆ TARGET: Stables and forest, outside Black-Briar Lodge

Quest Conclusion

Now for a spot of horse rustling! Simply exit the lodge (via any of the exits, assuming you can pick the locks), and search for the stallion close to the stables on the lodge's south side. Mount Frost and ride him (usually northwest) into the forest where Louis Letrush is waiting. If you somehow lose Frost (but the horse is still alive), return to the stables where you'll find him again (and more mercenaries). When you greet Letrush, you have the following options:

You can request your payment.

(Persuade) You can mention you'll go to Maven unless you leave here with the horse, too.

(Intimidate) You can inform him that if he were dead, you could keep the horse.

You can kill him, taking the money from his corpse, although he's a tough man to bring down.

Or you can simply ride off with the horse.

- Frost
- Gold pieces (Leveled)

Postquest Activities

If you've ridden off on Frost without speaking to Letrush, the quest doesn't close, and the horse heads back to the lodge after you dismount. Frost can't be sold. If you persuade Letrush and take the horse, expect a thug to be sent to rough you up (this happens as a World Encounter). Finally, if you inform Maven now, the quest is over and if Letrush is still alive, you may find him on the road shortly afterward (this happens as a World Encounter), killed by one of Maven's men.

A RETURN TO YOUR ROOTS

PREREQUISITES: Begin Daedric Quest: Discerning the Transmundane

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Main Quest:

Elder Knowledge, Daedric Quest: Discerning the Transmundane

LOCATIONS: Blackreach, Sinderion's Field Laboratory, Sarethi Farm

CHARACTERS: Avrusa Sarethi, Sinderion, Enemies, Dwarven Sphere, Falmer

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Discover the significance of Crimson Nirnroot, Collect Crimson Nirnroot in Blackreach (30), Bring Crimson Nirnroot to Avrusa Sarethi

The first structure you'll see as you step into Blackreach for the first time is a one-story, dwarven stone structure guarded by a Dwarven Sphere. Head there, tackling a Falmer along the way, and open the gold door leading into Sinderion's Field Laboratory. There are numerous key ingredients for your crafting here, as well as a workbench, Arcane Imbuer, and an Alchemy Lab. Sinderion himself is looking a little worse for wear. Inspect the skeletal corpse to find Sinderion's Field Journal.

An Unmistakable Warble

NOTE This quest occurs only when you enter the gargantuan subterranean Dwemer cityplex of Blackreach. The optimal path to reach this sprawling, canyon-sized cavern is to commence either Main Quest: Elder Knowledge or Daedric Quest: Discerning the Transmundane. These both require you to secure the Attunement Sphere from Septimus Signus, which is the only way to access Blackreach.

Locate Alftand on the glacial mountains southwest of Winterhold. Enter and work your way through the Alftand Glacial Ruins, battling Dwarven Spheres and Spiders, maneuvering through the tower and connecting chambers of the Alftand Animonculory (opening the elevator back to the Glacial Ruins as you go). Battle the Dwarven Centurion in the Alftand Cathedral to reach a second elevator (opening the exit allowing you to ascend to the surface exterior), before descending back into the Cathedral. Use the Attunement Sphere to activate the Dwarven Mechanism to access the hidden entrance to Blackreach.

➤ Sinderion's Field Journal

Read this journal to begin the quest. These are a series of research notes recognizing the spectacular potential of the rare, subterranean Crimson Nirnroot. Sinderion was in the process of collecting 30 specimens when he died under mysterious circumstances. It now falls to you to complete his task. The first Crimson Nirnroot is easy to spot; it is growing in the Dwemer bowl on the counter.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Discover the significance of Crimson Nirnroot

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Collect Crimson Nirnroot in Blackreach (30)

Begin to search for Crimson Nirnroot throughout Blackreach. They are dotted around the landscape and make the same ethereal chime when you're near to them as their overworld species. Continue the hunt throughout Blackreach.

TIP The Atlas chapter has a map and lists locations of all 30+ Crimson Nirnroot plants. Consult page 981 for more details. If you don't wish to scavenge the entire underground realm, you can leave, allow some time to pass, and return once the picked plants have regrown, and add them to your inventory that way.

Quest Conclusion

Avrusa Sarethi hosted Sinderion when he lived in Skyrim to research the Crimson Nirnroot. She was a student of sorts and is mentioned in his journal. After you finish collecting one or more (or 30 Crimson Nirnroots), you have the option to visit her. You can visit her before, but she's far less helpful.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring Crimson Nirnroot to Avrusa Sarethi

◆ TARGET: Avrusa Sarethi, Sarethi Farm

Head to the Sarethi Farm in the Rift. Notice that in her vegetable plot, she is growing Nirnroot (the green kind), which is an unusual feat. Ask her about this, and she'll tell you Sinderion taught her.

If you have one or more Crimson Nirnroot, but fewer than 30, she will comment on your finding. You can also mention finding Sinderion's remains, too, and she'll converse with you about this sad demise of a good man.

Once you have 30 Crimson Nirnroot (or more), bring them to Avrusa Sarethi. She is impressed enough to offer you a tome she says belonged to Sinderion. You also receive Sinderion's Serendipity:

➤ The Nirnroot Missive

➤ Perk: Sinderion's Serendipity (25% chance to create a second duplicate potion whenever you create a potion using Alchemy)

Postquest Activities

Veteran explorers may have figured out that Sinderion is the same Alchemist from Oblivion who assigned a quest named "Finding Your Roots." Evidence of this is presented in his journal and tome.

MINOR SPOILERS

Fortunately, Clan Shatter-Shield's office is right next door! Unfortunately, the entrance is usually locked (Master) during the night, and there are numerous visitors during the day.

(Lockpick) Pry open the locked door and sneak inside. The ideal time to attempt this is during the night, when no one is inside the office. The ledger is on a table in the office's far-left (northwest) corner. It makes interesting reading. Snatch the logbook and leave the premises quickly. Expect additions to your Crime if you're caught breaking in.

➤ Survaris Atheron's Logbook

◆ OBJECTIVE: Give the logbook to Orthus

Return to Orthus, and tell him you have the logbook. It appears Survaris has been traveling to Dawnstar to meet with pirates. Orthus wants you to head there, find out about these Blood Horkers, and speak with their captain, Stig Salt-Plank, regarding the whereabouts of the pirate's fortress lair.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Stig Salt-Plank

◆ TARGET: Stig Salt-Plank, in Dawnstar

Problems with Pirates

The East Empire Company has trading offices in both Solitude and Windhelm, but it is having some difficulties maintaining its presence in Windhelm. Visit the icy docks just outside Windhelm, and locate the company office below the city wall. Inside, greet Orthus Endario, who apologizes for the run-down nature of the place. It transpires that the company can't keep the trade going around here thanks to recent attacks by pirates raiding all along the coast. Only Windhelm's powerful Shatter-Shield clan appears safe from these marauders, who call themselves "Blood Horkers." Endario suspects the Shatter-Shields are involved and hopes you might want to help find some proof of this. Apparently, their operations are overseen by a Dark Elf named Survaris Atheron. If her meticulously detailed logbook were to end up with Orthus, he'd be most grateful. Ask for more information on the pirates before you agree, and leave the premises.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Steal Survaris Atheron's logbook

◆ TARGET: Logbook, Clan Shatter-Shield Office

Meeting Two Captains

Trek to Dawnstar and locate the pirates. They are having a good time in the Windpeak Inn. Maneuver through the drunkards to reach Stig Salt-Plank, and ask him about the Blood Horkers. He's been their captain for the past nine years, and says the raging Civil War has been great for plunder. He mentions someone named "Haldyn." Quiz him on this person, and he reveals Haldyn to be a powerful battle-mage who runs the entire operation and keeps the battles in the Blood Horkers' favor. Ask where you can go to join this operation and Stig refuses to tell you.

You can:

(Brawl) Fight with fists to beat the location out of him. Remember, no weapons!

(Bribe) Ply him with gold so he reveals the location.

Or you can bring out your proper weapons, slay this reprobate, and lift the orders off his corpse. Naturally, this adds to your Crime.

Once you are successful in your plan, Stig reveals that the pirates convene at Japhet's Folly.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Orthus

When you return to the East Empire Company's Windhelm office, you find a little more activity: A stern-faced woman named Adelaisa Vendicci is admonishing Orthus; sniveling isn't going to get all the gold back that the company is losing. Orthus explains he has someone investigating this plundering, and when Adelaisa spots you, she turns to you for some action. Inform her that the Blood Horkers are led by a battle-mage named Haldyn. Although a direct assault on the Blood Horkers may now be more fraught than she previously thought, she nevertheless orders you to head for the ships: The East Empire Company is planning to attack right back! Before you leave, you can find out a little more about Haldyn's fearsome control of Destruction magic.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Depart for Japhet's Folly

◆ TARGET: East Empire Mercenary, Windhelm docks

Wait! You're about to brave the freezing Sea of Ghosts and attack a fortified bandit keep! If you haven't brought (or bought) all the equipment, such as potions, spells, armor, or weapons, you should arm yourself for the fight to come before continuing.

CAUTION

Exit the company office, and head to the rowboat moored at the dock. An East Empire Mercenary is waiting to transport you to Japhet's Folly. Confirm you're ready, and you're taken aboard one of the East Empire's galleons.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Adelaisa

▶ Assault on Japhet's Folly

The weather is getting inhospitable. Approach Adelaisa Vendicci on deck, and ask her what the plan is. She tells you that Haldyn has been known to obscure his hideaways using magic (usually island-shrouding fog), so they think they've arrived at Japhet's Folly. As the crew are a little jittery to face such a powerful battle-mage, you're to take him out first, while Adelaisa and her men handle the island assault once the coast is clear. Literally.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Haldyn

◆ TARGET: Haldyn, Japhet's Folly Towers

Leap from the deck and land on the thick sections of ice below. Then jump across the gaps in the ice floe, heading south until the folly (the small stone tower) looms out of the mists. To your left (east) are the Blood Horker docks. Ahead of you is a Sea Cave, where a clandestine infiltration of Japhet's Folly should begin. Enter the Sea Cave.

If you want a more one-sided assault on Japhet's Folly, leap across to the docks and begin a direct assault. This isn't recommended, as the enemies are numerous and Adelaisa will be helping remove these enemies once you do what you came here for: to kill a battle-mage.

CAUTION

Wade through the icy tunnel, past the old rowboat. Slice open a couple of mudcrabs. Climb up into an ice-laden storage cave with a stone wall ahead (south) of you. It is here that you'll encounter your first Blood Horker pirate. Sneak past or kill him, then enter the cellar pantry (where more potions can be gathered for the combat to come) and climb the steps up to enter Japhet's Folly Towers.

Begin climbing the spiral staircase, watching for a swinging gate trap and more Blood Horker combat as you ascend (or coax the Blood Horker toward the trap and spring it on them). At the top of the first tower, check the storage rooms for items before opening the wooden door and heading along the connecting passage to the second tower. Pass the door requiring a key to open it and continue southeast. You encounter another pirate and a spiral stone staircase down. Descend to more Blood Horker combat. But remain atop this second tower so you can face and defeat Haldyn.

Haldyn enjoys attacking with fierce electrical attacks. When Haldyn finally falls, as your quest updates, give the battle-mage a quick search. You'll find a key. This opens the door you passed earlier, between the towers. Head down the spiral stairs if you wish to encounter more foes, and open a door (Expert) to a small storage room with items to purloin. Exit the island and let Adelaisa know of your morale-boosting slaughter of Haldyn.

▶ Japhet's Folly Key

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Adelaisa

◆ TARGET: Adelaisa Vendicci, Japhet's Folly harbor

The time has come to exit Japhet's Folly Towers—via the door you unlocked using Haldyn's Key. You're in for an explosive finale, as the East Empire Company is bombarding the island with cannon fire. Fight (or sneak) past the blasts, tackling any Blood Horker stragglers as you go. Make a vaguely northeast route through the ruined harbor structures to the jetty, where Adelaisa waits.

Adelaisa explains that she began the bombardment once Haldyn died, as the fog he conjured also left with his spirit. With the Blood Horker base of operations decimated, Adelaisa asks whether you're ready to head back to Skyrim and celebrate. Refuse if you want to explore Japhet's Folly some more, or agree when you want to leave.

MINOR SPOILERS

Here are some of the best locations from which to bring a Black Soul Gem (exploration requires a thorough search of all chambers within):

Falion: You can acquire one if you trade with him... for a price!

Broken Fang Cave: in Whiterun Hold

Hob's Fall Cave: in Winterhold Hold

Hjerim: a house in Windhelm that you can purchase

► Black Soul Gem

Out of Blackness Comes Forth Light

When fighting vampires, there is a chance that you may contract the disease Sanguinare Vampiris. While this disease can be easily cured through normal means, if left untreated, it will eventually cause you to become a Vampire. If you would like to remove vampirism from your body, complete this quest.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Falion

◆ TARGET: Falion, in Morthal

Journey to any innkeeper across Skyrim and ask for their rumors. When you have full-fledged vampirism, you will learn that a mage named Falion in the Hold City of Morthal may be able to help you. Journey to Morthal and seek out Falion, who is wandering the streets or hanging out in his house. He asks you of your needs, and when you tell him you're looking for a cure, he is surprised. For this to occur, it requires a filled Black Soul Gem, and for this you will need to kill someone.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring a filled Black Soul Gem to Morthal

After you have a filled Black Soul Gem, return to Falion's House and inform him of your item. He agrees to meet you at the summoning circle in the marsh at dawn. Only then shall you both banish the creature you have become.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Falion at dawn

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Falion

Between 3:00 and 7:00 in the morning, your quest objective updates. Head north over the bridge and out of Morthal, going slightly northwest as you cross into the marsh. Falion stands on one of the small scrub islands within the marsh. Tell him you're ready to start the ritual.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Wait for Falion to complete the ritual

Quest Conclusion

After some ritual words are sounded, Falion successfully pulls the creature of the night from within your corporal form and sends it to Oblivion. After you come to, Falion walks away, back to help the inhabitants of Morthal. You find yourself cured of vampirism.

Postquest Activities

If you ever contract vampirism again, simply repeat this quest; Falion even has a new Black Soul Gem for you to buy!

ENEMIES: Dwarven Centurion, Dwarven Sphere, Dwarven Spider

◆ OBJECTIVES: Take the Lexicon to Avanchzel

MINOR SPOILERS

The Agitated Argonian

If you're exploring the docks of Ríften that overlook Lake Honrich (which are outside the city), you're likely to encounter an agitated Argonian named From-Deepest-Fathoms. If you can't find her, wait around or return here after other adventuring. When you try to speak to her, From-Deepest-Fathoms quickly pushes an object into your hands and pleads with you to free her of her burden. When you ask what she's talking about, she says she's been driven half mad by memories. And this is all the fault of a Lexicon. It must be returned to Avanchzel. She begs you to take it. Agree and the quest continues.

Lexicon

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take the Lexicon to Avanchzel

◆ TARGET: Lexicon Receptacle, in Avanchzel Boilery

Avanchzel is almost due west of Ríften, across the Hold in the Jerall Mountains. It was once a great hall of dwarven construction, a library to house the vast memories of the Dwemer. It was run almost exclusively by strange mechanical spiders. From the outside, steam still periodically shoots from golden vents, and the entrance is atop a series of curved walkways hewn into the mountain. Enter Avanchzel, and wind through the rumbling tunnels to an opening and entrance below you.

Halt as you witness a party of adventurers speaking to each other. They are bathed in red, the same color emanating from the Lexicon you carry. This seems to be a resonance, a playback of From-Deepest-Fathom's previous exploration. You can't interact with these ghosts but can only watch as they worry about venturing into this place. Breya, Watches-the-Roots, and Drennen complete the quartet. They walk forward and disappear from your vision.

Follow the tunnel to the south, and begin the first of many confrontations with Dwarven Spiders. Battle, sneak around, or flee from them. Progress south to a pair of giant gold doors, and open them. Along the stone platform high above the giant fissure below, the specters of Watches-the-Roots and From-Deepest-Fathoms talk about the amazing architecture in here. From this hub chasm, you have a choice of paths.

Path 1

Continue down the corridor heading south, with the two lanterns at its entrance. Prepare to fight with Dwarven Spheres as you turn the corner. This leads to a long corridor that turns, passes a locked gate (Apprentice), and ends at a curved ledge down to the bottom of the hub chasm. Here, you can inspect the following:

A locked door to the south (Master) leading to a storage room with items you may wish to scavenge.

A passage and long hallway to the east, sloping down past some recently slain Dwarven Spheres and ending in a gold door to the Avanchzel Animuncultory. By the dead spheres, you receive another hallucination, as the previous expedition notices that they are being ignored by the "metal things."

Path 2

Turn left (east) and head up the sloping platform to two pairs of gold doors. Then connect to a set of corridors with a cross-shaped stone table.

Head up and left (west) at the stone table to reach a connecting passage that brings you to the top of the hub chasm (where you find the remains of a skeleton) or to a pair of gold doors (and a door bar) leading into an Avanchzel balcony. This is the best way to exit Avanchzel and shouldn't be accessed yet.

Head down (north) to a single gold door and a mechanical elevator that takes you to the Avanchzel Boilery. Alas, the door at the bottom of the elevator requires a key to unlock and is firmly sealed. This is actually the escape route after you return the Lexicon.

Advancing into Avanchzel

Enter the Animuncultory and prepare for protracted battles with Dwarven Spiders and Spheres (or flee from them). Fortunately, although this part of Avanchzel is massive and elongated, there is only one route to take—through a series of connected corridors. The first chamber features golden barrels. You have another vision as you approach the locked gate (Adept) where the past adventurers realize that hiring a thief for this heist would have been wise. Follow the stairs through more corridors, and then out into a huge, grand hall. The past adventurers set up camp here, a little unnerved at the "sleeping metal men."

Follow the connecting corridor through a storage room of metal pots, shelves, and barrels. Descend to more corridors, dwarven mechanical beasts to slay, and more chambers with pots and shelves. The past adventurers appear in the storage room bathed in a golden hue, complaining that the metal men aren't sleeping anymore.

Down another corridor, a large and grinding chamber of cogs and spiders awaits. Lying on two stone slabs are huge, golden warriors, clad in gold but fortunately inactive. Fight or dash to the right (west), and up the stairs to the north to quickly exit this room, or investigate it further if you wish to battle Dwarven Spiders. Then run down the L-shaped corridor. The past adventurers appear once more. Drennen is at the end of his rope and flees the scene, leaving the team one man down. Open the doors and enter Avanchzel Boilery.

Head down the increasingly ornate and tall corridor, watching the three past adventurers figuring out what to do when they finally have the Lexicon in their grasp. When they disappear, fight spiders and spheres as you progress down to a chamber with a desk and pistons. The past adventurers blink into your vision once more, and Brea seems very perturbed. Watches-the-Roots lets out a gasp. Open the door to the north, and head down the edges of the sloping corridor to avoid the whirling blade trap, which claimed Watches-the-Roots' life; his corpse is at the far door.

The final vision of adventurers past occurs as you reach the grand boilery chamber. Brea can't hold back the giant stomping mechanical beings that are coming to life, and you may be having some trouble too.

A Dwarven Centurion looks for intruders and attacks you on sight. You can either fight it in an epic confrontation (remember to use the upper area and preceding corridor to dodge its vicious arm-mandible strikes) or complete the quest first. During your exploration of this chamber, you may stumble upon Brea's corpse: She is quite dead.

Quest Conclusion

Finish this quest by activating the Lexicon Receptacle at the base of the steps. The cube glows red, slots into place, and you finish your task.

- Perk: Ancient Knowledge (25% Armor Bonus while wearing all Dwarven Armor; your Smithing Skill increases 15% faster.)
- Dwarven Armor

Postquest Activities

Aside from your new ability and an exploration of this vast dwarven repository of knowledge, there are no other rewards, except what you've scavenged. The quickest way to exit is the door that the top of the steps where the Receptacle is. Open them, ride the elevator up, and exit via the balcony, or Path 2 described earlier. From-Deepest-Fathoms does not need to be found afterward.

THE WHITE PHIAL

PREREQUISITES: None

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Side

Quest: Repairing the Phial

LOCATIONS: Forsaken Cave, Forsaken Crypt, Windhelm, The White Phial

CHARACTERS: Nurelion, Quintus Navale

ENEMIES: Curamil, Draugr, Snow Bear, Wolf

◆ OBJECTIVES: Retrieve the White Phial, Bring the Phial to Nurelion, Speak to Quintus

MINOR SPOILERS

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the White Phial

◆ TARGET: White Phial, inside the Forsaken Cave

Journey west along River Yorgrim and up into the mountains looking for some scattered standing stones. Expect wolves along the way and a large lantern at the cave entrance. Step inside, and you're greeted by the (immobile) skeleton of the last man to try and extricate treasure from this place. Pass dead man's cart, and head into the snow cave, where wild animal attacks are likely. Once all animals are slain, move around to the west and open the Iron Door. Descend the spiral steps to a winding corridor. When it straightens out, watch for a trigger plate on the floor, or face a flurry of darts. Then the Draugr come.

Phial of the Virgin Snow

During a trip to Windhelm, visit the market stalls in the southwest corner of the walled city. Close by is the White Phial, a place for potions, alchemy...and arguments it seems. Enter the premises, where the proprietor Nurelion is having a heated discussion with his assistant Quintus Navale. From what you overhear, it seems Nurelion (who is old, even for an elf), has been focusing his entire life on finding a mythological "White Phial" and has even named his shop after it. Now, at the end of his life, he believes he's found the Phial's location but is too infirm to retrieve it. Strike up a conversation with Nurelion and offer to find the Phial for him. He tells you it is buried with its maker, Curamil, in a cave to the west. As the Phial will be difficult to reach, Nurelion has prepared a concoction to take with you.

➤ Nurelion's Mixture

Fight off these bony fiends as you head north, then west into a Draugr crypt. The small maze of interlocking rooms has an Iron Door to unlock (allowing access to a treasure chest), but more importantly there's an exit out into the larger catacombs with banks of the Nordic dead, many of which come alive to thwart you. Find the exit to the southeast, into a narrow corridor and a battering ram trap. Avoid this by stepping across the floor plate as you round the corner to the left (north). Open the Iron Door and enter Forsaken Crypt.

You find more Draugr in the grand crypt chamber. Battle them before heading east up the corridor, then up and around to the bridge over the chamber. More tombs creak open, and Draugr appear on the stone balcony opposite. Turn north and watch for the rising floor trap in the semicircular room with more Draugr to crush. The Iron Door leads up to a metal cased bridge. Follow it south, then west into a Draugr corridor ending in a swinging blade trap. Navigate that, and emerge into the burial sanctum. This was the last resting place of Curamil, who promptly rises again!

Battle Curamil and his Draugr brethren, moving around the sanctum so you aren't surrounded and hacked to pieces. Flee past the swinging blades and let the Draugr come to you if the battle is becoming too difficult. Then inspect the chamber once the dead are buried. Head up the steps to the Word Wall and absorb a Word of Power before heading under the Word Wall to a seemingly dead end. The only scenic point of interest is an ancient bowl.

➤ Word of Power: Marked for Death

◆ A Phial Defiled

Inspect the ancient bowl and activate it. You pour in the mixture that Nurelion gave you, which fills the chamber in a green mist. A moment later, the rock wall panel descends in front of you, allowing you into a secret chamber. This room contains a large variety of ingredients, an Alchemy Lab, and most importantly of all, a Cracked White Phial to take. Perhaps Nurelion won't notice the Phial's blemishes? Now return to the sanctuary, locate the Iron Door in the southwest corner, and head quickly up the connecting stairs, into the Forsaken Cave. Use the wall lever to lower a stone panel, allowing a quick exit back to the surface.

➤ Cracked White Phial

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring the Phial to Nurelion

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Quintus

◆ TARGET: Nurelion, then Quintus, in Windhelm

Quest Conclusion

Return to the White Phial and present Nurelion with the Cracked White Phial. He notices the damage. After thinking you were at fault and then sinking into a depression, Nurelion asks you to leave, as he's not in the mood to entertain guests. Then he retires to his bed. Head over to Quintus, who thanks you for your help anyway and hands you some gold for your troubles. As the quest concludes, Quintus tries to make Nurelion's final days a little less painful.

➤ 500 gold pieces

Postquest Activities

The White Phial's power may draw you back in to help Nurelion and Quintus once again. But only after you complete certain additional tasks. Consult Side Quest: Repairing the Phial for more information.

REPAIRING THE PHIAL

PREREQUISITES: Complete Main

Quest: The Throat of the World, Complete Side Quest: The White Phial, Passage of time: Three days (72 hours) after both quests finish

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Main Quest: The Throat of the World, Side Quest: The White Phial

LOCATIONS: Red Eagle Redoubt, Red Eagle Ascent, Stonehill Bluff, Sundered Towers, Throat of the World, Windhelm, The White Phial

CHARACTERS: Nurelion, Quintus Navale

ENEMIES: Forsworn, Forsworn Briarheart, Giant

◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak to Quintus Navale, Retrieve the Unmelting Snow, Find some Mammoth Tusk Powder, Take a Forsworn Heart, Return to Quintus Navale

Once inside the Alchemist's shop, inform Quintus that you've read his letter. He tells you that he's found three materials that, when mixed together, may be able to mend the crack in the White Phial. Naturally, these materials are a little hard to come by. He requires a scoop of Unmelting Snow from the summit of the Throat of the World; a tusk of a Mammoth, ground to a fine powder as only giants know how; and the briar heart from a Forsworn of the Reach. Ask Quintus about each material so you learn a little more about each one.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Unmelting Snow

◆ TARGET: Summit, the Throat of the World

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find some Mammoth Tusk Powder

◆ TARGET: Grinding receptacle, Stonehill Bluff

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take a Forsworn Heart

◆ TARGET: Forsworn Briarheart, Red Eagle Redoubt

◆ A Query from Quintus

NOTE This quest has several prerequisites: You must have completed Main Quest: Throat of the World and Side Quest: The White Phial. Then you must have progressed your adventure by three days (72 hours) from the time you finished the Side Quest. Finally, you must be in a city for a courier to appear and find you.

Time passes. You may forget about old Nurelion and the cracked phial you found for him—that is, until a courier appears in a town that you're visiting (providing you've done all the prerequisites for starting this quest). He has an urgent letter from Quintus Navale in Windhelm that must be delivered. Open the letter and read it to begin this quest. It seems that Quintus has been researching methods of repairing the Phial, and he may now be able to... with your help.

➤ Letter from Quintus Navale

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Quintus Navale

◆ TARGET: Quintus, in the White Phial, in Windhelm

◆ A Cracked Concoction

Material 1: The Summit of Skyrim

Head to the Throat of the World, either by the precarious trek to High Hrothgar and through the deep mist, up to Paarthurnax's meditation place, or by Fast-Traveling, as you'll already have visited this perch during the Main Quest. Climb past Paarthurnax to a steep sloped area and an unmelting snowbank. Activate it to remove some snow.

➤ Unmelting Snow

Material 2: Among the Giants

Now travel to the mountains south and slightly west of Dawnstar, and climb to the large giants' camp of Stonehill Bluff. The place is surrounded by rocks on three sides, so the entrance and exit are the same. Head into the bluff, and check one of the grinding receptacles near a campfire; the Mammoth Tusk Powder is in there. You may take it without being attacked by the giants roaming this area, but you've got to be quick!

➤ Mammoth Tusk Powder

Material 3: Slaughter at Red Eagle Redoubt

The final ingredient is the magically enhanced heart of a Forsworn Briarheart. Any Briarheart will do; if you don't already have one, find one lurking atop the mountains on the Reach's eastern edge. You're heading to Red Eagle Redoubt, accessible via a lengthy ascent from the Karth River near Sky Haven Temple. Approach the entrance, and remove all Forsworn threats from the exterior before entering the interior, known as Red Eagle Ascent.

Pass the wooden stakes and skewered animals, and bring your weapons to bear on a couple of Forsworn in a gloomy grotto you can ignite if you blast the oily floor with fire. Climb up the sloping path and steps to an upper grotto, which features a flat stone plateau with an altar on it and four or five additional foes. Climb the wooden steps, then disappear up the exit corridor that leads back out to an iron door and the Reach.

Turn right (north) and begin a battling ascent up a large set of stone steps. Make sure the Forsworn are tumbling off here in a spectacular death plummet, and not you! Head under the three stone arches as you reach a sizable Forsworn camp and further enemies, clearing the area methodically so you aren't attacked from behind. Don't rush this assault. Continue around in a clockwise circle, and trot south up the steps to the south, leading into the Sundered Towers. The Briarheart is up here. Clear the area of other foes first, before killing the Briarheart and searching the corpse. Pluck the Briar Heart from it. Then search the area for any treasure you wish to scavenge.

➤ Briar Heart

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Quintus Navale

◆ TARGET: Quintus, in the White Phial, in Windhelm

Quest Conclusion

Return to the White Phial and tell Quintus of your success. He grabs the materials from you quickly concocts a gelling agent to seal the White Phial as he heads upstairs to Nurelion's bedchamber. As he demonstrates the solidity of the White Phial, the old elf smiles, uttering the word "marvelous" before lying still on the bed.

➤ The White Phial

Postquest Activities

Alas, Nurelion dies in his bed. Quintus gives the repaired Phial back to you, for your help. To use it, pick the type of potion you want it to contain, and thereafter when you drink that potion, the empty White Phial remains in your inventory, refilling every 24 hours. Quintus is now on friendly terms with you.

🐛 Bug Hunt

This is more of a curiosity than a real quest. Five of the insect species that inhabit Skyrim have been captured and placed into jars. A single example of each can be found hidden across this realm, in the following locations:

Moth in a Jar: Trek through the Pale until you reach and explore the Falmer Hive known as Duskglow Crevice. Battle through the connecting tunnels and crypts until you reach the raised stone chambers and portcullises. A room of refuse close to the final battle houses the jar.

However, be sure the stronghold is the one from which you received the quest. Approach the Chief, and he's amazed that you managed to acquire this item. He welcomes you as a Blood-Kin, and the Orcs in the other strongholds know of your friendship with the Orcs, too.

Postquest Activities

From this point on, as long as you remain civil, you can trade and train with any of the Orcs in the strongholds throughout Skyrim.

Demise of the Atmoran Dragon Cult

Sometimes, the corporal remains of a powerful Nordic priest survives even death. Entombed with Draugr brethren, dead but dreaming, the Dragon Priest is a frightening, powerful foe to face. Now that Alduin has returned, something else stirs in the deepest Nordic barrows....

Part 1: Death of the Dragon Priests

As you explore larger and more terrifying Nordic dungeons, you may eventually stumble across a sarcophagus that contains a Dragon Priest. Named Dragon Priests have a namesake mask, and each of these facial coverings is imbued with a particular power. Obtaining all eight is a tough enough endeavor. But that is only half the story....

Part 2: Life from the Dragon Priest Masks

When you've collected one or more masks, you can wear them for the benefits detailed in the previous table. You can also head to an important and ancient location for the Cult of the Dragon Priests: the snow-swept exterior of Labyrinthian. Close to the entrance to Shalidor's Maze is a low circular building that looks almost like a dragon mound or barrow. Enter these round ruins and approach a ruined altar with a dragon's head, skeletal remains, a note, and a wooden mask. Read the note.

- Quill
- Hired Thug's Missive
- Wooden Mask

The Wooden Mask hums with an unfamiliar energy. Place it onto your face when you're outside the circular ruins, and nothing happens. However, if you don the mask while standing in the chamber with the altar, everything fades to black. When you come to, you're in what appears to be the same room, but in another time. The shattered altar is whole once more, and the place is pristine and clean. This is the Bromjunaar Sanctuary.

The altar now has eight distinct busts, one for each of the eight Dragon Priests. Activate the altar, and insert the appropriate mask into the facial slot. Once all eight masks have been returned to the altar, the central dragon's head opens its mouth, exposing one final, golden mask. You may take that mask, along with all the others if you wish. Whether you're carrying any masks or not, when you wish to return to the present, remove the Wooden Mask.

Konahrik ("Warlord")

When the wearer is relatively low on health, there is a chance the mask will knock enemies back, heal the wearer and any nearby allies, and grant a brief Fire Cloak to the wearer. In addition, there is a (much rarer) chance the mask will summon a spectral Dragon Priest to come to the wearer's aid, under the same circumstances.

Quest Conclusion

This epic quest ends when you have all ten Dragon Masks in your possession. Wear the one with the abilities or powers you wish to augment.

It may be interesting to note that the masks themselves were symbols of office for the highest-ranking priests in the Dragon Cult of the old times.

DUNGEON QUESTS AND OTHER ACTIVITIES

OVERVIEW

Delving into an unknown barrow or creeping stealthily through a long-forgotten ruin is both thrilling and terrifying. Many dungeons across Skyrim have their own self-contained Dungeon Quests. Some are full quests; others, marked with the "*" symbol, appear only as Miscellaneous Objectives. Dungeon Quests are usually unrelated to other quest types and are self-contained; you usually start and finish the quest in or close to the dungeon itself.

In addition, this section encompasses the hundreds of other activities you can try out as you explore the immense landscape. These are segmented into four distinct sections. There are:

Dungeon Activities: Smaller, self-contained explorations at a single Primary Location.

Miscellaneous Objectives: These are usually small tasks, favors or activities that occur inside a (usually friendly) settlement, not a dungeon.

Favors: Every single person in Skyrim that requires a favor is then listed in this section, along with all the types of Favors and the Thane Quests.

World Interactions and Encounters: Small random events that may occur when you enter a World Encounter location or perform other actions throughout the realm.

NOTE Cross-Referencing: Do you want to see maps and learn more about the traps, non-quest-related items, collectibles, crafting areas, and other important rooms of note in every location during these quests? Then cross-reference the location you travel to with the information on that location contained in this guide's Atlas.

Available Quests

There are 24 Dungeon Quests. For the most part, these are separate from any other quests you may have, though you may encounter them when sent to a randomly selected dungeon for another quest, or while trying to collect the Masks of the Dragon Priests.

Angarvunde

Once inside, you'll meet a rather abrupt and objectionable Dark Elf named Medresi Dran. She's attempting to reach a treasure buried deep within Angarvunde's musty corridors, but her helpers have abandoned her.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Destroy the Draugr in Angarvunde (3)

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Medresi in Angarvunde

Remove the wandering corpses. Head through into the main hub chamber where they are, and deal with them in your preferred attacking style. You return to Medresi, informing her that two doors stand in the way of your progress, and they each must be opened via further exploration. She hands you a key, which opens the doors on either side of the portcullis; these lead to a mechanism that lifts the two sections of gate.

➤ Angarvunde Key

NOTE Alternatively, you could simply kill Medresi and take her key. The Angarvunde Key is the only way to open the two side doors.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find a way to open the gates

Angarvunde Ruins

The door to the northwest leads to a small maze of interlocking corridors and rooms. Work your way through them methodically, watching for pressure plates that launch traps. When you reach the steps up to the two doors with spears blocking your path, remove them by pulling the lever between them. Head across, and weave through another series of corridors and rooms until you reach steps and a corner corridor leading back into the original Angarvunde area. Work your way to the lever in the alcove and pull it.

Angarvunde Catacombs

The door to the southeast leads to the Angarvunde Catacombs, a much deeper maze of chambers that begins with a (careful) descent down a hole. Trek along the corridors and into a Draugr crypt. Fight your way through, up some trap-filled stairs (run quickly, or after the darts are expelled), then through another tomb complex. Ascend several stone steps to reach another lever. After you yank the alcove levers on both sides of this crypt, the gate opens fully.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Medresi

Angarvunde

Medresi isn't waiting around for the likes of you; she dashes forward into the treasure room and is promptly crushed as the floor trap is sprung, impaling her into a maw of ceiling spikes. Step through the opening in the raised floor and down the spiral steps to a Word Wall.

➤ Word of Power: Animal Allegiance

ANSILVUND: A LOVE BEYOND DEATH*

NOTE Fragments of Fjori and Holgeir's story can be found in a book called "Of Fjori and Holgeir," which contains hints to solving the puzzle with the four moving pillars. You can find one of the copies on the bedroom bookshelf inside Riften Stables.

Ansivund Excavation

A Necromancer complains about babysitting an army of enthralled Draugr that are being used as slaves to excavate the ruins.

The cavern darkens, and an enraged spirit, professing to be Lu'ah Al-Skaven, threatens you for disturbing her work.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Kill Lu'ah Al-Skaven in Ansivund

Puzzle Solution: After killing the conjurer and the Draugr, check the cobwebbed stone buttress wall under the four movable pillars. From left to right, they have the following petroglyph signs: Hawk, Snake, Whale, Snake. Match those to the pillars, activate the lever, and open the portcullis to the south.

Lu'ah's Journal can be found on a table here. Take a moment to learn her tale: the sorceress was attempting to resurrect her dead husband.

➤ Lu'ah's Journal

Ansivund Burial Chambers

A disembodied voice laments that she "could not raise him" but will avenge his defilement!

Lu'ah faces you, screeches that her husband's body was burned, and attacks. Fjori and Holgeir (the Draugr Thralls that were to be the vessels for Lu'ah and her dead husband) also attack. Once all foes are dead, a ghostly image of Fjori and Holgeir appear, reunited now that Lu'ah is dead. The following can be taken from the altar:

➤ Unusual Gem

➤ Ghostblade

ANGI'S CAMP: COMPOSURE, SPEED, AND PRECISION*

TIP Before trekking to this remote locale, bring a few different bows with you to test which you prefer (although all bows work in the same way). It is beneficial to take the Eagle Eye or Steady Hand Archery perks in case the following training proves trickier than anticipated.

In the mountainous southwest corner of Falkreath Hold is a lone cabin. This is home to Angi. Listen to her story about her murdered family. Talk to her and request training, if you wish to improve your Archery skill.

Equip your favored bow, follow Angi down to the practice range, and listen to her instructions. Take the Practice Arrows tied to the front-right boundary post. If you require more during the course of this practice, request them from Angi. Now look ahead and spot all four of the practice targets (including the one in the distance, behind the three nearer ones). When you're completing a challenge, remain within the boundary or you'll fail.

➤ Practice Arrow (10)

First Challenge:

Hit the middle target (of the three closer targets in front of you)

Reward: Archery increased by 1

Hit the left target (of the three closer targets in front of you)

Reward: Archery increased by 1

Hit the right target (of the three closer targets in front of you)

Reward: Archery increased by 1

Second Challenge:

Hit the three closest targets within eight seconds (in any order), after Angi counts to three.

Reward: Archery Increased by 1

Third Challenge:

Hit the target far in the back, behind the front cluster of targets.

Reward: Archery increased by 1

Fourth Challenge:

Hit all four of the targets within ten seconds (in any order), after Angi counts to three.

Reward: Archery increased by 1

If you're having trouble with any of these challenges, try the following:

Zoom in to aim your shots to begin with, to gain a larger surface area. But don't do this during the two timed challenges, as this slows you down.

Crouch down so your bow is horizontal for increased accuracy.

You want to hit the tiny hole in the very center of each target. But you'll need to aim a little higher than the target so the arrow arcs through the air and strikes it accurately.

Move over the boundary, and inspect the targets at closer range if you wish, prior to an attempt.

During the fourth challenge, it is better to aim at the far target first, as this is most difficult to hit.

Aside from the increases to your Archery skill, once the fourth challenge is over, speak to Angi (using pleasant responses). She thanks you for keeping her company and not attempting to murder her. She then hands you a gift. After that, you can leave this windswept place (after checking her bedside table for the Treasure Map V).

➤ Angi's Bow

BARD'S LEAP SUMMIT: LEAP BEFORE YOU LOOK*

Fight the Forsworn to reach the top of Lost Valley Redoubt. The "Bard's Leap" itself is the precarious and breathtaking outlook over the waterfall. Here is the best way to survive the drop to the water below: use Whirlwind Sprint to make sure you get enough distance to clear the rocks, or use Ethereal Form before jumping off. The spectral shape of Azzadal, a Bardic Ghost, appears near the pool at the base of the Falls if you survive, and congratulates you for surviving the fall that he could not. He rewards you with an increase to your Speech skill.

➤ Speech Skill increase

BLIND CLIFF CAVE: MELKA AND PETRA*

Blind Cliff Bastion

Approach Blind Cliff Cave from the main road running north to south along the river. Clamber up through the giant cavern of collapsed follies, and exit to Blind Cliff Towers. Clamber up the exterior towers until you reach the ominous iron door leading to Blind Cliff Bastion. A caged Hagraven named Melka greets you. She is angry that another witch named Petra has caged her up. You can speak to her about being released and about her adversary. There is a "pretty staff" in it for you.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Kill the Hagraven Petra

To continue this quest, release Melka or explore on your own. Follow Melka to the rudimentary puzzle, which she tells you how to solve to avoid the dart traps (pull the middle handle). After passing through and up into another chamber (where Melka slays any Forsworn that you don't), she opens a stone wall panel leading to a lever. Pull the lever to stop the swinging blades in the corridor linking to Melka's parlor.

She waits for you to open the iron door connected to Petra's tower. Storm the chamber and defeat Petra here, along with her Forsworn bodyguards. Then return to Melka, demand a reward, and you're given the Hagraven's staff.

➤ Eye of Melka

Darklight Tower (Interior)

Enter the initial chamber and you find the aftermath of a murder. A woman named Illia stands over the recently slain body and doesn't want you to jump to conclusions. Listen to her story, and she explains it was self-defense. Illia was attempting to flee the place, and the dead woman tried to stop her. She wants to leave, but suspects her own mother is set to become a Hagraven.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Help Illia reach the top of Darklight Tower

Ascend the tower, dealing with Frostbite Spiders and witches as you go. At the spear-barred door, pull the lever when you're ready to tackle a Hagraven.

Darklight Chambers

Kill more witches. At the lock (Master), Illia waits. Locate the corridor in the east wall, and face a Frostbite Spider and a second Hagraven in a fight for the key that unlocks the door.

➤ Darklight Tower Key

After a final ascent up spiral stairs to the tower's top, open a firmly locked door with the key Illia carries on her (if you kill her before reaching the top). The door leads back outside (Master). Wait for Illia, as she has a plan: to present you as a sacrifice to her mother and then kill her; the old crone is too far gone to be saved.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat Illia's mother at the top of Darklight Tower

Darklight Tower (Exterior)

Step into a small bailey on the upper crags. Illia's mother, Silvia, tells you to sit on the chair so your bloodletting can begin. Oblige Illia's mother as she is attacked by her daughter. You can stand and watch; intervene only if Illia is in danger of being killed. The quest concludes once Silvia falls. Afterward, approach Illia and invite her to join you as a Follower. She gladly accepts and mainly uses Frost magic on enemies.

➤ Staff of Hag's Wrath

➤ Follower: Illia

FORELHOST: SIEGE ON THE DRAGON CULT

Forelhost (Exterior)

Ascend the remains of the entrance tower until you spot a High Elf named Captain Valmir, who is wearing the officer's garb of the faction to which you are allied. He requires your assistance; he is on a mission to obtain a mask that a Dragon Priest named Rahgot used to own.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Obtain Rahgot's mask

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Find Skorm Snow-Strider's journal

Forelhost Stronghold (Interior)

Repel ghostly foes as the spirits of the dragon cultists appear to guard their old lair! Beware of floor triggers and traps. Pass the wall blades, entering the room to the northwest. Check the stone table, where Snow-Strider's journal is located. Now read this; it informs you why this location has so many blocked-off corridors.

➤ Skorm Snow-Strider's Journal

Work your way across the stronghold, down past the forge and kitchen. Locate the pair of wooden doors that lead to Forelhost Crypt. Before entering, watch for the fire-breathing dragon trap close to the barred doorway, and use the nearby lever to raise the portcullis blocking the doorway; this gives you quicker access to the entrance.

Forelhost Crypt

There is a cage surrounding the well (Master) close to the first main corridor. Come back here later if you can't open the cage door now.

Beware of runic floor traps as you travel farther underground and the light dwindles. Also expect a gate and dart traps prior to reaching a raised crypt. This is a dangerous location; expect a swarm of undead foes here!

Work your way to the platforms above, which lead to the other side of the barred wooden door (which you can now open if you wish). Pilfer the chest on the same raised tomb as the hardest Draugr. This contains the Forelhost Well Key. Return to the well, unlock it, and drop into the icy water. Follow the waterlogged tunnels into a chamber where the remains of a poisoned warrior (mentioned in the journal) still lie among scattered poison bottles. In the adjacent room, beware the rising floor trap.

➤ Forelhost Well Key

Forelhost Refectory

The Refectory still bears the scars (and the dead) of the battle Snow-Strider wrote about. Open the iron door and enter the great hall, then open the double doors in the south wall. Traverse the oil-splattered stone corridor (burn it to defeat the Draugr if you wish), before entering the remains of a children's burial plot. There are Orders that confirm the mass burial, surrounded by flowers you can harvest.

➤ Orders

Above the burial garden is an alchemy chamber with more steps and Draugr; you can pull a lever to raise the portcullis leading back to the great hall, or press onward and upward, past the ruins of a throne and snow blown down from above. Beware the magic trap in the winding corridor beyond, which leads straight into Forelhost's library. But the prize to find isn't a book; it is a Glass Claw.

➤ Glass Claw

Take it, and the spear bars recede from the doorway farther into the library. Head through, past an embalming room, fire trap, and more Draugr, and head up to a hall and Nordic Puzzle Door.

Puzzle Solution: Open your inventory and look at the Glass Claw you just found. The palm bears the sign of the Wolf, Owl, and Snake. Working from the outer ring in, choose the same iconography on the door, and insert the Claw.

It takes only a few steps to reach the grand burial chamber of the Dragon Priest Rahgot. He is joined by a group of Draugr bodyguards, meaning this fight is both difficult and lengthy. But once over, the rewards are worth your anguish:

- Rahgot
- Forelhost Balcony Key
- Leveled Items and Weapons
- 250 gold pieces
- Staff of Wall of Flames

TIP If you're gifted in One-Handed or Two-Handed skills, it is worth sprinting to Rahgot's tomb and hacking at the fearsome lich before he rises completely from his slumber; the more strikes you can inflict without retaliation, the better!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Valmir

◆ Forelhost (Exterior)

Use the Balcony Key to unlock the door in the southeast wall of the burial chamber. This leads back outside, to the balcony you couldn't reach when you first met Valmir. A Word Wall is just a few feet away! Once you learn the new phrase, drop down to Valmir's camp. It appears Valmir is an imposter (as he is clad in the attire of your enemy, unlike the first time you encountered him) and is now giving the same speech to convince an enemy soldier!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the imposter Valmir

➤ Word of Power: Storm Call

NOTE You now have one of the eight Masks of the Dragon Priests. Consult the Side Quest of the same name for further information.

FROSTFLOW LIGHTHOUSE: WHAT LIES BENEATH*

◆ Frostflow Lighthouse (Interior)

Inspect the corpse of Ramati, which has been savagely torn by claws. Near the fire is the body of a Chaurus. Ramati's corpse contains her husband's journal, which describes how the family came to own the lighthouse and the strange noises coming from the cellar. It also reveals a final, horrifying discovery.

In the northeast bedroom is Ramati's Journal, which details her rambunctious children Sudi and Mani and noises in the basement. It also tells how Ramati's husband made her promise to cremate him in the lighthouse torch when he died (this is important later).

In the north bedroom on a table is Sudi's Journal, which mentions the scratchings in the cellar, and a copy of the key Sudi hid in Mother's favorite keepsake.

Locate the Cellar Key in the burial urn above the fireplace, next to the collectible Torchbug in a Jar. (The Torchbug in a Jar is a unique item that can only be found here. It serves no purpose but makes for great house décor.)

- Habd's Journal
- Mani's Cellar Key
- Ramati's Journal
- Torchbug in a Jar
- Sudi's Journal

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Find the source of the murders in Frostflow Lighthouse

Unlock the cellar door (Expert) using a lockpick or Mani's Cellar Key.

◆ Frostflow Abyss

Open the gate to discover the corpse of Sudi. There are two notes nearby, and the insight into Sudi's last few days make grim reading.

- Bloodstained Note
- Scrawled Page
- Habd's Lighthouse Key

At the end of this waterlogged ice passage is a giant Chaurus Reaper; this is the source of the Frostflow Lighthouse murders.

After defeating it, you can use the Key to access the roof of the lighthouse. If you take Habd's remains from the belly of the giant Chaurus and burn them in the lighthouse torch, you receive a special blessing.

- Perk: Sailor's Repose
(+10% to Health restored from Restoration magic)

Frostmere Crypt (Exterior)

As you approach the entrance to this ruin, a well-armored warrior races down the stairs before wheeling to face the bandits that pursue her. Help her (or not), then speak with the agitated Eisa Blackthorn. You can:

Speak to her and try to calm her down. She explains that she used to be a member of the gang here but was run out over a misunderstanding. As she storms off, the quest begins.

Provoke, ignore, or attack her, and she fights back—hard. She's every bit as tough as her attitude. Cut her down and take her journal from her body, hinting at the strange occurrences inside the crypt. This also starts the quest.

► Eisa's Journal

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Learn more about the theft in Frostmere Crypt

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the stolen sword

NOTE Does Eisa's name sound familiar? If you've been to Cidhna Mine in Markarth, you might have heard her name mentioned. Eisa also figures in Hajvarr's journal in White River Watch. Skyrim's bandits really get around.

If you kill Eisa and enter the crypt without reading her journal, the quest will never show up in your quest list. While everything still plays out as described below, because you didn't get the quest, completing it won't count toward the Sideways Achievement/Trophy.

CAUTION

WHISPERS IN THE RUINS

If you're sneaking (or just proceeding carefully), there's a good chance you'll hear some chatter from the bandits prior to engaging or avoiding them:

- ◆ Just inside the crypt entrance, two bandits question why Eisa and Ra'jiir would have stolen the sword.
- ◆ As you enter the central chamber, two bandits discuss Kyr's orders to seal up the mine until he gets back.
- ◆ In the dining hall, two bandits mention that Kyr has gone down to the tunnels, and something there has been "eerie" lately.
- ◆ When you activate the lever and return to the dining hall, bandits (having run up from the tunnels) are shocked at the carnage.
- ◆ As you enter the mine tunnels, two bandits discuss their concerns. Kyr has been gone for too long....

Frostmere Crypt (Interior)

After cutting down the bandits in the first room, take the scrap of paper (it appears a couple of times), confirming that the hunt for Ra'jiir and Eisa is on. As you step out onto the upper walkway in the main chamber, you can hear some bandits talking down below, and the quest updates.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Kyr and Ra'jiir into the tunnels

◆ TARGET: Ra'jiir, in the Frostmere Depths

Follow the path around, but before descending into the dining hall, check the two bedrooms on the upper level. Kyr's log is on a side table in his bedroom. If you allowed Eisa to leave quietly before, you find her journal in the other bedroom. Once you've read both, the optional objective is complete.

Continue deeper into the ruin and down through the tunnels to reach Frostmere Depths.

► Kyr's Bounty (2) ► Kyr's Log

Frostmere Depths

You emerge in a mist-shrouded subterranean forest, not far from the crumpled form of the bandit leader, Kyr. Hear his final words. When he dies, a strange glowing light manifests near his body and silently drifts down the path ahead of you.

Follow the light deeper into the woods, and watch as a lone figure—Ra'jiir—emerges from the fog and races for the altar in the center of the grove. Just before he reaches it, a fearsome ethereal form erupts in front of him and cuts him down. The Pale Lady then turns to thwart another tomb defiler: You!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Banish the Pale Lady

The Pale Lady is a powerful Wispmother, but if you have the strength, you can defeat her. Take out her wisps to reduce the bonuses they give her, then move in for the kill. The wide expanse around the tomb allows you to attack from a distance and hide between bouts of combat should you need to. If you're extremely quick, you can kill Ra'jiir, too.

Or, you can pick up the Pale Blade (the sword Ra'jiir carries and drops when he dies), approach the altar, and set the blade into the sword stand. This restores the seal on the Pale Lady's tomb, banishing her and her wisps in a blast of energy.

If you banish the Pale Lady by placing her blade atop the altar, you can take it again, breaking the seal and causing her to attack once more. You can repeat this until you decide to kill the Pale Lady, to flee, or to make the Pale Lady disappear again.

After dealing with the Pale Lady, approach the ruins to the north, where a Word Wall waits. Absorb the Word of Power, then take the exit here back to the crypts above.

► The Pale Blade

► Word of Power: Ice Form

NOTE The Pale Blade is a good weapon to use, with leveled Frost and Fear enchantments. If you're curious about the Pale Lady's nature, find the book called Lost Legends, which tells her story in passing, both as a children's fable and as the truth (which Ra'jiir finally realized too late during this exploration).

High Gate Ruins (Interior)

Enter these old Draugr catacombs and meet up with a wizard named Anska. Speak with her, and she's quick to ask for help. This plucky adventurer and powerful fire mage has already begun advancing toward Vokun's Throne Room, where she believes she will find a scroll tying her family's history to that of the hero of yore, Ysgramor. Your reward for helping her? Any loot you wish, aside from the scroll. Agree, and the quest begins. Battle through more powerful Draugr, past a gate trap, and to a Nordic puzzle chamber.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Help Anska Retrieve Her Scroll

Puzzle Solution: Look up and to the south. Note the sequence of Hawk, Whale, Fox, Snake. The northern ceiling has the same sequence, but the third carving has fallen to the ground. Now match up the pedestals (which also contain a specific animal carving), and activate the lever of the Hawk, Whale, Fox, and Snake pedestals to match the ceiling order. There are two Hawk pedestals; it doesn't matter which one you activate first. If you're successful, the grating swings open. Descend the spiral stairs, and enter door to High Gate Ruins Catacombs.

High Gate Ruins Catacombs

There are more traps (and Draugr) as you progress, so beware of floor triggers. Head through the altar room, down the long hall to a second altar room, where three levers must be activated:

Puzzle Solution: Pull the lever in the center of the room. The next is in the right alcove, fight the Draugr guarding it, activate the lever, and face a second foe in the left alcove before activating the alcove lever behind it. This opens the portcullis allowing you into Vokun's Throne Room.

Step into the Throne Room, which seems to be honoring an ancient serpent god, and wait for the lich to appear. Be sure Anska survives this confrontation, and use the chamber's columns to hide from the fiend's more deadly attacks. Defeat Vokun, and then enter the chamber behind the throne room; this is a ceremonial altar chamber where the chanting reaches a crescendo, and you receive a Word of Power! Be sure you learn that and take the Sealed Scroll.

➤ Vokun ➤ Word of Power: Storm Call ➤ Sealed Scroll

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return the Scroll to Anska

◆ TIP Removing Vokun's mask is imperative if you're also trying to finish Side Quest: Masks of the Dragon Priests*.

High Gate Ruins (Interior)

Exit the chamber via the north door at the end of the narrow corridor. Locate Anska, handing over the Scroll (which is otherwise useless to you and can't be sold). Anska is most grateful and gives you a gift.

HILLGRUND'S TOMB: ANCESTRAL WORSHIP

Hillgrund's Tomb (Exterior)

Strike up a conversation at the entrance, and Golldir explains that he is worried for his aunt, who ventured into their family crypt to stop a necromancer. Agree to help Golldir rid the crypt of Vals Veran.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat Vals Veran

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Protect Golldir

Hillgrund's Tomb (Interior)

Dispatch Draugr while keeping an eye on Golldir and stepping in if the undead are threatening to him. Descend to a connecting hallway, where Golldir's worst fears are confirmed; his aunt Agna lies in a pool of fresh blood. The nearby door is barred from the other side, so continue west, to a cave-in and through a Draugr-infested tomb corridor. The tomb opens into a deeper and much larger mausoleum where the dead rise again.

Puzzle Solution:

When the coast is clear, pull the chain next to the bear carving, and an exit door opens. The double iron doors lead to the main crypt and an audience with the warlock Vals Veran.

Your tasks are twofold: killing Vals Veran and keeping Golldir alive (although this isn't necessary for quest completion). Strike at Vals Veran as often as you can, before backing off and dealing with the Draugr that have been summoned. The Draugr that close in on Golldir, or if Vals Veran focuses his attacks on the Nord, are your primary concerns. Continue the combat until both Draugr and Veran crumple to the ground.

Search Veran's corpse for a Crypt Key. A Chest Key is on Golldir, along with two missives; read them to gain a better understanding of the threats Vals Veran was imposing. The quest concludes after the battle.

Use the Crypt Key to open the iron door (Hard) atop the ceremonial stairs; this offers a quick exit. Golldir's chest in the antechamber beyond can be unlocked using the Chest Key. Assuming Golldir is alive, and you didn't start ransacking his family tomb, he is happy to become a Follower.

➤ Hillgrund's Tomb Crypt Key ➤ Note from Agna
➤ Hillgrund's Tomb Chest Key ➤ Leveled gold reward
➤ Letter to Golldir ➤ Follower: Golldir

◆ NOTE Golldir is annoyed if you start stealing loot and opening chests, but not to the extent that this quest fails.

Mistwatch North Tower

Before the first wooden door, Christer calls to you, explaining that he believes his wife, Fjola, is being held in the tower somewhere. He gives you the key to Mistwatch and hopes you'll rescue her. Or, you can kill him and take the key, which opens the (otherwise sealed) wooden door.

Mistwatch Key

◇ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Search Mistwatch for Fjola

Mistwatch East Tower

After battling bandits to the exterior lower balcony, up through the West Tower, out to the higher balcony, and finally to the top of the East Tower, you encounter the bandit leader herself. If you don't automatically attack her, you mention Fjola's name, and she reveals she's Fjola, leaving her husband and the boring life back at the farm for a career in banditry. She wants him to leave and pretend that she's dead; she hands you her wedding band to try and convince him to leave.

Fjola's Wedding Band

◇ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Return to Christer

Mistwatch North Tower (Return)

Head back down to Christer and show him the wedding band. He now believes she's alive but not here, and leaves after giving you a small reward.

Levelled gold reward

◇ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Report back to Fjola

Mistwatch East Tower (Return)

Back at the top of Mistwatch, tell Fjola that Christer won't bother her again, and she tells you she's in your debt and will repay it someday. For the moment, though, this quest is over.

MOSS MOTHER CAVERN: HUNTER AND HUNTED*

NOTE

In order to receive rumors regarding the disappearance of Valdr's hunting party, you must be Level 16. If you aren't, you won't receive any information in Falkreath and must stumble upon the entrance to Moss Mother Cavern to begin this quest. Beware: The beasts may be too tough for you to overcome at lower levels!

Dead Man's Drink (Falkreath)

Stop by Dead Man's Drink and strike up a conversation inside. Among the other scuttlebutt, the innkeeper (Valga Vincia, or Narri) mentions that a hunting party has recently gone missing. It was led by a man named Valdr.

◇ OBJECTIVE: Locate Valdr's Hunting Party

Moss Mother Cavern (Exterior)

You hear several increasingly feeble shouts as you trudge down the path toward Moss Mother Cavern. Valdr waits on a log, bleeding heavily. You can:

Hand him one or more healing potions; any standard healing potion will do.

Cast a healing spell on him.

Cast a healing spell with an area of effect, and catch Valdr in the area.

Or leave him to his fate. If you enter the cavern without healing him, Valdr dies, and you miss this quest entirely.

◇ OBJECTIVE: Heal Valdr's Injuries

After you treat his injuries, Valdr explains his dilemma: The bodies of his friends are still inside the cave, being torn apart by beasts. You can offer to help him clear out the cavern, or tell him to stay outside while you head in alone. Valdr is a capable archer (especially if fully healed), but he can be killed, which causes you to fail the quest. The choice is yours. If you find the enemies inside too difficult, you can always leave and come back later. Valdr will remain at the entrance and wait for you indefinitely.

◇ OBJECTIVE: Return to Valdr

Moss Mother Cavern (Interior)

Enter this sun-dappled grotto, and you'll spot a fresh kill. Ari lies in a splatter of blood. There's little time to search her; expect a bear attack followed by a Spriggan. Try to edge into the cavern slowly so you aren't swarmed by too many enemies. Farther inside, you find the corpse of Niels, along with two additional Spriggans who emerge from the trees around you.

With all the enemies dispatched, speak with Valdr or return to him outside. He hands over a dagger Ari gave him when he first joined their hunting party.

Valdr's Lucky Dagger

If you come back later, two small cairns have been set close to the cavern entrance: the graves of Ari and Niels. Valdr returns to the Dead Man's Drink in Falkreath, where he's always happy to see you again.

Understone Keep

Meet Calcelmo at the entrance to the excavation site, and tell him you wish to see Nchuand-Zel. In order to proceed, he asks you to defeat Nimhe, the "poisoned one," a giant Frostbite Spider. You receive the key to the dig site. Or, you can simply ignore Calcelmo and his spider problem (which isn't part of this quest), and unlock the giant bronze door to the Nchuand-Zel Excavation Site (Adept).

➤ Key to Nchuand-Zel

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Kill Nimhe inside Nchuand-Zel

Nchuand-Zel Excavation Site

Head through the connecting chambers, down the pit chamber, through the cobwebbed spider chambers, to an excavation entrance room where Nimhe attacks. Fight her or flee. Defeating her completes the Miscellaneous Objective.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Tell Calcelmo that Nimhe is dead

On the platform slightly above Nimhe's intrusion point is a dead Imperial named Alethius. Check his corpse for some notes, which officially starts this quest. Read the note: It mentions chaperoning some researchers into these vast dwarven catacombs. Cut through the cobwebs, heading south into Nchuand-Zel.

➤ Alethius's Notes

◆ OBJECTIVE: Recover Stromm's journal

Nchuand-Zel

This is a giant open cavern with numerous towers and sloping paths linking them. Fight through the Falmer and down to the door leading to Nchuand-Zel Quarters.

Nchuand-Zel Quarters

Stromm's body is located near a small tree and fire runes on the floor. Avoid them, but inspect the corpse, and read the journal as the objectives update. There is more research to find.

➤ Stromm's Diary

◆ OBJECTIVE: Recover Erj's journal

◆ OBJECTIVE: Recover Krag's journal

◆ OBJECTIVE: Recover Staub's journal

Nchuand-Zel Armory

Return to the main cavern, and descend to the bottom of the chamber. Wade over to the door and enter Nchuand-Zel Armory. Battle Falmer to the chamber with the two guardian Dwarven Spheres. Erj's corpse lies between them. Retrieve his journal.

➤ Erj's Notes

Nchuand-Zel

The other exit in the Armory leads you back into the main cavern, onto a previously inaccessible platform, where a Dwarven Centurion waits motionless, close to the body of Krag. Take his journal. Head up the slope into Nchuand-Zel Control.

➤ Krag's Journal

Nchuand-Zel Control

Staubin lies dead in a connecting corridor inside the Control district. Take his book; your search for the Lost Expedition is almost over.

➤ Staubin's Diary

◆ OBJECTIVE: Reactivate Nchuand-Zel's automated defenses

To switch the defenses on (which activates all the Dwarven Spiders, Spheres, and Centurions, who then clear the districts of Falmer), head into the control room with the grinding cogs and pistons, and pull the lever.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find someone who knows about the expedition

Understone Keep

Exit the Nchuand-Zel Control area and move back into the main cavern and up the earthen ledge, dropping down to the upper walkway. Flee north back into the excavation site, passing Nimhe and winding your way to Understone Keep. Speak to Calcelmo. Tell him you killed Nimhe (if this occurred), and then ask if he's researching the Dwemer. Calcelmo pays a good amount of coin for each research book you return. Don't forget to keep on asking him about researching the Dwemer to off-load all the books.

➤ Dwemer Museum Key ➤ 300 gold pieces (x4)

◀ Nilheim Exterior

Meet a wounded hunter named Telrav on the path just east of the bridge spanning the waterfall. He wants you to guide him safely to his camp in the nearby ruins of Nilheim, and you'll be rewarded.

◊ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Escort Telrav to his camp

Cross the bridge, following Telrav up and into the camp, where he tells you to wait, draws his bow, and assaults you along with four of his bandit mates. It's a trap!

◊ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Kill Telrav

Quickly quell this ambush, and slay Telrav and the other riffraff. Optionally, you can sneak into Nilheim and defeat all the bandits first, or slay Telrav when you meet him.

RAGNVALD: OTAR'S MAD GUARDIANS*

◀ Ragnvald Temple

Battle Draugr and inspect a strange sarcophagus, which has two round divots into which to insert some kind of ceremonial key. Atop the stairs are spears barring your way.

◊ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Unlock the Sarcophagus in Ragnvald

◀ Ragnvald Crypts

Fight more Draugr to reach a ceremonial crypt. Take Saerek's Skull Key from its pedestal to continue. Guardian Saerek is roused from slumber when you do; defeat him before returning to the Temple area.

➤ Saerek's Skull Key

◀ Ragnvald Canal

Defeat more Draugr to reach a second ceremonial crypt. Remove Torsten's Skull Key from its pedestal to continue. Guardian Torsten is awakened from his rest and attacks you; defeat him before heading back to the Temple.

➤ Torsten's Skull Key

◀ Ragnvald Temple (Return)

Once you are back at the sarcophagus, place each skull into the divot slot and prepare for battle. You've just released Otar the Mad, the dreaded Dragon Priest the Guardians laid to rest long ago. This is part of the Side Quest: *Masks of the Dragon Priests. Once you are able, run up through the retracting spears atop the steps and into the ceremonial chamber with a Word Wall at the far end. Learn this Word of Power before you leave.

➤ Otar ➤ Word of Power: Kyne's Peace

REBEL'S CAIRN: THE LEGEND OF RED EAGLE*

◀ Rebel's Cairn (Interior)

Pedestal Cavern: Just inside the main cavern, locate the dead adventurer and pry the book from his hand. It tells the tale of Faolan Red Eagle, an ancient hero of the Reach. Read it to begin the following objective. The weapon slot in the pedestal will not accept any of your blades (unless you have Red Eagle's Fury already).

➤ The Legend of Red Eagle

◊ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Find Red Eagle's sword

TIP This quest can also be started by finding a copy of The Legend of Red Eagle elsewhere in Skyrim. This book appears in any number of locations, such as Farengar's study in Dragonsreach. Or, you can start the quest by clearing Red Eagle Redoubt first, claiming Red Eagle's Fury from the high-level enemy and reading the book (Red Eagle's Rite) on the altar nearby.

◀ Red Eagle Redoubt (Exterior)

Follow the riverside trail up into the hills to reach your first objective, a cave entrance leading into Red Eagle Ascent. Head through the cave and back out into the exterior, then climb the stairs heading north, slaying Forsworn as you go. Continue up into the cliffside Forsworn Camp, looking for a Forsworn Briarheart on the stone altar plateau at the top, close to the entrance to the Sundered Towers. The Briarheart carries a key to the tower nearby and the sword you seek, Red Eagle's Fury.

➤ Red Eagle's Fury ➤ Red Eagle Tower Key

◊ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Unlock the secret of Red Eagle's Tomb

After defeating the boss, you can explore the Sundered Towers, scavenging for items and taking in the awesome view from atop the towers.

Rebel's Cairn

Pedestal Cavern: Return to Rebel's Cairn and insert Red Eagle's Fury into the weapon slot on the pedestal. A wall section slides away in front (east) of you.

Red Eagle's Tomb: Continue down the passage and enter the Red Eagle's secret crypt. As Red Eagle emerges from his sarcophagus, several skeletons rise around him. Cut them down and ransack the tomb for its treasures.

Pedestal Cavern: As you leave, you'll notice that the sword you placed in the weapon slot now glows with a brilliant light. Draw it forth, and claim the more powerful Red Eagle's Bane!

➤ Red Eagle's Bane

SHROUD HEARTH BARROW: WILHELM'S SPECTER*

Ivarstead (Vilemyr Inn)

Visit the Vilemyr Inn and speak to Wilhelm, who believes a ghost haunts Shroud Hearth Barrow, the ruin atop the hill. Offer to look into it for him.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Investigate Shroud Hearth Barrow

Shroud Hearth Barrow (Interior)

Head down the spiral steps to find a closed portcullis, where a specter urges you to leave. After he delivers his ghostly warning, move into the next room, which has four levers.

Puzzle Solution: Three of the four levers move one or more of the portcullises (there are three ahead of you in the junction). The fourth, on the far right, launches darts at you, so always ignore it. To open the two portcullises ahead (southwest) of you, make sure levers 1 and 3 are up and 2 and 4 are down.

As you head deeper into the ruins, the ghost you saw earlier attacks! Kill him...and notice that his body suddenly looks a lot more substantial. The "ghost" of the barrows turns out to be treasure hunter Wyndelius Gatharian, who Wilhelm may have mentioned. The journal on the table explains everything: Wyndelius has been using a unique potion, the Philter of the Phantom, to impersonate a ghost and keep the townsfolk at bay while he searched for a way into the ruins, but the potion seems to have driven him a bit mad. Take the journal, then return to Wilhelm at the Vilemyr Inn.

➤ Wyndelius's Journal

➤ Philter of the Phantom (2)

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Bring Wyndelius's Journal to Wilhelm

NOTE The Philter of the Phantom is a unique item that briefly makes you look like a ghost! While fun, it doesn't have any functional effects.

Puzzle Solution: At the four levers, you'll notice the portcullis back to the surface is stopping your progress. Place all four levers in the down position to raise the portcullis, allowing you to exit.

Ivarstead (Vilemyr Inn)

Show Wyndelius's Journal to Wilhelm at the Vilemyr Inn to receive the Sapphire Dragon Claw you need to explore the interior of the barrows.

➤ Sapphire Dragon Claw

Shroud Hearth Barrow (Interior)

Retrace your steps, opening the portcullises as before, then head southwest to a Nordic Puzzle Door.

Puzzle Solution: The door consists of three large, rotating rings. Each ring has three animals symbols plated into it. The puzzle solution is actually on the palm of the Sapphire Dragon Claw; rotate it in your inventory to see the three circular petroglyph carvings on the Claw's palm. Move the rings so the Moth, Owl, and Wolf appear on the outer, middle, and inner rings, respectively. Then insert the Sapphire Dragon Claw into the keyhole.

In the next chamber, the portcullises slam shut on you as the Draugr begin climbing out of their sarcophagi. Fight them if you wish, but use the lever in the northeast alcove to open the portcullises, allowing you to continue.

After defeating the skeletons in the pool of oil and the trap-filled crypt, you'll enter another crypt where the doors shut and lock on you. Slay the last Draugr in front of the locked iron door to claim the key to the door, or just unlock it yourself (Expert). Then head into a canal area, with another puzzle to solve.

➤ Shroud Hearth Barrow Key

Puzzle Solution: To lower the bridge over the canal, open the double wooden doors. Step into the inner chamber and stand on the pressure plate. Four stone walls begin to turn, eventually revealing a carving in each alcove. Note the carvings, and turn the pillars outside to match that sequence. Or simply ignore this and twist the pillars so that the following are shown from left to right: Whale, Hawk, Snake, Whale.

Shroud Hearth Depths (Interior)

Inside the stepped tomb chamber, skeletons and Draugr emerge from their coffins to face you. As you cut them down, more emerge, until the final high-level Draugr clambers out of the tomb at the top of the structure.

Kill him, lowering the bridge and a stone door on the other side. Beyond is a large treasure chest and a Word Wall. Then exit via the iron door to the northwest.

➤ Word of Power: Kyne's Peace

SLEEPING TREE CAMP: THE SECRET AT THE SLEEPING TREE*

Begin this quest in two different ways:

By listening to a rumor from any of the barkeeps dotted around Skyrim.

Or by stumbling upon Sleeping Tree Camp, located west of Whiterun, in the Tundra plains.

Beware of lumbering mammoths and their giant shepherds. Give them a wide berth and they won't attack, or slay them if you wish. Your main concern here is the strange tree growing in a pond of eerie purple water. If you approach it and activate the spigot, you can drain a single potion of Sleeping Tree Sap. You aren't able to siphon off another bottle for another few days. A bottle isn't needed to accomplish this.

The small cave below the mammoth skull adjacent to the pond is another place to investigate, but watch for an irate giant inside. Locate the body of a dead Orc named Ulag. Among his possessions is another bottle of Sap and a note; take both and read Ysolda's Message. The message instructs the now-deceased Ulag to bring any Sleeping Tree Sap to a woman named Ysolda, at her stall in Whiterun. Before you leave, quickly open the treasure chest in the cave; there's usually some gold and a couple of bottles of Sleeping Tree Sap to gather. Don't leave camp without them!

➤ Sleeping Tree Sap ➤ Ysolda's Message

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Ysolda about Sleeping Tree Sap

Ysolda is usually inside or near her house in the southern part of Whiterun's walled city or is walking to a stall. Speak with her, tell her you've some Sap to sell, and trade as many bottles as you wish. You can return to Sleeping Tree Camp and siphon off another batch of Sap, but don't expect the tree to regenerate sap immediately: This can take anywhere from three days to a month.

➤ 150 gold pieces (per Sap bottle)

◆ NOTE Sleeping Tree Sap is a powerful narcotic that fortifies a user's health by 100 for 45 seconds. However, it also blurs vision and slows down the recipient by 25 percent, so use it with caution! Such Sap is also available to purchase from certain Khajiit caravaners on the roads of Skyrim. If you need another Sap fix, return to Sleeping Tree Camp in a month or so.

SOUTHRIDGE SANCTUM: THE SAVIOR OF SELVENI NETHRI*

Southridge Sanctum

Entrance Cavern: Defeat the Spellsworn at the entrance, and kill any other foes (except for Pumpkin the fox, in the small cage) as you head up the interior cavern slope.

Spider Cave: Continue through interlocking tunnels, and defeat all Frostbite Spiders when they swarm you.

Spider Warren: Selveni Nethri is tied up in spiderwebs in the center of the Sanctum. Hack or burn the web away. She explains that Bashnag's coven chased her out and left her for dead down here. Tell her to wait while you clear out the rest of the cave.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Help Selveni Nethri escape the cave

Bashnag's Coven: Kill anything you meet between Nethri and a confrontation with the Warlock Bashnag. Then explore the rest of the Sanctum and leave no enemy alive. Feel free to loot the place.

Spider Warren: Return to Selveni Nethri, tell her it is safe to exit, and follow her to the entrance cavern and out into Skyrim.

TREVA'S WATCH: INFILTRATION

Treva's Watch Exterior

Exterior Road: Meet Stalleo and his bodyguards camped out to the east of the fortification, close to the bridge. He has been forced out of his home by men loyal to Brurid, one of his rivals. Agree to help him, and begin this quest.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Use the back door to gain access to Treva's Watch

Treva's Watch

Entrance: You meet bandits on this sloped tunnel. Burn them all by firing an arrow at the oil lamp above them, or attack normally. Now work your way through this structure, slaying bandits along the way. A pile of corpses in the barrel room indicates where forces loyal to Stalleo have been slaughtered. There is a bandit chief to slay, but killing and exploring are optional.

Exterior Courtyard: Move to the ground-level exit to the east, open it, and pull the lever in the small wooden lean-to just outside the door. This opens the previously impenetrable main gates, retracting the spears blocking Stalleo and his men.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet up with Stalleo in the courtyard

Continue the fight in the courtyard (pulling the lever before or after you defeat the remaining bandits) and meet up with Stalleo when the coast is clear. He asks if you've seen his family (you haven't) and rewards you for your help.

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Valthume Vestibule (Interior)

When you first enter this evil-stained place, a ghost named Valdar approaches. It explains that you stand in the tomb of Hevnoraak, and he may have returned. Valdar has been barely containing his power and hopes you'll explore the tomb and find three vessels that hold the power to vanquish Hevnoraak. Agree to this mission as Valdar sits back down on the throne where he died.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Collect the Vessels (3)

Expect numerous traps and attacks by Draugr and Frostbite Spiders as you search the interlocking chambers of this crypt. The specter of Hevnoraak intermittently appears and drifts off; you cannot affect this ethereal being, but its significance means you're making progress.

Valthume

The first Vessel is inside the coffin of a high-level Draugr, in a dead-end chamber to the east, with open (but inaccessible) wind tunnels up to the surface.

➤ Opaque Vessel

Valthume Catacombs

The second Vessel is through the portcullis (check the wall alcove to the right for the pull chain) in the northwest corner of the vertical Draugr crypt, toward the center of this section of Valthume.

➤ Opaque Vessel

Valthume Vestibule

Continue to fight your way through more Draugr and Frostbite Spiders. Your way is temporarily blocked by a Nordic Puzzle Door.

➤ Iron Claw

Puzzle Solution: The door consists of three rings that rotate when you activate them. Each of the them have three animals plated into the structure. The central keyhole is unlocked using the Iron Claw; this puzzle is inaccessible without it, as the puzzle solution is on the palm of the Iron Claw. Rotate it in your inventory to see the three circular petroglyph carvings on the Claw's palm. Move the rings so the Dragon, Hawk, and Wolf appear on the outer, middle, and inner rings, respectively. Then insert the Iron Claw into the keyhole.

Just beyond the door is a battle with Draugr guarding a pedestal with the last Vessel on it. Don't forget to approach the Word Wall to the west, and absorb a Word of Power.

➤ Opaque Vessel

➤ Word of Power: Aura Whisper

◆ OBJECTIVE: Perform the ritual with Valdar

Valthume

Back in the throne room close to the entrance, Valdar informs you that the vessels contain the Dragon Priest's blood. Emptying them into the nearby scone is likely to remove any chance Hevnoraak has of regaining his former powers. Oblige Valdar by pouring out the three vessels and then sit on the throne.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat Hevnoraak

Slay this Dragon Priest, concentrating on cutting him down, rather than the Storm Thralls he summons. The quest concludes once this battle ends and Valdar has spoken to you, urging you to take the iron mask. This is part of Side Quest: Masks of the Dragon Priests*.

➤ Hevnoraak

VOLUNRUUD: SILENCED TONGUES

Volunruud (Interior)

◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate the Ceremonial Weapons

Enter the barrow. Beware of skeletons. Choose either path at the junction and search the entire area for a crypt containing an Archaic Nord Helmet sitting in a skull. The adjacent chamber has a Ceremonial Sword to take from the coffin. Watch for a Draugr ambush afterward.

➤ Ceremonial Sword

The path to the northwest leads to a tomb and a path leading down into a lower throne room with multiple floor traps and a Ceremonial Axe above the throne. Remove that from its wall coupling.

➤ Ceremonial Axe

◆ OBJECTIVE: Open the Elder's Cairn

Backtrack to the hub chamber and head north, to the Elder's Cairn door. Place both ceremonial weapons into their slots, and the door grinds open.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat Kvenel

Head to the Elder's Cairn of Kvenel the Tongue, where the powerful Nord warrior's spirit still haunts. The ghost brandishes two very real versions of the ceremonial weapons you found earlier. Defeat the foe, watching out for his Shouts and Frost Thralls. Then search the corpse for the weapons themselves. Before leaving, check the upper steps that lead to a Word Wall.

➤ Edux

➤ Okin

➤ Word of Power: Aura Whisper

NOTE One of Kvenel the Tongue's weapons may be lost to the ether when he dies, so don't expect to obtain both of them. The type of weapon is also randomly determined.

Winterhold

Quest Start 1: Visit

Birna's House in the Hold City of Winterhold first, and speak to her. She's done a bad deal on a trinket she wants rid of. Pay her 50 gold pieces. She tells you to come back if you find anything of interest inside Yngol Barrow, where this is supposed to be placed.

Coral Dragon Claw

Quest Start 2: Or simply enter Yngol Barrow and locate the Coral Dragon Claw during your exploration. You never need speak to Birna (she won't have knowledge of the Claw if you find it this way).

Yngol Barrow (Exterior)

To further your knowledge of the tale of Yngol, read the book on the small shrine in front of the Barrow entrance.

Yngol and the Sea-Ghosts

Yngol Barrow (Interior)

This tomb is suspiciously quiet. You are joined by an ever-increasing number of strange little spirit balls that bounce and seem to act with an otherworldly intelligence. Continue until you reach the portcullis chamber with the lever in front of it. Don't trigger the dart trap by moving the lever yet! Instead, search the dead scholar, removing his book and reading it.

Notes on Yngol Barrow

Puzzle Solution: The book is the key here, as it refers to transcription of carvings in this room:

"Man in his throne, so should he be": This refers to the throne and skeleton to your right.

"Whale in the sea, so should he be": This refers to the pillar to the right of the throne, which is being splashed by water. Change it so the Whale is shown.

"Eagle in Sun's Sky, so should he be": This refers to the pillar bathed in light, left of you. Change it so the Hawk is shown.

"Snake in the weed, so should he be": This refers to the grass-covered pillar. Change that so the Snake is shown.

Now pull the lever. Enter the next chamber, where you'll find the Coral Dragon's Claw on a dais if you haven't received it at the start of this quest.

Coral Dragon Claw

Continue deeper into the barrow until you reach a Nordic Puzzle Door.

Puzzle Solution: The door consists of three rings that rotate. Each of the them has three animals plated into the structure. The puzzle solution is on the palm of the Coral Dragon Claw; rotate it in your inventory to see the three circular petroglyph carvings on the Claw's palm. Move the rings so the Snake, Wolf, and Moth appear on the outer, middle, and inner rings, respectively. Then insert the Coral Dragon Claw into the keyhole.

Head into the resting place of Yngol. The spirit balls of energy congeal and form into Yngol's Shade, which must be fought. Then take Yngol's Helm from the skeletal remains of the warrior, and any other treasure you wish to ransack. Exit via the spiral steps to the southeast.

Yngol's Helm

MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVES

This section of the guide deals with the dozens of Miscellaneous Objectives that appear in your Quest menu throughout your adventures. Like Favors, these are straightforward tasks with modest rewards, but some have unique elements, such as unlocking a dungeon or giving you access to a previously restricted area.

These are separated into Innkeeper Objectives (scuttlebutt and rumor you might hear at your favorite tavern) and Miscellaneous Objectives in each major settlement of Skyrim, separated by Hold. Note that each of these increases your relationship with the citizen you're doing the Favor for, which is important for your standing within a particular city (if you wish to complete any Thane Tasks).

Some Miscellaneous Objectives were important enough for us to flag with a quest name and the "*" symbol. The quest name won't appear in your Quest menu, but the Miscellaneous Objectives will be listed.

MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVES: INNKEEPERS

The following innkeepers are a good source for scuttlebutt across Skyrim. There is a (random) chance that they point you toward the start of a Side Quest or Daedric Quest, or contact with the Thieves Guild or Dark Brotherhood. They can also (randomly) provide you with Bounty Quests. Here are the innkeepers of Skyrim to check and the four types of Bounty Quests, which can be repeated:

FAVORS

Favors are miscellaneous objectives or small activities that you can find throughout Skyrim. Favors are controlled by the game's Radiant Story system, which uses a variety of factors to determine when to start a given quest. This means that not all Favors will be available at all times; in particular, you can only be on one Favor of each type at a time. For example, if you start one Rare Item Hunt, you must finish it before beginning another.

This section details all of the available Favors you can attempt during your exploration of Skyrim. Note that each of these increases your Relationship with the citizen you're doing the Favor for, which is important for your standing within a particular city. If the citizen isn't a resident of the city, then you perform the Favor simply to accrue a reward, to pass the time, or to be a pleasant person. This chapter is segmented into three parts:

Part 1—Activity Favors: Deals with manual labor you can do to earn an honest pay. Which you can then share with beggars if you wish.

Part 2—Favors for Citizens: Lists every resident in Skyrim who has a job for you to do if you speak to them.

Part 3—Thane Tasks: Reveals how to become a Thane (or a land-owning, respected resident) of each particular Hold, and the house you can purchase.

PART 1: ACTIVITY FAVORS

Favor (Activity): Chopping Wood*

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest Menu list, although objectives may.

Locate Revyn Sadri (the only fellow who wants this Favor completed) in the Gray Quarter of Windhelm. He's usually in Sadri's Used Wares. Sadri has found out that a ring he purchased was stolen from Imperial Noblewoman Viola Giordano, who lives in her house in the swanky Valunstrad District. Break into her house, place the ring into her dresser, and return to Revyn.

Becoming a powerful and impressive member of Skyrim society culminates in the title "Thane." Follow our advice, and your good deeds pay off in the form of a piece of property you can purchase (and decorate) in eight of the nine Holds. In most Holds, you also get the services of your own Housecarl, a follower who waits for you in the same building as the Jarl or at your house (after purchase). You can be a Thane of multiple Holds, but there is no bonus if you're a Thane of Skyrim (that is, of all nine Holds).

NOTE "Good deeds" means helping the citizens of the Hold or Capital you're in, including the Jarl. Helping members of the Thieves Guild, Dark Brotherhood, or other guild does not count.

Proudspire Manor: A fine example of Nord architecture, and a worthy prize for helping the population of Solitude.

DAWNGUARD QUESTS

GENERAL OVERVIEW

Skyrim is under threat. The Vigilants of Stendarr are reeling after the massacre of their leaders and the burning of the sacred Hall of the Vigilant. Those who know tell of a force to the northwest, a brood of powerful night stalkers, and whisper of a prophecy called the Tyranny of the Sun that would bring perpetual darkness to the lands. Many ignore this peril out of fear or ignorance. But there is a small shaft of light in this eternal, damnable night: There is talk of the reformation of an ancient clan of vampire hunters—the Dawnguard—who will not cease until every one of the hated undead are driven from this land. Your adventuring takes you to the heart of both warring factions. But which one will you put a stake through?

This section reveals the sanctuaries and important characters from both the vampire and Dawnguard factions. After that, you will read up on the benefits of choosing to side with one over the other (which you must do during the course of the Dawnguard Main Quest), and we'll cover all of the associated quests you can attempt. Who will you side with? Is it time to draw your crossbow or sharpen your fangs?

NOTE Cross-referencing: Do you want to see maps and learn more about the traps, non-quest-related items, collectibles, crafting areas, and other important rooms of note in every location during these quests? Then cross-reference the location you travel to with the information on that location contained in the Atlas.

TIP Whose side are you on? The following information details the fortifications that the Dawnguard and the vampires use, as well as all characters who inhabit (or move to) the area. Next, we discuss the advantages of each faction (once you join one of them). Finally, we show characters who aren't strictly allied to either side. You actually don't choose a side until the end of Dawnguard Main Quest: Bloodline, but after that choice is made, there's no switching sides!

THE DAWNGUARD

The Dawnguard Sanctuary: Fort Dawnguard

Fort Dawnguard, from Dayspring Canyon.

Fort Dawnguard's crenellations.

The Circular Hall entrance.

The banquet hall, where mead freely flows.

Tucked away in the southeastern mountains of the Rift, in the hidden valley called Dayspring Canyon, towers the old fortification of Fort Dawnguard. Long fallen to disrepair, this massive fortress will become home to a new faction of vampire hunters born from the ashes of the Vigilants of Stendarr. It is here where the agents of the Dawnguard (led by Isran) have begun to gather, where new recruits dedicate themselves to the eradication of vampires, and where a solution to the growing menace must be found. But where is the line between pragmatism and fanaticism?

The grounds of the fort change slightly over the course of the Dawnguard quests (as detailed below), but the main fortification consists of two giant buttress towers connected to the main structure via an open walkway. The fort's main entrance is at the end of a curved path past an outside training area, which is used as a refugee camp as the vampires decimate the Vigilants of Stendarr and begin to attack the peaceful citizens of Skyrim.

Inside Fort Dawnguard, past the unfurled banners and large arched doorway, is an impressive circular hall with an upper balcony level. To the right (east) are two spiral staircases; one leads to the outside buttress tower walkway, and the other leads to the curved upstairs balcony. The northeast part of the fort has a third spiral staircase leading out to the second buttress tower walkway, and there's a natural cave where crossbow firing is practiced, and the Dawnguard's special breed of husky war dogs are raised. There is also an entrance to Dead Drop Falls (a small dungeon accessible only from the fort).

Back in the circular entrance hall, head north to reach the temporary barracks (around a large fireplace) and to access both "wings" of the castle. To the left (west) of the circular entrance hall are some storage and waiting rooms between the giant stone columns, and a spiral staircase leads up to the top of the fort—the upper crenellations. Staying on the ground floor, head northwest to the banquet hall where a considerable feast (and several mead barrels) keeps the Dawnguard in fighting shape. At the castle's west end is Gunmar's Forge, and a pen where his Armored Trolls are trained. Sorine Jurard and Florentius Baenius also perfect their talents in this area, close to a small target range.

Above the circular entrance hall is the balcony, which you access via spiral steps. Off the balcony are two corridors. One leads to a trophy and torture room and Isran's sleeping quarters. The other is a more lavish bedroom, saved for an adventurer who can truly lead the Dawnguard to victory.

The Dawnguard: Important Characters

Dawnguard Leader: Isran

Formerly a member of the Vigilants of Stendarr, Isran struck out on his own when he realized the Order was too soft and didn't really have what it took to defend against the evil in the world. He knew they'd be overrun one day, and he wasn't going to wait around for it to happen. He's very driven. While he won't discuss it with anyone, he lost his family to vampires years ago, and it's warped him. He now hates vampires far more than he cares about saving people and would willingly sacrifice just about anyone if it gave him a clear shot. In his mind, the ends justify the means every time.

➤ Trainer

Dawnguard Blacksmith: Gunmar

Gunmar lost most of his clan to vampires as a young man. While it was a similar experience to what Isran went through, his reaction was very different. He turned inward, speaking very little and acting only when necessary—but those actions were always clear, the goal being to spare others the same fate he suffered. His goal is the same as Isran's, and he will sign on to help the hunters, but he doesn't agree with the methods. Currently, he has little contact with Isran, preferring his own company and saving locals from troublesome encroaching animals.

➤ Trainer

➤ Vendor

Dawnguard Tinker: Sorine Jurad

A genius with gadgets, Sorine has been working on some new weaponry to defend herself. While she doesn't have the perspective deduction and knack for seeing the big picture that Isran does, she can relate to him. She has a peculiar quirk for assuming the worst-case scenario is bound to happen and so prepares for anything and everything. While never a member of the Vigilants, she's crossed paths with Isran in the past and appreciated his tenacity and survival instincts. She would have gladly worked with him again if necessary had they not parted on such unpleasant terms.

➤ Trainer

➤ Vendor

Dawnguard Mage: Florentius Baenius

Florentius used to be a priest of Arkay, the god of life and death, and seeing the repeated effects of vampire attacks (and fending off those he thought were dead friends) has driven him a little bit mad. He claims to speak directly to Arkay and says Arkay speaks back. He's made it a goal to destroy the vampire menace in Tamriel and believes that, with Arkay helping him, he's destined to succeed. Some think he's just playing at being mad so he can keep others at a distance, but if so, he's very good at maintaining the illusion.

QUESTS: DAWNGUARD MAIN QUEST

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

After Dawnguard Main Quest: A New Order, Gunmar and Sorine settle in and set up full smithing and enchanting stations. You can now accept their Faction Quests, purchase items from them, and acquire the Armored Troll and Dawnguard Husky animal companions. The barracks area fills out to house the Dawnguard's new recruits.

During Dawnguard Main Quest: Prophet, a number of Dawnguard Agents return to the fort. You can now ask the members of the Dawnguard to join you on your missions.

Once you complete Dawnguard Faction Quest: Bolstering the Ranks, Florentius moves in, adding an Alchemy station.

During Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death, a refugee camp is set up outside the fort.

After Dawnguard Main Quest: Kindred Judgment, you receive a private room on the fort's upper level.

Dawnguard-Only Benefits

If you side with the Dawnguard, you gain access to the following:

Dawnguard Weapons

Crossbows: The Dawnguard specialize in crossbows (such as the Steel Crossbow, as shown), which fire quickly and hit hard but take longer to reload than bows. While you can obtain basic crossbows by killing members of the Dawnguard (or requesting one from Durak the first time you visit the fort), you can only get enhanced versions of these weapons by siding with them and completing Dawnguard Faction Quest: Ancient Technology.

Dawnguard Weapons: Dawnguard weapons (such as the one shown) inflict extra damage to vampires in addition to any enchantments they may have. Again, you can acquire the basic versions of these weapons by killing members of the Dawnguard, but you can only obtain the unique Dawnguard rune weapons by siding with them and completing Dawnguard Faction Quest: Lost Relics.

Dawnguard Armor

Dawnguard Light and Heavy Armor: The Dawnguard have complete sets of both light and heavy armor (Heavy Armor shown here). Wearing a full set of Dawnguard armor provides additional protection from vampire melee attacks and Drain Life spells.

Dawnguard Spells

The Dawnguard's magic harnesses the power of the sun to damage the undead. These spells can be purchased from Florentius and Sorine once they have been recruited to your cause:

Sunfire: A ball of sunlight that inflicts 25 damage to undead.

Stendarr's Aura: For 60 seconds, nearby undead take 10 points of sun damage per second.

Vampire's Bane: A sunlight explosion that does 40 damage to undead in a 15-foot radius.

Dawnguard Animal Companions

Dawnguard Huskies: These are trained war dogs. With almost twice the health, stamina, and attack power of regular dogs, they are dependable companions.

Armored Trolls: These can be purchased from Gunmar for 500 gold each. While expensive, they make powerful allies, capable of causing and enduring enormous amounts of damage.

Dawnguard Followers

After completing Dawnguard Main Quest: Prophet, you can ask many of the Dawnguard recruits to join you on your missions. Equipped with full suits of Dawnguard armor, they are effective vampire hunters.

QUESTS: DAWNGUARD MAIN QUEST

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

The Vampire Sanctuary: Castle Volkihar

Castle Volkihar, from a buzzard's-eye view.

Castle Volkihar's main entrance.

The inner cathedral.

The banquet hall, where blood flows freely.

Long thought lost to the eternal mists of the Sea of Ghosts, a sprawling castle on the rocky islands north of Icewater Jetty, on the northwest coast of Skyrim, has reportedly been spotted by fishermen. Little is known about the previous owners of the place, as it has changed hands countless times in history, but it has been home to the vampires and their leader, Lord Harkon, for centuries. Only practically reachable by boat, the castle is a formidable place, but once you manage to pass the vampire watchman, all the horror and decadence of the pure-blooded vampire is on display. This is a visit only for those brave or foolish enough to enter this lair of undeath, but there's a way of life that could spread all across this land....

Castle Volkihar's approach from Icewater Jetty is dominated by the castle, but there is a single watchtower by the boat mooring. Venture up the cobblestone bridge, passing the gargoyle statues, and you come to the watchman who guards the entrance, refusing to let anyone in he doesn't recognize. This is the only entrance to the keep proper, although those wishing to brave the rugged rocks to the left (north) side of the monumental castle walls will find an abandoned pier and a side entrance to the castle's undercroft.

Inside Castle Volkihar (in the area known as Volkihar Keep), the main hive of activity centers around a banquet room, where "feasting" is part of the court's tradition (as is backstabbing, underhanded antics, and other unsavory practices designed to curry favor with Lord Harkon). To the left (west) is a laboratory and research room where Garan Marethi sometimes resides. The western corridor winds around to an armory and coffin chamber where the vampires can sleep like the dead. Both rooms connect up steps to a balcony and to the upper hall where Lord Harkon favors giving his proclamations, overlooking the banquet hall below.

To the right (east) of the banquet hall are three archways. The northernmost leads down to the kitchens and gaol, where Rargal Thrallmaster prepares his Vampire Cattle for feasting. The middle arch leads to an alcove where the fabled Bloodstone Chalice rests; once filled, it bestows great power on the vampire who drinks from it. The last arch leads down a short corridor to a combat training area where Fura Bloodmouth works and sleeps.

The more elegant chambers are on the elevated northern side of the keep. Up the steps and past the portcullis to the northwest is Volkihar Cathedral, where the vampire shrine and Harkon's inner sanctum is. North is a two-tiered bedroom (with torture chamber) where Harkon ponders his strategies. Behind the northern balcony are long-ruined steps that once led down into the castle's central courtyard, although you must clear these to reach this initially inaccessible place. The stairs to the northeast lead to a bedroom that used to belong to Serana.

NOTE Some of these Castle Volkihar chambers become accessible only during or after the Dawnguard Main Quest has been completed. Note that Volkihar undercroft, courtyard, ruins, and balcony are also part of this castle but aren't lived in by the vampires who frequent this place.

King of the Vampires: Lord Harkon

Long ago, Harkon ruled over a large part of Skyrim. He was a cruel tyrant who oppressed his people ruthlessly in his quest for wealth and power. Eventually, the realities of his mortal life began to sink in. So great was his appetite for power, he could not bear the thought of losing everything in death.

Despite the protests of his wife, Valerica, and his daughter Serana, Harkon began to explore the dark arts. When he learned of vampirism, he knew he had found a way to cheat death. But the immortal king quickly grew frustrated with the limitations of his newfound powers. He longed to walk the world in daylight with no fear of the sun's enfeebling effects. Harkon spent decades searching through ancient lore to find a solution to this problem, and so it was that he stumbled across an old prophecy that foretold of a day in which the vampires would gain power over the sun.

As he delved deeper into the prophecy, his wife became increasingly estranged. When she learned of his mad plan to fulfill the prophecy and darken the sun, she feared that he would kill every living thing in Nirn. He already acquired two of the Elder Scrolls that he needed, so she knew that Harkon was dangerously close to achieving his goal.

Valerica decided to take action. She arranged for Serana to be hidden away with one of the Elder Scrolls that Harkon had acquired. She took the other scroll and fled into the Oblivion plane known as the Soul Cairn. Since that time, Harkon has searched tirelessly for his wife and daughter and the lost Elder Scrolls.

Castigated Wife: Valerica

Valerica is one of the Daughters of Coldharbor, women who ritually sacrifice themselves to the Daedric Prince Molag Bal and receive the power of vampirism in exchange. She has always been at odds with her husband, Harkon, and his methods. She cares less about his plans for extinguishing the sun than she does about seeing him humiliated. When she learned that Harkon intended to use her daughter Serana's blood as part of a ritual to darken the sun, she enacted a desperate plan that involved hiding Serana away with one of the Elder Scrolls and then exiling herself to the Soul Cairn with another scroll (thus removing all of the elements Harkon needed to fulfill the prophecy).

Valerica fancies herself a necromancer, having dedicated her life to the study of the forbidden arts. She maintained a hidden laboratory in the ruined portion of the castle from which she would perform her summonings and experiments. In her studies, she unlocked the secrets of the Soul Cairn, the plane of Oblivion to which souls that are trapped within black Soul Gems are sent once their energy is expended. Over the course of several decades, Valerica was able to construct a portal to the Soul Cairn with which she intended to continue her studies. This portal became her escape from Harkon's grasp when she enacted her plan to foil the Tyranny of the Sun.

Valerica is a stern woman who places her hatred of Harkon above all other priorities. She cares for Serana, but not in an especially motherly way. This comes to the forefront when Serana confronts Valerica in the Soul Cairn and makes her mother realize that she's been used as a pawn in her parents' game.

Advisor: Garan Marethi

Garan is one of the older vampires in the court—he claims to have links to the Aundae clan from Morrowind, though no one has ever confirmed them. He's overly proud of his history and will name-drop famous associations whenever he can. He considers himself above the squabbles of the court, believing he is better than all of them, and so he keeps to himself, associating with the others as little as possible. Essentially, he sees the court as a necessary annoyance—as a member, he has access to resources he otherwise wouldn't, and he will do whatever necessary to protect that access.

Advisor: Feran Sadr

Feran was a powerful conjurer who was frustrated with the limitations of a normal life span. He saw vampirism as a way to escape the confines of that and allowed himself to be turned. He uses his immortality to learn as much as he can. As such, he's not terribly interested in the politics of the court; he provides services so he's seen as useful and can retain access to all of the resources at Harkon's disposal, but he keeps himself removed from the group at large. He's taken on Ronthil as an apprentice of sorts, largely because he knows that no one can stand Ronthil, thus deflecting attention away from himself.

Advisor: Orthjolf

Orthjolf was once a wealthy merchant in Riften and enjoyed his life. Turned by a member of Harkon's court, he's taken to life as a vampire and put his skills to use—now instead of buying and selling trinkets, he barter deals for Lord Harkon and keeps peace in the court. He loves having control over others and the ability to freely interpret his master's orders in a way that returns the most profit (and inflicts the most pain on others).

Advisor: Vingalmo

Once a member of the Thalmor, Vingalmo was turned by Harkon some hundred years ago and has found vampirism quite enjoyable. Already an accomplished diplomat, he has used his skills to work his way up in Harkon's court and made himself useful. Ultimately his goal is to be the man in charge, but he's in no hurry and is biding his time, attempting to move things into place to make it an easy transition.

Vampire Warrior: Fura Bloodmouth

Well known throughout the court for being vicious and brutal, Fura has gained quite a reputation. She has no capacity for leadership and knows it—she's more than willing to follow whoever is in charge, as long as it means she gets to maim and kill. She is devoted to her master but could be swayed to rebel if it would work out in her favor.

Feeder: Rargal Thrallmaster

Rargal's main role in the court is to make sure Lord Harkon and his underlings are constantly well fed, pulling from the stock of thralls (known as Vampire Cattle) kept in the castle to meet their needs. He prides himself on picking the right thrall for Harkon's mood and keeping the thrall pens well stocked at all times. His cruelty is matched only by his impulsiveness.

Vampire Smith: Hestla

Hestla spent her childhood dreaming of being one of the Companions. When she turned 20, her wish came true and she was invited to join. Unfortunately, her first assignment went badly, and she found herself left for dead in the woods. Even more unfortunate, she was preyed upon by a passing vampire and found herself turned into one. She's been accepted into the court and is glad to have the powers of a vampire, but she is concerned that she's out of her league. She's eager to please, with a slight undertone of concern for her well-being.

Vampire Adept: Ronthil

Once a wizard, Ronthil never really took to the idea of being a vampire. He was useful enough to weasel his way into the court and will now do whatever he must to stay there. He's a total sycophant and will gladly grovel at the feet of whatever master is in front of him so long as his needs are met. He annoys the majority of the other vampires, who have little or no respect for him, but he's good enough at what he does that they tolerate him.

Vampire Adept: Salonia Viria

Salonia won't talk about her past—her life before becoming a vampire. There are rumors that maybe she was part of the Penitus Oculatus, maybe an assassin.... Whatever it was, it wasn't pretty. No one in the court trusts her, especially due to her allegiance to Vingalmo. It's suspected that her presence is a response to Stalf, Vingalmo's answer to Orthjolf's apparent attempt to gain support by stacking the court.

Vampire Adept: Stalf

Stalf was a mountain of a man—all brawn and no brains. Orthjolf claims Stalf is from the same clan, though Stalf doesn't seem to remember that...or much of anything else for that matter. It's suspected that Orthjolf turned Stalf into a vampire to have a bit more muscle backing him up, should he ever attempt a coup against Lord Harkon. So far, neither of them have had the bravery or the opportunity to test this plan.

Vampire Advantages

Those choosing to side with the vampires and accept Harkon's "gift" throughout the Dawnguard Main Quest can look forward to some enhancements to their castle and other benefits.

Castle Volkihar Upgrades

Initially, the castle is entirely sealed off. When you bring Serana home during Dawnguard Main Quest: Bloodline, you gain access to the main hall, but the rest of the keep remains sealed until you decide whether to accept or reject Harkon's offer.

After Dawnguard Main Quest: Power of the Blood, you are free to explore the keep; use the smithing, enchanting, and alchemy stations; and feed on the castle's thralls. You can also trade and seek training from the other members of the court.

After Dawnguard Main Quest: The Bloodstone Chalice, Serana's room is refurbished. You can now accept Faction Quests from the members of the court and recruit Death Hounds. You can also drink from the Bloodstone Chalice to enhance your Drain Life abilities.

After Dawnguard Main Quest: Kindred Judgment, you take possession of Lord Harkon's quarters. Optionally, you can improve the castle further, if you wish:

If you speak to Garan, you can order him to begin repairing the castle, which clears the rubble from a passage connecting the main banquet hall to the central courtyard.

If you speak to Valerica (in the Soul Cairn), you can convince her to return to the castle. She takes up residence in her laboratory (the Volkihar Ruins area) and takes charge of both the laboratory and the courtyard garden, which are stocked with potions and alchemy ingredients, respectively.

Vampire-Specific Benefits

If you choose to side with the vampires, you gain access to the following:

Vampire Lord Form

Only those of Harkon's bloodline can call upon the power of the Vampire Lord. While it is possible to side with the Dawnguard and still receive this power from Serana, the Dawnguard will shun you if you do. Side with the vampires if you want to use this power to its fullest.

Blood of the Ancients

By completing Dawnguard Main Quest: The Bloodstone Chalice, you gain access to the Blood of the Ancients. This temporary ability enhances the power of your Drain Life spell in both your human and Vampire Lord forms.

Vampire Armor

Vampire Armor: Vampires have a stylish set of light armor that provides bonuses to magic skills and Magicka regeneration equivalent to the bonuses found on robes. Wearing this armor allows you to take advantage of Light Armor perks without sacrificing your casting prowess.

Vampire Lord Items: A number of Vampire Faction Quests will send you in search of enchanted items—such as fabled rings and amulets (Amulet of Bats, pictured)—that enhance your abilities as a Vampire Lord.

Vampire Spells

Vampire mages can use the dark arts of necromancy to strengthen their undead minions.

Necromantic Healing: Restores 10 Health and Stamina to the undead per second.

Heal Undead: Restores 75 Health and Stamina to the undead.

Vampire Animal Companions

Death Hounds are fearsome undead dogs with a powerful bite attack and a persistent Frost Cloak. While they do good damage, they have less health than common dogs at higher levels, so be ready to step in and heal them if necessary.

There are two additional characters who play a key role in the Dawnguard Quests, but they have a more pragmatic approach to the war between the living and undead or have learned to distrust both sides in this struggle.

Dexion Evicus

Dexion is a Moth Priest. A gentle man by nature, he is content to lose himself in books and readings of the Elder Scrolls. Scholarly pursuits are his passions, and he quails at the thought of danger. After all, he is quite old and sometimes forgetful, especially when preparing for the reading of Elder Scrolls are concerned. If he were to be captured, he would capitulate after being tortured briefly. He is not a strong man, though he is very dedicated to his craft.

Serana (Follower)

Serana is the daughter of Harkon and Valerica. Her mother sealed her away in Dimhollow Crypt to thwart her father's schemes. She grew up very close to her mother and distant from (but not opposed to) her father. Her relationship with her mother was as loving and nurturing as it could be, considering that they were both creatures of the dark. She learned necromancy and other sorts of magic at her mother's side, and she is a powerful mage in her own right.

Even as a child, hers was a fairly lonely life. She's naturally somewhat defensive, though not cold. She can deftly avoid difficult topics and turn the conversation back around into something you thought you wanted to talk about. She's built up these defenses because she has a quick temper and strong passion, so she doesn't let people get too close lest they fall victim to them. She's been taught to genuinely care about those who befriend her, but only so much as they prove worthwhile. She also has a touch of self-deprecating humor and awareness. She's smart, but a bit naive. After being sealed in Dimhollow Crypt for over a thousand years, she is curious about what the world has become. She remembers snow elves and dwarves and is somewhat sad to hear about their passing.

Serana's Powers

✓	NAME	PREREQUISITE	CLASS	SKILLS
☐	Serana	Dawnguard Main Quest: Awakening	Vampire Mage	Sneak, One-Handed, Light Armor, Conjuration, Destruction, Alteration

Like her parents, Serana is a vampire. This gives her the following abilities:

- Immunity to Disease
- Immunity to Poison
- Frost Resistance 50%
- Weakness to Fire 50%
- No Health, Magicka, or Stamina regeneration in sunlight.

Over time, her spells also improve based on your level:

✓	YOUR LEVEL	DRAIN LIFE	OTHER SPELLS
☐	Level 20 or Lower	Absorbs 8 Health per second from her target.	Raise Zombie, Ice Spike
☐	Level 20–27	Absorbs 10 Health and Stamina per second from her target.	Reanimate Corpse, Ice Spike
☐	Level 28–37	Absorbs 12 Health and Stamina per second from her target.	Reanimate Corpse, Ice Spike, Lightning Bolt
☐	Level 38–47	Absorbs 15 Health, Magicka, and Stamina per second from her target.	Revenant, Ice Spike, Lightning Bolt
☐	Level 48 or Higher	Absorbs 20 Health, Magicka, and Stamina per second from her target.	Revenant, Ice Storm, Chain Lightning

NOTE If you ally with the Dawnguard, you can convince Serana to cure herself of her vampirism after completing Dawnguard Main Quest: Kindred Judgment. This permanently removes her Drain Life ability and vampiric strengths and weaknesses, although she remains a formidable magic user.

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Dayspring Canyon, Fort Dawnguard, Hall of the Vigilant

CHARACTERS: Durak, Agmaer, Celann, Isran, Vigilant Tolan

◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak with the leader of the Dawnguard.

On the north-south road that runs along the Rift's eastern border, southwest of Riften and Broken Helm Hollow, and just north of Stendarr's Beacon, is a small vertical fissure in the mountainside, flanked by two torches. The crack opens up to an entrance leading to Dayspring Canyon. Step out into this previously unexplored glade, and follow the path past the waterfalls on your right (south). Along the way, you'll meet a man named Agmaer, a nervous young farmer who wants to join the Dawnguard. You can keep pace with him (for further conversation), or leave him to reach Fort Dawnguard without a chaperone. Or, you can explore the glade without meeting Agmaer.

The New Recruit

NOTE Prior to this quest start, and once you reach Level 8, you begin to notice strange occurrences in the settlements you visit, including vampires storming into towns, Dawnguard warriors repelling this menace, and other encounters known as Eclipse Attacks. Find out more about them on page 681.

Rumor and scuttlebutt abound on your travels through Tamriel, and one piece of gossip going around concerns the reformation of a venerable band of vampire hunters known as the Dawnguard. Once you reach Level 10, you can find out more about this in one of three ways:

By visiting any settlement with guards. Listen to their conversation, and you may hear one mentioning the re-forming of the Dawnguard "in the old fort near Riften."

By entering any settlement (such as a Hold Capital or a smaller town such as Ivarstead) and running across a member of the Dawnguard named Durak, an Orc clad in impressive buckled armor and who has a forthright attitude toward strangers. He wants you to fight against the growing vampire menace. Answer him how you wish, and with inquisitive responses, you're told to find a man named Isran, who is ensconced at Fort Dawnguard, southeast of Riften.

By stumbling upon the entrance to Dayspring Canyon (shown in the next picture), which leads to Fort Dawnguard, during your travels through the Rift. You do not need to be Level 10 for this to happen.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with the leader of the Dawnguard

◆ TARGET: Isran, Fort Dawnguard (the Rift)

Farther along the path, as the glade becomes more rocky and unforgiving, a buttress tower appears—the first of the crenellations of Fort Dawnguard. Continue along the path (Agmaer remarks that the place is almost deserted), continuing east around the base of a second tower buttress, until you reach a familiar Orc practicing his skills with a strange new weapon. This is Durak, who tells you to meet Isran inside the fort. However, you can also:

Ask him about why he joined the Dawnguard, Orc strongholds, and a distinct lack of a vampire menace.

More importantly, you can also ask what he's shooting with. He tells you it's a crossbow, a Dawnguard specialty. He gives you one to try and says you'll want to learn how to use it if you really plan on joining the cause.

► Crossbow and Steel Bolt (45)

TIP It is well worth switching to the crossbow (see page 81) and making it one of your Favorites. This is especially true if you're proficient in Archery. And if you aren't, you soon will be with practice!

QUESTS: DAWNGUARD MAIN QUEST

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Follow the path to the imposing fortress entrance, passing a guard named Celann on the steps. You can stop and talk to him about his time with Isran when they were members of the Vigilants of Stendarr and about how he left after disagreeing with Isran's "methods." Now enter the fortress.

NOTE Before the second tower buttress, or at the gap in the wooden wall at the final corner of the path before the fortress entrance, you can explore off the trail. Locate either entrance to the Mossy Glen Cave and hunt the wild animals within, if you wish.

As you step into the circular entrance hall, you see the Dawnguard's banners are unfurled, and while Agmaer waits nervously, you can watch an argument unfold between Isran and a Vigilant of Stendarr named Tolan. Both are proud and stubborn men, but the Vigilants are here to ask for protection, having seen their fortifications attacked by vampires in the last few days. Tolan has grim news to tell: The Hall of the Vigilant is razed, and all who worship there are dead or worse. With the other Vigilants scattered and in disarray, you may approach either man. Vigilant Tolan tells you more about the vampiric menace stalking these lands.

Isran asks if you're ready to join the fight against the "damn vampires." You may answer in any way you wish, but the quest continues only after you ask what you can do to help. Isran relates that Tolan told him about a cave the Vigilants were investigating and that the cave may have had something to do with the recent vampire attacks. Tolan identifies the location as Dimhollow Crypt and says that one of his brothers believed that the catacombs held a long-lost vampire artifact of some type.

You can also ask Isran for advice about a new vampire hunter, about the history of the Dawnguard, and about training in Heavy Armor.

Postquest Activities

At the end of the conversation with Isran, Dawnguard Quest: Awakening begins immediately.

NOTE At this point, you may wish to visit the Hall of the Vigilant in the Pale (see page 755) to confirm Vigilant Tolan's story. Alas, the Vigilant is correct; the place is a burning mess of immolated worshippers, strewn debris, and smoking sections of building. The cellar is also now inaccessible, and worst of all, Keeper Carcette has succumbed to her wounds.

LOCATIONS: Dimhollow Crypt, Fort Dawnguard

CHARACTERS: Isran, Serana, Vigilant Adalvald, Vigilant Tolan

ENEMIES: Death Hound, Draugr, Lokil, Master Vampire, Skeleton, Vampire, Vampire's Thrall

◆ OBJECTIVES: Find out what the vampires are seeking, Speak to the mysterious woman

Head into the initial cavern, a grotto where you can listen to two vampires talk about culling yet another Vigilant of Stendarr. Employ whatever combat techniques you're most proficient with. Watch out for any thralls the vampires may raise, as well as their thick-set, ravenous, and obsidian Death Hound. When combat is over, if you carefully inspect the corpses, you'll see Vigilant Tolan is among the dead; he'd encountered a Master Vampire and fought valiantly, but ultimately he succumbed to the odds against him. Loot what you wish before heading south to the small stone tower. Activate the chain inside that opens the main interior entrance gate and go inside.

Stendarr Preserve Us

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find out what the vampires are seeking

◆ TARGET: Mysterious woman, Dimhollow Crypt (the Pale)

At the end of the initial conversation with Isran, this quest begins. Isran allows you to look around the fort and take anything you need. Grab what you wish, although most of the fort's facilities (such as the Forge, Alchemy Lab, and Arcane Enchanter) are not yet available. In addition, you can:

Listen to the end of the conversation between Isran and Vigilant Tolan, who decides to assist you and sets off to Dimhollow Crypt ahead of you.

Watch as Agmaer nervously shuffles forward and requests training as a Dawnguard soldier. After some initial misgivings, Isran tests Agmaer in the arts of the crossbow and is a little more impressed. The next time you return to the fort, Agmaer will be wearing the garb of the Dawnguard.

Speak to Durak if you haven't already, and claim a crossbow if you want to use this weapon. If you have some skill with Smithing, take this opportunity to temper it as well.

When you're ready, leave the fort and travel to Dimhollow Crypt. The entrance is on a lonely, snow-bound path just west of Frostmere Crypt and the Hall of the Vigilant, over in the Pale Hold. You can also get there by trekking down from the Lord Stone.

A Very Dim View of Proceedings

Pass into a dank burial chamber, where around four skeletons rise from their earthen tombs along with another vampire. Slaughter or sneak past them all. Head to slightly higher ground, pull the lever next to the gate in the western wall, and head down into a burial chamber, where another vampire is making short work of some Draugr. Kill any survivors, then investigate the four smaller gates with a chain by each of them. Pulling each chain opens the gate. Three of the gates lead to a narrow corridor ending in a Draugr fight, a chest, or a potion pedestal. The northwest gate has a passage that continues deeper into the crypt.

In the waterlogged cavern, a vampire and four more bags of bones are ready to thwart your progress. Defeat them as you wish, then look south to the top of the waterfall; there's a gate there that you'll eventually reach. For the moment, carefully maneuver up the soggy path and into Draugr catacombs, where two vampiric incursions must be met with force. The second encounter requires you to defeat two Death Hounds and their vampire master. Wind your way up to the gate you saw above the waterfall, and pull the lever to the gate's left. A Master Vampire is slaying a Giant Frostbite Spider, before turning his attention (and his arcing shock attacks) to you. Retreat and use cover if his magic is too strong, then face him down (as shown). Next, open the door to Dimhollow Cavern.

TIP For a map of Dimhollow Crypt, see page 770.

Whenever you encounter a vampire, take great care in battling them! When a vampire attacks with Drain Life (look for the bloodred glow from their hands), you have a 10 percent chance of contracting Sanguinare Vampiris, a disease that will eventually turn you into one of them! For more information on vampirism, see the Training chapter on page 56.

CAUTION

TIP More powerful vampires sometimes turn invisible and try to escape and heal just prior to death. Keep your eyes peeled for their departure, and follow up to make it a permanent one!

◀ Serana's Subterranean Sarcophagus

Walk toward the pedestal (claiming the scroll if you wish), and pass the suspicious granitelike gargoyles on either side of the exit archway (the lever to the left simply shuts the archway, so keep it open). There's little time to gaze out across the gloom to the central stone island surrounded by water; two vampires (one named Lokil) are interrogating the captive, Vigilant Adalvald. As you approach, Lokil kills him (there's no way to save him). Turn right (southeast) and defeat the vampires using your height advantage before descending the stone steps. Then inspect the corpse of the dead Vigilant Adalvald, which lies near a book. Claim the book for your collection; it has some clues to the nature of this chamber.

According to the book, this chamber was constructed long after the Draugr crypt it was connected to was finished. A more sophisticated architecture seems to be based around the elaborate ceremonial construction in the middle of this ancient lake. Cross the stone bridge, making short work of a vampire's thrall within the circular stone grounds. Head to the narrow pedestal in the middle of the structure. After pressing the button—which turns out to be more of a “skewer”—the grooves within the curved ground become imbued with an odd and fiery mauve light. Fortunately, the fire isn't damaging, but rather is a puzzle to open this elaborate tomb.

Puzzle Solution: Follow the single line of flames back from the circle, and find the brazier it passes through. Push the brazier to the outer base it slides onto, channeling the fire around. This leads to another brazier to shift, this one toward the base on an inner circle. Continue to follow the fire around, channeling it onward using the braziers (there are five to push or pull; the fire won't move if you shove the brazier the wrong way). After the final brazier slots into place, the entire floor rumbles, collapsing from the middle outward and revealing a large stone monolith. Activate the monolith, and a section descends. A mysterious woman, who was sealed in this elaborate sarcophagus, falls out.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to the mysterious woman

The mysterious woman is remarkably chipper considering her enforced slumber, but it soon becomes apparent she's survived her imprisonment due to her vampiric characteristics. You can talk to her about any subject you wish. She soon strikes a bargain with you—keep her alive so you can both find out more about your predicament. She tells you that her family used to live on an island to the west of Solitude, and she hopes you'll lead her there. She finally introduces herself as Serana.

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dawnguard

Main Quest: Awakening, Dawnguard Main Quest: Power of the Blood, Dawnguard Main Quest: The Bloodstone Chalice, Dawnguard Main Quest: A New Order, Side Quest: Missing in Action

LOCATIONS: Castle Volkihar, Dimhollow Crypt, Icewater Jetty

CHARACTERS: Lord Harkon, Serana, Vingalmo, Watchman

ENEMIES: Draugr, Gargoyle, Skeleton

◆ OBJECTIVES: Lead Serana to her home, Speak to Harkon

Continue your conversation with Serana. Topics include figuring out how to escape this crypt, the reasons why she was locked away, details about her home, and the Elder Scroll she carries on her back. From your quizzing, you determine Serana has been locked away in this damp tomb for many years, especially as she has little knowledge of the current political situation across the realm. She's unsure who she can trust, so she's understandably cagey when you ask her who imprisoned her and why. When you've learned enough, Serana becomes your Follower.

◀ Chaperoning Serana

◆ OBJECTIVE: Lead Serana to her home

◆ TARGET: Castle Volkihar, Haafingar Hold

NOTE You can treat Serana as you would any other Follower, except you can't dismiss her at this point; she is too important. Her strengths and combat effectiveness (which is impressive) are detailed in the Followers section of this guide, on page 103. Any other Follower that was accompanying you is automatically dismissed.

► Follower: Serana

Exit the crypt using the bridge to the northeast. Your escape is soon interrupted as the two hunched gargoyle statues shatter, exposing the demonic beast within. Attack both fiends immediately, as fleeing is somewhat treacherous. Then head east up the earthen slope, opening a wooden door and continuing into an unexplored area of the crypt.

Enter the stepped chamber, climb to the top, and pull the lever. This raises an exit gate to the north and stirs a couple of Draugr from their slumber. Don't attack any gargoyles she may have raised to help you! After defeating any remaining Draugr and skeletons, head through the open gate, moving north under the open portcullis to a ceremonial burning chamber.

Their thrones may be crumbling, but these dangerous Draugr and skeletons are ready to attack. While you can use any tactic you wish to defeat them, stealth and ranged combat work well here: You can sneak around the top of the stepped area without attracting attention and escape this chamber, or you can pick off your foes one by one. Ridding the crypt of enemies is worth it; there's a treasure chest and a Word Wall in the northeast corner with a Word of Power to learn.

► Word of Power: Drain Vitality

Head north through the iron door, and yank the chain to raise a final portcullis, allowing you to escape out onto the windswept surface of Skyrim.

► Lair of Lord Harkon

After you exit Dimhollow Crypt, you can figure out exactly where Serana needs to travel. A map marker in the northwestern corner of Haafingar Hold, close to Northwatch Keep and Rimerock Burrow, is your destination. If you've been to either location before (perhaps as part of Side Quest: Missing in Action), Fast-Travel there. Otherwise, the fastest way to reach your destination is to visit Solitude, Dawnstar, or Windhelm, where you ask the ferryman on the docks for a ride to "an island near the border of High Rock." For a fee of 500 gold, he'll let you off at Icwater Jetty. For more information on the ferry system, see page 107.

After a long trek or a Fast-Travel, head past Northwatch Keep to discover Icwater Jetty, where a rowboat is moored. In the gloomy distance, a forbidding citadel rises from the Sea of Ghosts. Step into the boat (or, if you're feeling foolish, start to swim) and travel to Castle Volkihar.

TIP You can also continue on other adventures with Serana, using her as a Follower, until you wish to proceed further with this quest.

The impressive castle, guarded by a tall tower by the jetty (where you can take another rowboat back to the mainland), is both imposing and vast. Ascend the snow-lined cobblestones of the arched bridge, passing between (thankfully inert) gargoyles. Serana mentions that she won't need to be chaperoned for much longer. After a shocked Watchman realizes who is standing by his gate—Lady Serana—he raises the portcullis, allowing you into Volkihar Keep.

An angry vampire named Vingalmo stops you just inside the entrance. It takes but a moment for him to realize just who has returned. He quickly turns and moves to the balcony overlooking a large banquet hall and announces Serana's arrival. Upon closer inspection, it seems the inhabitants of this castle are feasting on bloody mead and the innards of freshly culled thralls.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Harkon

You quickly realize that the leader of the vampires within this keep—Lord Harkon—is Serana's father. Judging by their somewhat acerbic conversation and Harkon's matter-of-fact nature, it seems father and daughter are not on the best of terms. Harkon seems happier to see the safe return of the Elder Scroll Serana carries. He also curses Serana's "traitor mother" before turning his attention to you.

He expresses his gratitude for his daughter's safe return and asks your name. Answer how you wish, and give Harkon your impression of his faction. The conversation continues to the possibility of a reward for your services, and Harkon believes he has one equal in value to the Elder Scroll and his daughter. He offers you his blood and with it the greatest of powers!

Quest Conclusion: Bite or Flight

Lord Harkon reveals his true form: a winged demonic Vampire Lord that towers above his minions. Now you must make your choice!

NOTE This quest splits into two parallel paths here. You have one important choice to make: to throw your lot in with Lord Harkon and the vampires or to refuse and continue to support the Dawnguard. Siding with one faction makes you an enemy of the other and changes the way the Dawnguard Quests continue to unfold. It also affects the Faction Quests you can attempt. From this point, any time you see the symbol for the vampires or the Dawnguard (shown in this box), you complete only the quests for alliance of which you are a part.

You can:

Accept his gift and become a vampire. Harkon clasps his jaws around your neck, and you lose consciousness.

Refuse his gift, angering Harkon. He banishes you from the castle, and you lose consciousness.

NOTE If you're currently suffering from Sanguinare Vampiris (the vampire disease), you can still make this choice. However, if you side with the Dawnguard, you should try to cure yourself (see page 463) before you fully turn into a vampire!

TIP If you're a werewolf, accepting Harkon's "gift" will also cleanse you of your Lycanthropy. See page 62 for details.

NOTE From this point on, until you conclude Dawnguard Main Quest: Kindred Judgment, you should expect additional World Interactions during your adventures. PREREQUISITES: Complete Dawnguard Main Quest: Bloodline

INTERSECTING QUESTS:

Dawnguard Main Quest: Bloodline, Dawnguard Main Quest: The Bloodstone Chalice

LOCATIONS: Castle Volkihar

CHARACTERS: Lord Harkon, Thrall

◆ OBJECTIVES: Use your Vampire Lord power

Lord of Blood

NOTE This tutorial is an unmarked quest and doesn't appear in your Quest Menu. Dawnguard Main Quest: Bloodline concludes at the end of it. This is available only to those who have sided with Lord Harkon's vampires and who have received a bite from Harkon.

After your bite, you collapse and eventually awaken in a previously unexplored area of Castle Volkihar. This is Lord Harkon's sanctum, where you must assume the mantle of the Vampire Lord: the true power of the ancient blood. After speaking with Harkon, he instructs you to transform into a Vampire Lord.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Use your Vampire Lord power

This is achieved by selecting Magic > Powers > Vampire Lord (consider adding it to your Favorites, along with Vampire's Servant and Vampire's Sight), and transforming. Moments later, your towering, sinewy gray form floats above the ground, and Harkon continues his instructions:

In this form, you can drain life from your foes with your right hand (the red, glowing strike).

In this form, you can wield the power of blood magic to raise the dead with your left hand (the blue, glowing conjuration).

In this form, you can call upon the powers of the night to turn into a swarm of bats and reappear some distance away.

The attacks while in this fearsome form consume Magicka. Should you run out of Magicka, you must descend to the ground to fight in melee. Although your claws are sharp, your lack of access to blood magic makes this the weaker of the two stances. Harkon also informs you that over time, your powers will continue to grow. You're asked to view the Vampire Lord perk tree. Gaze to the new heavens, and you learn that killing mortals with your bite attack or Drain Life ability will allow you to earn additional night powers and blood magic in the form of perks.

Although you have much to learn, if you master your powers, few will be able to stand against you. For the moment, though, Harkon says that you may visit the pens in the castle, where he keeps a selection of thralls should you need to feed to stave off the effects of the sun. One of these thralls is in the chamber with you. You can:

Slay him with your Drain Life spell or Bite Power Attack to make progress toward your next perk.

Return to your human form (Favorites > Revert Form) and interact with him to feed on him.

While you have the opportunity, practice turning into bats and swiftly moving about the chamber to get a feel for your new abilities.

Quest Conclusion

Harkon tells you he has a task for you to complete. You can repeat this tutorial if you wish, or tell him you're ready to proceed. You should also check your Favorites Menu, select "Revert Form," and change back to your mortal form before leaving this chamber.

Postquest Activities

As soon as you agree to complete the task, Harkon requests you meet with Garan Marethi and "tell him it is time." Dawnguard Main Quest: The Bloodstone Chalice now commences.

NOTE For more details on becoming a Vampire Lord, consult the section of this guide devoted to vampirism (page 56).

Bloody Machinations

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Garan Marethi
◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Garan
◆ TARGET: Garan Marethi, in Castle Volkihar

NOTE This quest is available only to those who have sided with the vampires against the Dawnguard menace.

TIP If you are still in your Vampire Lord form, use the Revert Form ability to turn back before attempting to speak to Garan.

After instructing you on the use of your new and powerful form, Lord Harkon orders you to speak with Garan Marethi. Search out the Dark Elf, telling him, "It is time." Garan remarks that his master wants the Bloodstone Chalice filled. Garan explains that, when used correctly, the chalice increases the potency of vampiric powers. If Harkon wants it filled, then great plans are afoot! You're now encouraged to follow Garan.

Along the way, Garan encounters two other vampires—Vingalmo and Orthjolf—in the banquetting chamber. They are surprised at Garan and your actions and seem hell-bent on seething animosity without resorting to violence, as Harkon wouldn't stand for it. They are also surprised by the mission you've been asked to undertake. You can speak to them for further insight into the inner workings of the court.

Meanwhile, Garan has reached the alcove off the banquetting room, where an ornate and ancient chalice sits on a low pedestal. Garan explains the chalice needs to be filled directly from the bloodspring in Redwater Den; then the blood of a powerful vampire also needs to be added to it to increase its potency. Garan also warns you that Redwater Den has fallen into disrepute and offers two plans: attack or deal with its inhabitants using more peaceful means.

► Bloodstone Chalice

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Take the Bloodstone Chalice to Redwater Spring
◆ TARGET: Redwater Wellspring, Redwater Den, the Rift

A Den of Iniquity

Head to the Rift, to the Secondary Location formerly known as Bandit's Shack: Autumnshade. This is now marked as Redwater Den on your world map. Clamber through the ruined walls, passing the roasting Skeeever on the fireplace spit, and open the previously inaccessible trapdoor that leads into the subterranean den. In the cellar, a doorman stops you, telling you to keep your weapons to yourself. From this point on, you can employ one of three main plans in your investigation.

Plan 1: Skooma Swigging

If bloodshed isn't on your mind, sheathe your weapon and mosey on over to the dealer behind the barred bar. She notices a bad hunger in your eyes. She offers to sell you some Skooma, which is what several visitors in various states of inebriation seem to have partaken in. Your next task is to obtain some Skooma. You can:

(Persuade) Ask for a free sample.

Purchase Skooma from the dealer.

Or ask more information about what makes the dealer's Skooma so special.

► Redwater Skooma

With the Redwater Skooma in hand, take a swig (Items > Potions), optionally moving to one of the alcoves for a bit of privacy. As your vision fades to black, you swear you can hear the dealer talk about her "dosed Skooma." You wake up in a cage near the den's distillery. A vampire is speaking to the dealer about the springwater that makes the Skooma so much more potent. They are using it to capture citizens and easily turn them to thralls. The time has come to make your escape. You can:

Attack your jailor. He'll rush into the cell, inadvertently freeing you.

Pick the lock on the cell door [Adept], then begin to slaughter the vampires in the area.

Learn the Telekinesis spell by reading the tome on the floor (next to the corpse). Use it to snag the key from the table just outside your cell, and use the key to unlock the door.

(Pickpocket) Or silently sidle up to the vampire guarding the cell and remove the Redwater Den Backrooms Key. Use it to open the door.

Regardless of how you get out, you'll face another thrall and the dealer inside the distillery chamber. Ensure that everyone meets a grisly end. Pick up the Redwater Den Backrooms Key (from one of their corpses or from the table outside your cell) before you make your way deeper into the dungeon.

► Redwater Den Backrooms Key

Turning into a Vampire Lord while confined in this cell isn't wise, as it's difficult to exit through the door. Instead, save this for when you're outside the cell.

Plan 2: Skewering and Slaughtering

If bloodshed is on your mind, keep your weapon drawn as you meet the doorman and introduce him to the afterlife. Next, descend into a seedy Skooma den and dispatch the dealer and an attendant who attempts to stop you.

Search either corpse for the Redwater Den Backrooms Key, which opens the barred bar gate [Expert], allowing you into a back room with some items to scour (this room is also the exit from the lower dungeon area, but that exit is currently inaccessible). Pillage what you need, ignoring the Skooma-addled customers (unless you wish to feed in Vampire Lord form), and head south, opening the gate [Adept] that leads into the distillery chamber. Wipe out any vampires and thralls you see roaming the platforms and stone paths around this large chamber.

Plan 3: Swift and Sneaky

If you prefer stealth to bloodshed, ignore the dealer as you enter the Skooma den and proceed directly to the locked door at the hall's far end. Start sneaking (perhaps using your Embrace of Shadows power or an Invisibility spell to better cloak yourself), wait for the attendant to pass you by, and then pick the lock [Adept] to enter the distillery. Be careful: If either the dealer or the attendant sees you sneaking through this way, they become hostile and attack you on sight.

► Merged Path: Upward and Inward

Ascend the perimeter of the distillery room via the sloping mine tunnel along the southwestern area of the chamber (as shown). Head up, dealing with any foes you encounter, passing by (and optionally reading) a copy of the Aetherium Wars on a crate as you go. Pass the forge and locate a lever on a ledge above the distillery, which lowers an adjacent bridge. Defeat the thrall as you descend into some old mine workings on the opposite side to the north, which have broken through into an old Draugr crypt.

NOTE Reading the Aetherium Wars begins Side Quest: Lost to the Ages.

TIP You may wish to continue using your Vampire Lord form when facing two or more foes as you progress.

Step onto the stone ground of the Draugr tomb, following the path as it turns back on itself to the south. Drop the skeleton and thrall (using weapons or the flaming pots hanging above), then activate the chain to open a secret tunnel leading to a vampire's coffin. Slay the night stalker and two Death Hounds in this area before locating the steps up to the large double doors leading to Redwater Spring.

Bloodshed in the Bloodspring

On the shelf at the first intersection you reach, search for Venarus Vulpin's Journal near some coins; it contains notes on the history of the place and the fate of those who first found the sealed-off Bloodspring.

As the exit to your left

(west) is closed, and the chain is visible (but not reachable) through the oval gap to the right (east), this area requires further exploration. To the north, you'll hear voices. They are coming from a large chamber partially covered by wooden barricades. Two foes lurk there; shoot the flaming pots down on them or charge down the steps to intercept them. Be careful you don't step on the floor grating as you enter the chamber or you'll fall down a spiked pit!

Venarus Vulpin's Journal

The two Death Hounds are safely in a caged pen, so you can ignore (or slay) them before climbing the spiral steps around the column, crossing the small bridge heading east, and heading around the bookcases and over the pen to the oval window. Pull the chain to open the portcullis next to it and the one to the west you couldn't previously reach.

This leads to a large Draugr crypt, which has more recently been reappropriated by vampires. Coffins line the alcoves of this tomb, and a Master Vampire, Death Hounds, and other night stalkers wait to attack. Set fire to the oily earth if you wish, watch for vampires emerging from their coffins, and work your way around the chamber and up the steps to the eventual exit in the northwest corner. Pull the chain to raise the gate. Enter the altar chamber with the Alchemy Lab, and look at the three doors ahead of you. The one on the altar's right side simply flays spears in your face. The wooden door opens a small cupboard. The left side door is the one to take; it leads to a connecting passage with three nasty gate spiked traps to avoid (don't step on the floor plates!).

This takes you to a door that opens into a grand altar chamber. Here you will discover Venarus Vulpin's fate; he drank from the Bloodspring and is now a feral vampire. Attack! Once your foes lie oozing into the damp stone ground, inspect Venarus Vulpin's corpse, and pry out the Redwater Wellspring Key. It opens the door to the north [Master]. Open it.

Redwater Wellspring Key

Blood of the Ancients

◆ OBJECTIVE: Fill the chalice from the spring

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Garan Marethi

You have arrived at the wellspring. Step down into the bloodred water filled with the flesh of the fallen, and activate the Bloodspring. You're prompted to return to Garan, but the door to the south is sealed. Out of the shadows, two vampires appear. Salonia Caelia mocks you about a "little accident" you're about to have. Stalf agrees. Salonia remarks that she was sent to retrieve the chalice for Vingalmo, who will turn it over to Harkon. Stalf is taken aback: He has followed and is about to kill you so Orthjolf could claim the chalice. This violent scrabbling for power is indicative of how Lord Harkon rules his chaotic court. But social politics shouldn't be pondered right now: The swift execution of these disloyal curs should occur instead. Have at them!

TIP

This is an excellent opportunity to transform into a Vampire Lord and teach these bloodsucking underlings just who they're messing with!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Fill the chalice with vampire blood

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Garan Marethi

When both of the vampires lie dead, collect blood from either of them to further fill the chalice. Then exit this place via the short crypt to the south that brings you (via a secret door) back to the Skooma den.

Quest Conclusion

Back at Castle Volkihar, seek out Garan and hand over the chalice. Garan suspected Stalf and Salonia might follow you. Welcome to the politics of Lord Harkon's court: Your actions have usurped power from Orthjolf and Vingalmo while improving your own standing.

Postquest Activities: General

Lord Harkon wishes to speak with you. Dawnguard Main Quest: Prophet now begins. You may also wish to gain further knowledge about the court by speaking with Orthjolf and Vingalmo.

Postquest Activities: Blood of the Ancients

Redwater Spring, in Redwater Den, has some unusual properties (although once you have the Bloodstone Chalice filled, it is both more convenient and powerful than the spring itself).

If you happen to drink from it directly:

If you are a vampire, you receive the Tainted Blood of the Ancients ability. For one day, your Vampiric Drain will absorb Magicka and Stamina, but your maximum health will be reduced by 30.

If you are not a vampire (you're exploring Redwater Den independently of this quest), you have a chance of contracting Sanguinare Vampiris (the vampire disease) or another disease. Keep drinking from the spring, and you can contract any number of unpleasant poxes: This isn't exactly sanitary!

You can also drink from the Bloodstone Chalice, which gives you the improved form of this ability:

If you are a vampire, you receive the Blood of the Ancients ability from the chalice, which causes your Vampiric Drain to absorb Magicka and Stamina. The duration of this ability grows each time you complete Vampire Faction Quest: Ancient Power.

NOTE

You can reach this spring prior to this quest, but drinking from it is beneficial only if you're a vampire. Expect unpleasant side effects if you're not!

Dawnguard Main Quest: Bloodline

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dawnguard

Main Quest: Bloodline, Dawnguard Main Quest: Prophet

LOCATIONS: Castle Volkihar, Dayspring Canyon, Dwarven Rubble:

Druadach, Fort Dawnguard, Random Animal Den

CHARACTERS: Gunmar, Isran, Sorine Jurard, Tilde, VoriENEMIES: Animals, Bear

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak with Isran, Recruit Gunmar, Recruit Sorine Jurard, Help Gunmar defeat the bear, Return to Isran

◆ Brazen Incursions at Fort Dawnguard

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Isran

- ◆ TARGET: Isran, Fort Dawnguard, the Rift

NOTE This quest is available only to those who have sided with the Dawnguard against the vampire menace.

Once you've been dismissed from Lord Harkon's court and you're back at the castle's jetty, return to Fort Dawnguard via an extensive trek, or Fast-Travel there. As you near the castle, you may run into Vori (another of Isran's trusted forces, and a woman of few words). However, keep your wits about you as you reach the castle's entrance; a vampire menace has infiltrated Dayspring Canyon. Expect combat, with Isran showing his prowess with a mighty Dawnguard hammer against three vampire interlopers. Join the battle, then speak to Isran. He isn't confident you're bringing him good news.

You tell him about Serana, trapped in Dimhollow Crypt, and her bloodline. Isran's demeanor is even less jovial once you mention Serana's Elder Scroll—and your failure to obtain it. He curtly explains that the vampires “have everything they wanted, and we're left with nothing.” But all is not lost: Isran knows people who he's met, worked with, and, astoundingly, hasn't alienated. He wants you to find a woman named Sorine Jurard, who is “whip-smart and good with tinkering.” You're also tasked with locating Gunmar, a “big brute of a Nord” who is an accomplished blacksmith and animal trainer. Finish your conversation with Isran, and the quest updates.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Recruit Gunmar

- ◆ TARGET: Gunmar, [Random Animal Den]

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Recruit Sorine Jurard

- ◆ TARGET: Sorine Jurard, Dwarven Rubble: Druadach, the Reach

NOTE The following two objectives can be completed in either order.

◆ Gunmar: Inducting the Trainer of Trolls

Look to your map to pinpoint the position of Gunmar, who can be found outside an Animal Den. When you approach, Gunmar immediately cautions you to hold fast, telling you he's been tracking a murderous bear for two weeks. When you mention Isran, Gunmar seems nonplussed; he's moved on with his life. Change his mind by mentioning the vampires and their Elder Scroll, and Gunmar realizes the predicament that could befall the realm. He agrees to help, but only after you both defeat the bear lurking within.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Help Gunmar defeat the bear

At this point, you can:

Enter the den, fend off any wild animals you encounter, hunt down the bear, and slay it in whatever method you deem appropriate.

Enter the den, wait for Gunmar, and follow him into combat, lending him support while he “bears” the brunt of the attacks.

Inform Gunmar that you've already killed the bear yourself (if you went in without speaking to him). He's suitably impressed.

Once the bear is dead, speak to Gunmar, and he agrees to meet you back at Fort Dawnguard. He will be there the next time you visit; there's no need to follow him.

◆ Sorine Jurard: Drafting the Dwemer Tinkerer

Look to your map to pinpoint Sorine's location. She can be found in the Reach, in a remote location south of the Orc stronghold of Mor Khazgur and north of Druadach Redoubt, at Secondary Location: Dwemer Rubble: Druadach. As you begin talking with her, she seems a little preoccupied with a sack of Dwemer Gyros she has misplaced. After you inform her of Isran's request, she tells you Isran's hurtful comments at the end of their last meeting have dampened her enthusiasm for him, to say the least. But explain the dire situation regarding the vampires, and Sorine is a little more receptive. But she still requires at least one Dwemer Gyro for her research. At this point, you can:

(Persuade) Tell her there's little time to waste. Don't be surprised if Sorine doesn't share your urgency.

Hand over a Dwemer Gyro you may be carrying already.

Startle the Mudcrabs and beat back the odd Forsworn incursion as you search for her lost "sack" along the riverbed. The bag is actually a satchel, lying close to a tree on the riverbank (see picture). There are seven Dwemer Gyros inside Sorine's satchel, but you need give her only one.

Or go in search of a Dwemer Gyro on your own. You can visit any dwarven city in Skyrim (these locations are flagged throughout the Atlas) and manually search chests, tables, and shelves for a Dwemer Gyro. You can also pilfer them from Markarth's Understone Keep, including one right next to Calcelmo, the court wizard. Calcelmo also has several in his museum and quarters in the keep's upper levels. You need acquire only one, then return it to Sorine.

➤ Dwemer Gyro

With the Dwemer Gyro secured, return to Sorine Jurard and hand it over to her. She agrees to meet you back at Fort Dawnguard and will be there the next time you visit. There's no need to shadow her progress by following her.

Once both parties have been recruited, your quest updates:

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Isran

◆ TARGET: Fort Dawnguard, the Rift

◆ An Unwelcome Guest

Upon your return to Fort Dawnguard, you'll see Isran and his cohorts have been busy setting up barricades and perimeter defenses. A Dawnguard agent named Tilde usually mans the gate. Speak to her and to Vori (who is patrolling nearby) if you wish. Enter the fort, and both Gunmar and Sorine are waiting in the circular entrance hall. Isran is on an upper balcony and bathes the ground in a strange writhing light. He is testing to see whether the three of you are tainted with vampirism:

If you haven't contracted vampirism, the quest continues.

If you have contracted vampirism, Isran refuses to let you into the fort, and the gates to the rest of the structure remain sealed. At this point, the only way to proceed is to cure yourself by completing Side Quest: Rising at Dawn (consult page 463) or being turned into a werewolf (see the Companions Quest: The Silver Hand on page 242).

When Isran has three healthy helpers, he instructs Gunmar to pen up some armored trolls to use as shock troops, while Sorine is to continue her research on improving the crossbow design. Meanwhile, you have more immediate concerns: A vampire has shown up at the fort, looking for you!

Postquest Activities

As soon as Isran mentions that a vampire is looking for you, Dawnguard Main Quest: Prophet begins.

TIP At this point, you can begin any of the Dawnguard's Faction Quests: In fact, it's recommended you help Sorine with her crossbow research as early as possible (improvements to this weapon make subsequent battles easier if you're employing this weapon), as well as any other ancillary quest Sorine, Gunmar, or Isran may have for you. Consult page 553 for further information.

Vampires: A Prequel to Prophecy

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Harkon

◆ TARGET: Harkon's chamber, Castle Volkihar

Once you've spoken to Garan Marethi and explained your successes during Dawnguard Main Quest: The Bloodstone Chalice, the Dark Elf tells you to locate Lord Harkon, who wishes to speak with you. You'll find Harkon in one of his private chambers. Harkon reveals his true ambitions, stating that the vampire's greatest weakness is the sun, an enemy they've had no way to fight—that is, until he found an old prophecy written by a Moth Priest, the scholars who read the Elder Scrolls.

Harkon has been obsessed with the prophecy ever since, as it tells of a time when the vampires gain power over the sun itself. He believes Serana's Elder Scroll is the key to unraveling that prophecy. He has ordered his court to assemble and has a new task for all of them to carry out, including you.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Listen to Harkon's speech

Follow Lord Harkon to his balcony overlooking the banquet hall. He hails his scions of the night, proclaiming that the prophesied time is upon them. Now that the Elder Scroll is in their possession, Harkon requires a Moth Priest to read it. To this end, he has spread false rumors about the discovery of an Elder Scroll in Skyrim to lure a Moth Priest to these parts, and now his minions must search the land to see if one can be found. He wants his brood to look to the cities, speaking to innkeepers, carriage drivers, anyone who would meet a traveler. That is his command.

After the proclamation, Serana approaches you. Ask for her opinion, and she recommends asking a mage at the College of Winterhold. The quest updates with the following objectives, after which you can quiz Serana on her knowledge of the Elder Scrolls and on her life as a vampire.

◆ (OPTIONAL) OBJECTIVE: Ask carriage drivers about the Moth Priest

◆ TARGET: Any carriage driver, outside a Hold Capital or your house

◆ (OPTIONAL) OBJECTIVE: Ask innkeepers in cities about the Moth Priest

◆ TARGET: Any innkeeper in a Hold Capital

◆ (OPTIONAL) OBJECTIVE: Visit the College of Winterhold to ask about the Moth Priest

◆ TARGET: Urag gro-Shub, the College of Winterhold

◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate a Moth Priest

◆ TARGET: None

▶ Dawnguard: An Uneasy Alliance

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Isran

◆ TARGET: Upper chambers, Fort Dawnguard

Once Isran has verified that none of his new brethren are night stalkers, he beckons you upstairs to a chamber with a rack and a collection of severed heads. Here you must deal with a vampire that actually had the gall to enter the fort looking for you. Lady Serana is waiting here, much to Isran's chagrin. Apparently, Serana has something really important to say to you.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Serana

Serana begs you to listen, before Isran loses his patience: She has important information regarding the Elder Scroll she was buried with. She explains that her father, an unpleasant character even by vampiric standards, has stumbled onto an obscure prophecy and lost himself in it. She doesn't know the details, except that Lord Harkon has become obsessed with part of the prophecy, stating that vampires would no longer need to fear the sun. He wishes to control the sun and wreck havoc across the world. Serana's mother wasn't happy with the prospect of a war with all of Tamriel, so she tried to stop him, which is why Serana was sealed away in the first place. Serana wants to finish what her mother started. But for that to happen, the Dawnguard need to embrace her. In a nonvampiric way, naturally.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Isran

Your conversation with Isran begins with him violently opposed to Serana. Respond as you wish, and Isran gives in just a little. Instead of out-and-out hostility, he figures Serana must have a death wish or is insane. Neither matters to him. But he'll tolerate her until the moment she lays a finger on anyone here.

After some barbed comments with Isran, Serana turns and explains that the Elder Scroll she carries cannot be read by either of you. Only the Moth Priests have this ability, but she has no idea where to find one. Isran interjects at this point, mentioning an Imperial scholar he saw in Skyrim a few days ago. But he isn't about to waste men trying to find him. However, he suggests you ask innkeepers, carriage drivers, and the like for clues as to the scholar's whereabouts. Ask Serana for her opinion, and she recommends asking a mage over at the College of Winterhold. The quest updates with the following objectives, after which you can quiz Serana on her knowledge of the Elder Scrolls and on her life as a vampire.

◆ (OPTIONAL) OBJECTIVE: Ask carriage drivers about the Moth Priest

◆ TARGET: Any carriage driver, outside a Hold Capital or your house

◆ (OPTIONAL) OBJECTIVE: Ask innkeepers in cities about the Moth Priest

◆ TARGET: Any innkeeper in a Hold Capital

◆ (OPTIONAL) OBJECTIVE: Visit the College of Winterhold to ask about the Moth Priest

◆ TARGET: Urag gro-Shub, The College of Winterhold

◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate a Moth Priest

◆ TARGET: None

▶ To Catch a Moth Priest

NOTE The parallel faction paths now merge. Continue from this point no matter which faction you've sided with.

Optional Plan 1

Carriage drivers: One plan is to see whether a carriage driver has seen a Moth Priest on their travels. Simply approach one of them (say, Thael outside of Solitude) and ask. He describes the scholar with impressive precision but then conveniently "forgets" any specific details. You can:

(Persuade) Try pleading, telling him it's vital you find him.

(Bribe) Offer a considerable sum of septims to reveal his knowledge.

Ignore him and try one of the other plans.

If either option is successful, you need not complete the other optional plans. Head to Dragon Bridge, where the driver mentions the Moth Priest was last seen.

Optional Plan 2

Innkeepers: Another option is to press the innkeepers in any of the cities for scuttlebutt about new Imperial arrivals. You can easily travel to any of them and ask about a Moth Priest passing through. Most haven't seen one, but Corpulus Vinus, owner of the Winking Skeeve in Solitude, is more circumspect. You can:

(Persuade) Tell him it's important you find him straightaway.

(Bribe) Offer some coinage for his troubles.

Try your luck elsewhere with one of the other plans.

If one of the options is successful, you do not need to finish either of the other optional plans and can visit Dragon Bridge now.

SKYRIM

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Optional Plan 3

The College of Winterhold: This option is much easier if you've already completed College of Winterhold Quest: First Lessons (page 255) or Main Quest: Elder Knowledge (page 223) and you've already gained entrance to the College. If you haven't, read over the College Quest and prepare the spell for Faralda, who guards the bridge to the College. Once inside the College, head to the Arcanaeum and locate the Lorekeeper, Urag gro-Shub. Inform him you're trying to find a Moth Priest.

Urag gro-Shub tells you that the Priest stopped to research some texts in his library before setting out for Dragon Bridge. Head there now, as you don't need to complete the other two optional plans.

After you complete Optional Plans 1, 2, or 3 (you need finish only one or simply skip them and head straight to Dragon Bridge), the following objective becomes available:

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Ask people in Dragon Bridge if they saw the Moth Priest
- ◆ TARGET: Citizens in Dragon Bridge, Haafingar Hold

Divulging at Dragon Bridge: Whether you've completed the optional objectives or not, set out for Dragon Bridge and ask around town about a Moth Priest visiting the place. The best bet is to stop and speak to an Imperial Soldier stationed here. He tells you the priest rode through town with an escort of soldiers not long ago. They were headed south.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Search along the road south of Dragon Bridge
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Investigate the scene of the attack
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Read the Vampire's Note

Move south across the Dragon Bridge and into Hjaalmarch Hold, following the cobblestone road. Your heart sinks as you spot an overturned carriage and bodies strewn near the next bridge. Your quest updates. Among the dead and a scattered copy of Effects of the Elder Scrolls is a vampire's corpse. Search it and read the Vampire's Note; it is from a man named Malkus giving orders for the ambush. The Moth Priest has been taken to the nearby Forebears' Holdout, a new location close by.

NOTE This ambushed caravan is just north of Secondary Location [2.D]: Ambushed Caravan, a location that has now disappeared.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Rescue the Moth Priest
- ◆ TARGET: Moth Priest, Forebear's Holdout

Over the bridge and in the low foothills is a collection of standing stones marking the entrance to Forebears' Holdout. The narrow rocky tunnel opens up to a much larger subterranean fortification (second picture), with a strange stone plateau upon which a shimmering barrier has been conjured. Take care, as the place is populated by enemies.

NOTE The parallel paths now split slightly, depending on the faction you sided with: Vampires or Dawnguard.

Vanquishing Vanik's Dawnguard

You may attack from range, at the initial balcony. Turn left (south), and walk through the giant stalagmites to the stone bridge, bringing down Armored Huskies as you go. Continue along the opposite riverbank, sneaking or battling your way into a large and roughly circular bailey, with a giant bonfire in the middle of it. Engage the Dawnguard and their Armored Troll as you fight up onto the crenellations, toward a strange and shimmering magical barrier. A vampire named Malkus has been slain by the Dawnguard's leader, a foe named Vanik; you must vanquish him at this upper stone summoning plateau. Then search Malkus's corpse for a Weystone Focus.

► Weystone Focus

◆ OBJECTIVE: Deactivate the magic barrier

◆ TARGET: Weystone Focus and Weystone Source, close by

Climb the stone steps to the balcony overlooking the magical barrier surrounded by open coffins, and press the Weystone Focus into the Source. The Weystones imprisoning the figure inside the vortex recede, releasing a man named Dexion Evicus, the fabled Moth Priest you've been searching for. He is quite hostile toward you and must be faced in combat. Fight him until he falls to his knees.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat the enthralled Moth Priest

◆ OBJECTIVE: Use your Vampire's Seduction power on the Moth Priest

◆ OBJECTIVE: Feed on the Moth Priest to make him your thrall

◆ OBJECTIVE: Command the Moth Priest to go to Volkihar Castle

Dexion's Enthralled Ruminations

Once the Moth Priest yields but is still hostile to your actions, you are prompted to employ your Vampire's Seduction (Magic > Powers) on him. Once he's bathed in green light, talk to Dexion Evicus and feed on him. Once you've sunk your teeth into his neck and fed, speak to him again. He has been blinded by your majesty and must obey you! Command him to travel to Castle Volkihar. He agrees and sets off shortly. You may also wish to ask him about what exactly it is he does and about the Elder Scrolls. You need not chaperone him; he will be at the castle the next time you're there.

◆ TIP Only Stage 2 (or higher) vampires have the Vampire's Seduction power. If you fed recently, you may need to wait a day to acquire this power and continue the quest.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report your success to Harkon

◆ OBJECTIVE: Command the Moth Priest to read the Elder Scroll

◆ TARGET: Lord Harkon, Castle Volkihar, Haafingar Hold

Back inside Volkihar Castle's keep, stride toward Lord Harkon, who is already congratulating you and Serana on locating the Moth Priest. Tell Harkon you've made the Moth Priest your thrall, mentioning the Dawnguard you fought to reach him (any answer is fine). Harkon then wishes you would command your puppet to read the words of the prophecy.

Head over to the Moth Priest and request he read Serana's Elder Scroll. He unfurls the scroll parchment and begins his vision. He sees a great weapon called Auriel's Bow. He reads the scroll aloud, foretelling "darkness mingling with light and the night and day will be as one." The secret to the bow's power is written elsewhere, recorded in other scrolls. One contains the ancient secrets of the dragons, while the other speaks of the potency of ancient blood. Dexion's vision fades, and he tells you that to complete the prophecy, the other two scrolls must be obtained.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Harkon

Quest Conclusion: Three Scrolls to Find

Lord Harkon could best be described as "nonplussed" when you return to him, as the reading gave far less information than he was expecting. Ask him where these other scrolls are, and he admits his "traitor wife" stole one of them before disappearing. As for the other? He believes it was lost in the bowels of a Dwemer ruin. This quest now concludes.

Vanquishing Malkus's Vampires

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to the Moth Priest

Dexion's Imprecise Ponderings

Once the Moth Priest yields, he begs you to forgive him, saying that wasn't him you were fighting—he was being controlled by others. But now that you've broken the foul vampire's hold over him, Dexion Evicus is most grateful.

Ask him if he's all right, and inform him that you're after him for the same purpose. Answer how you wish, encouraging Dexion to visit Fort Dawnguard. He agrees and sets off shortly. You may also ask him about what it is he does exactly and about the Elder Scrolls. You need not chaperone him; he will be at the castle the next time you're there.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report your success to Isran

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to the Moth Priest

◆ TARGET: Isran, Fort Dawnguard, the Rift

Back inside Fort Dawnguard's keep, walk toward Isran, who is already congratulating you and Serana on locating the Moth Priest. Ask Isran if he has the Scroll and if everything is ready, and Isran answers in the affirmative, telling you to speak to the Moth Priest when you're ready to listen to his ruminations.

Approach the Moth Priest and ask if he's ready to read the Elder Scroll. He appears to be, asking everyone to quiet down so he can concentrate. He unfurls the scroll parchment and begins his vision. He sees a great weapon called Auriel's Bow. He reads the scroll aloud, foretelling "darkness mingling with light and the night and day will be as one." The secret to the bow's power is written elsewhere, recorded in other scrolls. One contains the ancient secrets of the dragons, while the other speaks of the potency of ancient blood. Dexion's vision fades, and he tells you that to complete the prophecy, the other two scrolls must be obtained.

Quest Conclusion: A Trio of Scrolls to Source

The Moth Priest heads off to rest, and Isran leaves to attend to other matters, leaving you and Serana to ponder the location of the other scrolls. Serana admits her mother stole one of them before disappearing. As for the other? She believes it to be lost in the catacombs of an ancient Dwemer ruin. This quest now concludes.

The Elder Scroll (Blood): Found with Serana's mother, deep within the otherworldly Soul Cairn, at the zenith of Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death.

The Elder Scroll (Dragon): Found within the Dwemer Ruin known as the Tower of Mzark.

NOTE * All three of these quests require you to access Blackreach (usually through Alftand or any other Dwaven ruin) and the Tower of Mzark to retrieve the Elder Scroll (Dragon). These are discussed in greater detail during Dawnguard Main Quest: Scroll Scouting.

 You must complete both of these quests in order to obtain Elder Scroll (Blood).

NOTE This quest and Seeking Disclosure (which updates when you've secured each Elder Scroll) and Chasing Echoes (which begins the search for the Elder Scroll (Blood)) all begin concurrently. This quest and Chasing Echoes can be attempted in either order. This quest mirrors your search for the Scroll in Main Quest: Elder Knowledge (page 223) and Daedric Quest: Discerning the Transmundane (page 384).

In order to begin this quest, you must answer this all-important question: Have you already secured the Elder Scroll (Dragon)? There are three possible answers:

"No, I've never had it." This activates the following quest, and you must complete Plan 1 of it.

"Yes, I am carrying it." This quest does not activate; you skip it entirely. Begin Chasing Echoes instead.

"Yes, but I sold it." This quest activates, but you can skip to Plan 2 and buy back the Scroll from Urag gro-Shub.

Plan 1: Hunting the Scroll—Scouting for Septimus Signus

After you talk with Serana, your map marker has flagged the College of Winterhold, where Serana believes you should begin your search. Journey to the College. At the bridge's near end, Faralda, a High Elf wizard, guards the entrance. She stops you, warning that it's not safe to cross the bridge and that you will be denied entrance to the College. Although she has some complaints about the College, which you can ask her about, you really just want to gain entry. Ask if this is possible, and she asks why. Choose the answer that best suits your demeanor. She requires that you take a test to show you're at least competent in the use of magic. You can:

Walk right in without dealing with Faralda, if you're already a member of the College of Winterhold.

(Persuade) Tell her that you both know you'll be successful.

Agree to take the test. When the test begins, Faralda requests you aim a spell at the seal on the ground near her.

Ask if she would grant entry to the Dragonborn. Faralda asks if you really have the Voice. If you have completed Main Quest: Dragon Rising (see page 205), simply demonstrate any Shout you have.

Spell Casting: Bring up your Magic inventory and choose the spell Faralda has requested. She can choose Firebolt, Magelight, Fury, Conjure Flame Atronach, or Healing Hands, depending on your available spells and knowledge of particular magic styles. Aim at the seal and cast the spell. After a successful casting, Faralda tells you to find Mirabelle Ervine inside the College. If you don't have the spell Faralda requests, simply purchase it from her.

Dragon Shouting: Bring up your Shout inventory, choose any Shout (a good choice is Fire Breath), aim it at the seal, and bellow. After you strike the seal, Faralda tells you there is much you both can learn from each other and that you'd be a superb addition to the College.

You can now ask Faralda more questions about Mirabelle and the College, or even receive training in the arts of Destruction Magic. The College of Winterhold Quest: First Lessons is now active, and you are told to report to Mirabelle Ervine. However, this is not required or even part of the Scroll Scouting Quest. Cross the bridge, enter the College's exterior courtyard, open the grand doors, and enter the Hall of the Elements. Immediately make a right (east) turn and enter the Arcanaeum.

Be extremely careful where you wave your fingers! Don't aim (accidentally or otherwise) at Faralda or choose a spell (or Shout) that has a large area of effect. If you cast a wider flame-based attack, you risk setting Faralda on fire, effectively ending your tryout as an apprentice mage!

CAUTION

TIP Do you want to mingle with other mages? Then consult the College of Winterhold Quests for further information on the denizens of this epicenter of magic in Skyrim.

Look for the Orc Mage named Urag gro-Shub, who runs the Arcanaeum; you may have already run into him during Dawnguard Main Quest: Prophet. Although you can ask to assist him in College business, you're really here to ask him about the Elder Scroll. Urag isn't too happy with you offhandedly inquiring about such a powerful artifact. You may listen to an overview of the Scrolls before asking if there's an Elder Scroll you could use. Urag laughs at this question; he wouldn't show the likes of you, even if he obtained one. Ask if he at least has any information on them. He agrees to locate a couple of arcane tomes that may have some clues. But mostly they contain lies leavened with rumors.

Urag gro-Shub locates and places two tomes on the nearby desk: Effects of the Elder Scrolls and Ruminations on the Elder Scrolls. After reading both books (which you may keep or leave on the desk), you find that the Ruminations tome is the work of a madman. Daedric Quest: Discerning the Transmundane is now active, providing its prerequisites have been met.

➤ Effects of the Elder Scrolls

➤ Ruminations on the Elder Scrolls

◆ OBJECTIVE: Ask Urag about the insane book

Speak with Urag again and let him know that the Ruminations book is incomprehensible. He doesn't seem surprised. After all, this book was the work of Septimus Signus. Although Signus is the world's leading scholar on the nature of the Elder Scrolls, Urag tells you he's "been gone for a long while." You suspect he means both mentally and physically. He currently resides north of the College in the treacherous Ice Fields. This quest now concludes, and Daedric Quest: Discerning the Transmundane starts. For your convenience, the rest of that quest is now detailed:

◆ DAEDRIC QUEST OBJECTIVE: Find Septimus Signus

◆ TARGET: Septimus Signus's Outpost

The Hermit of Hermaeus Mora

The giant chunks of ice floating off the Northern Coast are your next destination. Exit the College and run down to the frigid coastal waters. Hop across any floating ice that you can, navigating your way north. Expect to slice into a few Horkers along the way, and you may encounter wolves and Ice Wolves.

Septimus Signus's Outpost is cut into one of the hill-sized icebergs, close to a moored rowboat. Climb down the ladder and the slope to reach a lone mage in a chamber of ice. He appears to be guarding some kind of Dwemer box about the size of a house.

Asking Septimus about the Elder Scrolls results in a torrent of knowledge. Ask where the Scroll is, and after receiving moderately useless information, ask once more (either pleasantly or with a more threatening tone). Septimus agrees to tell you, but in return, you must venture into Blackreach, a strange underground Dwemer city that lies below Alfand.

Ask about getting into Blackreach. Septimus keeps up his riddle-based prattling and hands you two items: The first is an odd-edged lexicon, used by the Dwemer for inscribing. The second is an Attunement Sphere, which apparently “sings” when you near an important Dwemer door. Once these are in your grasp, your Main Quest updates. Stay and speak further with Septimus if your sanity can stand it.

➤ Attunement Sphere ➤ Blank Lexicon

◆ DAEDRIC QUEST OBJECTIVE: Transcribe the Lexicon

◆ TARGET: Daedric Quest, in Blackreach

◆ OBJECTIVE: Recover the Elder Scroll

◆ TARGET: Tower of Mzark

▶ Trek to the Tower

TIP You must have the Attunement Sphere on your person in order to continue; otherwise, you cannot access the route necessary to reach the Elder Scroll. The following location is one of a few entrances to a giant underground city called Blackreach. This is the optimal path, but there are others. Consult the Atlas to see all the ways to enter this subterranean citadel and the Tower of Mzark.

Alftand is located on the glacial mountains southwest of Winterhold. Your trek there is usually interrupted by wild animal attacks. The exterior of Alftand is a series of dotted structures, both Dwarven and Nordic in nature. Below the glaciers is the Alftand Ruined Tower, which offers a dangerous route to the glacier's top. A much better way is to stay outside to reach the two windswept huts, an inaccessible Dwarven tower, and a precarious platform on the side of the glacier that winds down and around the rooftops. Head down the planked bridges near the shack on the glacier's edge until you reach the entrance to the Alftand Glacial Ruins. This is the way to go.

Wind through the glacial tunnels that have been mined out and left in a real mess, with debris and cooking equipment strewn about and the signs of fighting everywhere you look. Follow the tunnel down until you reach the beginnings of the Dwarven architecture, a stone tunnel that ends in a connecting room with a stone table and a large barred doorway to the north. This can only be unlocked from the other side. On the nearby table you'll find Research Notes. Whoever wrote it thought he saw a strange human figure on the other side of the barred doorway.

➤ Research Notes

At this point, the passage west heads up a ramp and down the other side, into another glacial intrusion. Watch for attacks from a Dwarven Spider as you go. A Skooma-addled Khajiit is shouting about being trapped here and attacks if he sees you. Drop him, and continue down into the start of the main Dwarven ruins. The ceilings tower above you as you reach a cog and piston room with a raised center and two Dwarven Spheres appearing from their wall holes to attack.

Continue north to a vent chamber with a locked gate (Novice) leading to a few scraps of treasure. Head through the gold door and up to a Dwarven Spider-infested passage stretching south. This leads to a locked (Apprentice) gold door with items to steal behind it and a main path around to the east, which brings you back into the cog and piston room. This time, you're above the raised center. Navigate the pistons (jump over them, or you risk being pushed off by them) in a counterclockwise route to the short corridor and door to the Alftand Animunculory.

TIP There are many trinkets of Dwemer origin to pick up (and sell once you leave). Among the vendors across Skyrim, a wizard named Calcelmo in Markarth's Understone Keep is most interested in these items and gives a good price, although you can sell them to any merchant or vendor who wants them.

Move through the green-tinged corridor to an opening on your left (east). This leads to a large pipeworks corridor. Avoid two Dwarven Spheres by staying on the low ground, and head through the gap in the gold fencing to the left of the stone steps. Otherwise, head up the steps, over the pipes, and up the ramp with the central slit. Walk on the slit so you don't trigger a blade trap by stepping on the pressure plates. At the barred doorway, use the lever on your right to lower the bars. The lever behind the bars raises them, which isn't necessary unless you're being pursued and want to halt your attackers. Step out into the grand Animunculory shaft—a long vertical drop you must descend without falling. Remove any Dwarven Spider threats, and head down the sloping stone walkway to an arched entrance platform. The gold door here (Apprentice) just leads to a dead end and more treasure.

Peer over the edge of the stone platform facing into the shaft. The walkway below has crumbled, forcing you to drop onto the jutting gold pipe and then the rubble platform. There is a walkway to the west that leads to a precarious ledge, a Dwarven Spider battle, and a piston that can push you over the edge. The way forward and down is to the northeast. Look for the lantern and falling water, as the sloping walkway is hidden.

As you descend, something horrific shuffles out of the shadows: an eyeless figure, thought to be myth. These are Falmer, the degenerate remnants of the original Elven inhabitants of Skyrim! Dispatch four of them as you follow the winding platform down. Take care not to lose your footing and fall to your death. Next, face the jet of fire blasting the entrance to a gold door. Dart through or around, and enter a Falmer nest.

Falmer appear from their huts, forcing you to fight or sneak by. Follow the passage down to a second set of Falmer in a boiler chamber. Watch for those rattling, hanging bones if you're sneaking, as these startle the Falmer into finding you. Head down the steps, watching for Skeever attacks, and look for a gold door on the southeast wall. This is the way onward, but you may wish to turn to the northwest, open a gate, and enter an ancient Dwarven Elevator. Pull the lever and you ascend to the Alftand Glacial Ruins.

Step around the rubble and to the barred doorway where you found the Research Notes. Pull a wall lever here so the bars retract. This allows you to easily navigate up and down the Animunculory if you explore here in the future. For now, use the elevator to head back down, and open the gold door in the southeast wall. This leads down to the shaft's bottom, where you encounter another Falmer attack and face a Frostbite Spider. From here, you have only one set of corridor steps and a claw trap (move around the trip wire) before you enter the Alftand Cathedral.

Battle a Falmer and navigate some floor trigger plates to reach a gold door that leads out into the main cathedral chamber—a massive echoing cavern with a central structure and a doorway barred with spears. Check the area for Falmer and the steps to your left (south) before heading to a gold lever above the entrance from which you came.

This raises the spears, enabling you to enter the cathedral platform, where a giant steam-powered mechanical monster roars to life. This Dwarven Centurion is a frightening form, but you should defeat it, as it carries a handy key.

► Key to Alftand Lift

Climb to the gate (southwest) at the platform's top, open it, and listen to the arguments of two thieves, Sulla and Umana. You must slay them, as there's no reasoning with them. Now open the gate beyond the strange Dwarven Mechanism. This leads to the top of the Alftand glacier, a tower you couldn't access when you first reached here.

Open the gate from the inside using the wall lever (so you can access the cathedral directly from the surface during future adventures); then travel back down to the cathedral. Approach the Dwarven Mechanism now, and insert the Attunement Sphere Septimus gave you. The floor parts, revealing stairs down to a hidden gold door and an entrance into the mysterious undercity of Blackreach.

NOTE Take a moment to adjust to the vastness of this cavern.

Aside from firing a Dwarven ballista using an adjacent lever and investigating the small stone building to the southwest (Sinderion's Field Laboratory, where you can start collecting Crimson Nirnroot and begin Side Quest: A Return to Your Roots), there is a sprawling area to adventure through. Consult the Atlas for information on the entire area; this walkthrough points you directly to the exit necessary to reach the Elder Scroll.

Head west to exit Blackreach using the appropriate Dwarven Elevator. First, though, you may wish to head southeast, to a golden button encased on a Dwarven head pedestal. Press it, and the elevator behind lights up, allowing you to ascend back to the exterior. Open the gate, allowing you to enter from the Great Lift at Alftand (a tower entrance northeast of Nightgate Inn). Return to Blackreach and find the cobblestone path heading roughly west. Follow it past ancient structures and towering luminescent fungi. Continue with a giant lake and cascading waterfalls to your left (south), heading over a stone bridge. Go west and turn left (south) to reach a colossal elevator that allows you to ascend into the Tower of Mzark, your destination.

► Oculory Operation

Venture along a corridor with a burst steam pipe and small camping area, and go through gold doors into a gigantic, circular Aedrome chamber, which is dominated by a huge sphere. This appears to be some kind of massive Oculory, with a variety of focusing lenses and other golden machinery attached.

Head to the cluster of controls on the platform above the Oculory. The controls are comprised of five cylindrical devices: a lexicon receptacle and four positioning buttons embedded in pedestals. There is a certain way to use these devices to produce something hidden in one of the lenses.

Puzzle solution: Activate the lexicon receptacle, so the blank lexicon rests on top of it. The two pedestals to the receptacle's right—the only ones currently active—open and close the Oculory lenses. Press the taller of the two pedestals (right of the middle one with the lens chart on it) three or four times, until the pedestal with the blue button to the left of the middle one starts to glow. Move to this new pedestal (at this point, the blank lexicon may be glowing blue). The two pedestals to the receptacle's left—the taller of which is now active—control the ceiling lens array. Press the button of the taller, left pedestal twice, until the button on the far left, smaller pedestal begins to glow. Now press that button, and a large set of lens crystals descends from the ceiling and stops. The main crystal rotates and splits apart to reveal the Elder Scroll in a jeweled scroll holder.

Quest Conclusion

Drop from the balcony controls and approach the open lens crystal. Take the Elder Scroll from its elaborate compartment. Then exit using the door under the lexicon receptacle. This leads to one final Dwarven Elevator, which allows you to open the gate from the Tower of Mzark, step out into the exterior, and add another possible entrance to Blackreach, if you decide to return.

► The Elder Scroll (Dragon)

► Plan 2: Buying the Scroll—Urag Drives a Hard Bargain

If you previously completed Main Quest: Elder Knowledge, used the Scroll during Main Quest: Alduin's Bane, and you've sold the Scroll to Urag gro-Shub, a new objective appears:

♦ OBJECTIVE: Buy back the Elder Scroll (Dragon) from Urag gro-Shub

♦ TARGET: Urag gro-Shub, College of Winterhold Arcanaeum

Visit the lorekeeper, and explain your predicament to him. Somewhat understandably, he isn't happy to hand over such a precious piece of parchment. You'll need to pay for your mistake. You can:

Pay the 4,000 gold Urag gro-Shub is asking for the Elder Scroll.

(Persuade) Sweet-talk the Orc into lowering his asking price to 3,000 gold.

Or, if you've completed all the College of Winterhold Quests, and you've been granted the title of Arch-Mage, you can insist that Urag sell it back to you for its original purchase price of 2,000 gold.

► The Elder Scroll (Dragon)

Postquest Activities

Once you acquire the Elder Scroll, you are free to return to the giant underground city of Blackreach or continue Daedric Quest: Discerning the Transmundane. Consult that quest for further information. For now, though, you should rendezvous with Serana to begin Dawnguard Main Quest: Chasing Echoes (if the other Elder Scroll is yet to be found) or Dawnguard Main Quest: Unseen Visions (if you now have all three Elder Scrolls in your possession).

CHARACTERS: Serana, Valerica

ENEMIES: Death Hound, Feral Vampire, Gargoyle, Giant Frostbite Spider, Skeeever, Skeleton

◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak to Serana, Explore Castle Volkihar's Courtyard, Locate Valerica's Journal, Investigate the moondial, Explore Castle Volkihar's Ruined Tower, Speak to Serana, Gather Soul Gem Shards, Gather Finely Ground Bone Meal, Gather Purified Void Salts, Place the ingredients in the vessel, Speak to Serana, Enter the Soul Cairn

◆ OBJECTIVE: Explore Castle Volkihar's Courtyard

◆ TARGET: Volkihar Courtyard, Castle Volkihar, Haafingar Hold

Return to the exterior of Castle Volkihar, then head to the left (northern) side of the bridge from the jetty watchtower, toward an unused inlet on the northern side of the island once used to bring supplies into the castle. It seems the previous owners left a skeleton crew—literally, as you're attacked by three or four bony fiends as you clamber onto the U-shaped jetty. Use the stone balconies to gain height and cover, before climbing the steps to enter Volkihar Undercroft.

An air of dank fetidness greets you as you head down a set of narrow steps and balconies, pausing to rid the ground of Skeeever vermin. A look across the balcony (or via the door you open) reveals a gloomy interior dock filled with supporting buttresses and the soft, padded footsteps of Death Hounds. Bring your finest fiend-culling equipment to bear and begin defeating the hounds and their mistress, a Feral Vampire cast down from Harkon's court (you can read her scribbles on a Journal Fragment contained on her corpse). Pass by her shelves and small Alchemy Lab, up the steps to the west. Here you'll find an upper platform of mead barrels, a small table with a copy of the Aetherium Wars on it, and a nearby lever that opens a portcullis below and to your right (west). You can now progress deeper into the Undercroft.

► Journal Fragment

Serana warns you to take a left at the bridge, with exits left and right; her father has built a security measure to negotiate. Heading to the right (north) takes you through a tunnel of bear traps, down to the spiked watery lower level with no exit, and sometimes a lone Skeeever to fight. Instead, head down the left (south) tunnel, avoiding the dangling spike traps, to engage a trio of Death Hounds sniffing around several bone piles in this waterlogged catacomb. Then step out into the bone pile room, sloshing about in the water and noting the open grating above from which prisoners were once dropped.

► A Rummage Through Valerica's Undercroft

NOTE This quest and Seeking Disclosure (which updates only as you secure each Elder Scroll) and Scroll Scouting (which begins the search for the Elder Scroll [Dragon]) all begin concurrently. You can attempt this quest and Scroll Scouting in either order. The Scroll Scouting Quest may not run if you already have the Elder Scroll (Dragon) in your inventory.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Serana

At the culmination of Dawnguard Main Quest: Prophet, when prying ears are away from the pair of you, Serana asks, "Do you have a moment to talk?" Indulge her. When you ask about the Elder Scroll, she says she firmly believes her mother, Valerica, holds the key to its whereabouts, but unfortunately, she only knows that Valerica left to go "somewhere safe." Prompt her to think of Castle Volkihar, and she excitedly tells you of a courtyard in the castle where she used to tend a garden. She also knows of a back way you can reach the courtyard without arousing suspicion.

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

Head south, up the narrow steps and past the cabinets and manacled skeleton with the loose skull. Work your way around to the upper catacombs heading north, hacking your way through thick spiderwebs (there's an alcove to the right with a chest [Adept] in it). The source of the webbing is soon revealed—a Giant Frostbite Spider, which you must negate. Beyond the arachnid is a lever and a view of the bridged area you came from. The lever lowers a wooden bridge, allowing access to the western tunnel.

Proceed through the wooden door to the lever's left, and you emerge onto a balcony above the bone-strewn chamber. If you are a Vampire Lord (with Bats Power) or possess the Whirlwind Sprint Shout, use either to cross the gap to the opposite balcony, where you can acquire some otherwise inaccessible loot, including a large chest.

In any case, jump down, retrace your steps to the bridge, cross it, and then climb the sloping tunnel steps to the arched door leading out to Volkihar Courtyard.

Moondial Wiring Club

Serana's initial excitement about seeing the courtyard gardens she tended is tempered somewhat by the general decrepitude of the place. She takes a measured walk around the grounds, lamenting the death of the gardens that had been tended for hundreds of years. Your way seems unsure until Serana spots the glint of the central moondial and notices that three of the crests showing the phases of the moon have been misplaced. Perhaps her mother removed them as a clue?

OBJECTIVE: Investigate the moondial

Sure enough, the moondial has gaps where three phases of the moon should be. Finding them is deceptively simple:

The Full-Moon Crest is propped against a wall to the rear of the small walled garden, to the east behind the nightshade.

The Half-Moon Crest is partially submerged against a rock in the pond to the northwest.

The Crescent-Moon Crest is on the stone balcony near a gargoyle statue and small table, in the northeast of the courtyard.

- Full-Moon Crest
- Crescent-Moon Crest
- Half-Moon Crest

Return to the moondial, and slot each of the missing moon crests into place. The central segments of the moondial disconnect and form a spiral staircase into the ground. Serana commends the cleverness of her mother. Head down and open the arched door to Volkihar Ruins.

The courtyard also contains three other exits. One leads to the main keep but has been blocked by rubble and is inaccessible until the end of the questline (see Postquest Activities, page 552). You can also enter the castle's north and east towers from here, although these are essentially wild-goose chases. The east tower leads to rubble and a skeleton with a few valuables, while the north tower leads to a large banquet hall with skeletons and a gargoyle to face. Neither has an exit, or any moon crests, so these locations are completely optional.

NOTE The two moons orbiting the planet Nirn (upon which Tamriel is located) are named Masser (the larger, reddish moon) and Secunda (the smaller, white moon). Specifically, the missing crests are for the following phases:

Masser: Full-Moon Crest	Masser: Third Quarter Half-Moon Crest	Secunda: Waxing-Crescent Moon Crest
-------------------------	---------------------------------------	-------------------------------------

OBJECTIVE: Explore Castle Volkihar's Ruined Tower

Onward and Upward

The door leads up a short flight to steps that lead to...a dead end—that is, until you pull the chain and open the secret door leading out into a ruined kitchen with a bloody wooden table. Serana warns you that even she hasn't visited this part of the castle. Edge forward, up the stairs to the east and into a banquet hall where six slumbering skeletons soon rise to greet you. After an optional rummage around, leave via the upper stairs to the south. These take you to a low-roofed crypt, where a gargoyle splits from its stone facade and attempts to maul you. Watch the hanging spike traps as you defeat it. Then take the arched door as you continue up the tower.

Defeat the two skeletons atop the steps, and optionally wrestle with a small closet lock [Adept] before heading southeast up the stairs. Torches, lit by unseen hands, burn bright as you move through a narrow chamber with vaulted ceilings. Another gargoyle bursts from its stony shell in front of you. Maneuver between the fallen stone buttress sections, dropping two more skeletons as you climb the stairs to the northeast. Turn around to a landing with a door and stairs ahead. The door [Adept] leads to a balcony with a chest, while the stairs allow you upward access, past some shelves and a few ruined rooms to stairs leading northeast to another arched door.

This door opens to a grand vaulted chamber where your mettle is tested against four armored skeletons. Tackle them all before crossing the chamber to the upper mezzanine level. To the left (northeast) is a portcullis, and the chain to release it is directly ahead (southeast), just behind the suspiciously stone-faced gargoyle. Sure enough, when you edge in to pull the chain, the gargoyle's stone skin shatters, and it attacks! Defeat the beast, then head through the open archway and up the stairs—dealing with skeletal and gargoyle threats along the way—to a large gated archway and a smaller locked arched door [Expert]. These are both entrances to the tower's chapel.

There are two ways to navigate through this tumbledown chapel to Mara, which now houses a group of four or five skeletons:

You can unlock the door, following the side passage around to a bridge that crosses the main chapel floor, and cross it above the chapel with minimal combat (and maximum chance for sneak attacks).

Or, you can pull the chain, stride through the larger arch, and systematically slaughter the undead throughout this once-hallowed place. After you slay all skeletons, quickly reconnoiter the place; there's a weapons room to inspect. But you're here to move through the side passage to the bridge, heading southeast across it, then turning right (southwest).

Follow the corridor up the steps to the southwest, through a strange examination room with a wolf's head on the wall and a (deceased) skeleton on the table. Open the arched door, and head up the steps to a much more imposing double arched door and open it.

An upper chamber in the tower is home to a group of carved gargoyles, one of which hasn't been completed. The other three are fully imbued with magic, however, so expect combat with three of them as you advance into the room. After the fighting subsides, make a sweep of the area. Among the coffins and vampire clothing is a seeming dead end. But Serana remarks that you haven't reached the top of the tower yet. She bets there's a secret passage somewhere around here, and she's right: Approach the hearth to the southeast with the (inert) gargoyle above it (as shown), and inspect the left wall candlestick. Turn it and the fireplace rumbles open, revealing another set of winding steps to an arched door.

Soul Cairn Searching

Serana is surprised as you step into an impressive laboratory dominated with a strange sunken circular array. She urges you to look around for a clue to where Valerica has gone. Before you begin rummaging, you can ask Serana more about gargoyles and the laboratory itself.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate Valerica's Journal

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Serana

The bookshelves in the chamber's western corner look promising, and they are indeed: Leaning on one of the shelves is Valerica's Journal. Read it before speaking with Serana, as the tome offers some potentially incredible leads:

The sunken circle in the laboratory floor is a portal to a place known as the Soul Cairn.

Valerica has made her way there but has sealed the portal behind her.

To open the portal, an offering needs to be placed in the vessel overlooking the portal.

► Valerica's Journal

Return to Serana and inform her that you've found her mother's notes. She explains her mother's theory about Soul Gems, that after a Soul Gem uses the soul trapped inside it, that soul is banished to the Soul Cairn. In turn, Necromancers use the Soul Cairn to receive powers of their own from "very powerful beings" that inhabit this increasingly terrifying-sounding place. The journal gives a list of ingredients to mix into the offering in order to open the portal. However, Valerica's blood, which is needed for the incantation, isn't available. Suggest that Serana make do with her own. Now to find the items:

◆ OBJECTIVE: Gather Soul Gem Shards

◆ OBJECTIVE: Gather Finely Ground Bone Meal

◆ OBJECTIVE: Gather Purified Void Salts

TIP You may wish to employ light (either by torch or more magical means) to make this search a little easier. There's also an exit to the Volkihar Balcony, which leads to a dead end. Ignore it for the moment.

Finely Ground Bone Meal: Check the table of skulls and other assorted bone fragments on the southwest wall. The mortar behind the two human skulls holds the Finely Ground Bone Meal.

Soul Gem Shards: Head up the steps along the southeast wall. Between the two sets of steps are two low cabinets, one of which has a bowl on it. The Soul Gem Shards are in this bowl.

Purified Void Salts: Head around the balcony to the northwest wall, and find the shelving. The Purified Void Salts are in the largest mortar, on the center-middle shelf. Don't take the Void Salts by mistake!

- Finely Ground Bone Meal
- Purified Void Salts
- Soul Gem Shards

Into the Otherworldly Graveyard

◆ OBJECTIVE: Place the ingredients in the vessel

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Serana

Set the ingredients into the portal vessel overlooking the sunken circles. Then, when you're ready to proceed, speak to Serana, letting her know you're ready for her to add her blood to the mixture. The Soul Cairn is a frightening place, so you may need to prepare.

TIP If you've forgotten an item, you're about to be encumbered, or you have another reason to delay, you may wish to leave via the Volkihar Balcony. When you emerge onto the balcony, you receive a map marker to it, allowing you to Fast-Travel wherever you need to go, complete any outstanding tasks, Fast-Travel back, and tell Serana to proceed.

However, once you inform Serana that you're ready, she bites her wrist, letting her blood drip into the vessel. Her bloodline is true; with a crackle of purple soul energy, the sunken circle splits apart and great sections of stone rotate to form rudimentary steps down into the void. The portal to the Soul Cairn has opened!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Enter the Soul Cairn

Quest Conclusion

Take a few tentative steps down into the Soul Cairn's entrance. However, there are stipulations regarding whether you can enter the Soul Cairn. These are based on which alliance you've picked and your general demeanor:

If you're already a vampire and have thrown your lot in with Lord Harkon, you can simply walk down the steps and enter the Soul Cairn.

If you've sided with the Dawnguard but have contracted Vampirism since Isran tested you for this disease, you can enter the Soul Cairn.

If you've sided with the Dawnguard and haven't contracted Vampirism, you are drained of some health and a solid wall of force blocks your way as you try to enter the Soul Cairn. Speak with Serana, who realizes the Soul Cairn isn't a place for a "normal" living being. Serana isn't affected like you, as she's a vampire. However, you're not so "lucky." You are now presented with a choice. You can:

Step forward, let Serana embrace you and sink her teeth into you, and turn yourself into a vampire (with all their benefits and shortcomings). You may now enter the Soul Cairn.

If you insist on maintaining your mortal state, Serana can partially Soul Trap you. This weakens you (reduces your health) while you are in the Soul Cairn. However, during Dawnguard's Main Quest: Beyond Death, you can ask Valerica for the location where you can gain back the piece of your soul Serana has taken from you. This is the only way to enter the Soul Cairn without becoming a vampire. Your health is unaffected when traveling anywhere other than the Soul Cairn.

If you've sided with the Dawnguard, haven't contracted Vampirism, but don't want Serana to bite you or remove part of your soul, you can temporarily halt this quest, contract Vampirism by the usual means (from a Vampire's Drain Life ability), and return afterward. This is possible, but there's little point in trying it.

Postquest Activities

Whatever your decision, once you enter the Soul Cairn, Dawnguard Quest: Beyond Death commences immediately.

If you sided with the Dawnguard but agree to let Serana transform you, note that you are now a member of Harkon's bloodline, with full access to the Vampire Lord form and all its powers. Consult the Vampire Lord section on page 58 for more details on your new abilities, as you won't receive the same primer on them that vampire-allied players received from Harkon.

Note that you will need to cure yourself of Vampirism before you can accept quests from the Dawnguard again (see Side Quest: Rising at Dawn on page 463).

(including why Necromancers collect souls from here). Now look to the northeast; in the distance is a giant black wall with massive gouts of purple flames spilling into the darkened skies. For the moment, concentrate on the rudimentary pathway, heading northeast toward a small chapel. You may encounter the first of the many ghostly souls trapped here. Talk if you wish, then optionally gaze up at the black chapel.

NOTE The black chapel's barred gate will open if you fire an arrow through both the glowing turquoise orbs that lock the gate. Inside is a chest and, more importantly, a strange piece of paper. This is one of ten pages from Jiub's Opus and part of Side Quest: Impatience of a Saint. Consult that quest for more information.

Right now, you're also able to fully explore the scattered stones, gnarled bushes, and strange edifices dotted about the entire Soul Cairn. There are many points of interest, and all are detailed in the Soul Cairn's Atlas section of this book, on page 986.

Initial Preparations

During your exploration of the Soul Cairn, there are several different Regional Activities and Side Quests that you can undertake. It is well worth reading up on these so you don't miss anything. They are listed below. You should also check the Atlas on page 986 to familiarize yourself with the topography of this eerie otherworld.

Regional Activity: Arvak the Spectral Steed*

Regional Activity: Valerica's Concoction*

Regional Activity: Dark Conjurations*

Regional Activity: The Whole Soul*

Regional Activity: (Don't Fear) The Reaper*

Side Quest: Durnehviir

Regional Activity: The Soul Husk Merchant*

Side Quest: Impatience of a Saint

To continue this quest, head down the slight slope into an eerie area of low fog blanketing the ground. Two terrifying black skeletal forms—known as Bonemen—ooze out of the earth to attack. Dispatch them, then continue across the foggy earth, past a soul distraught at losing a horse named Arvak, and go toward a set of steps hewn through the giant wall. You're quite welcome to delay this quest by inspecting the outer side of the wall. Otherwise, head over the stepped opening, passing through a black gatehouse, as the path becomes less distinct.

If you stop and speak to the soul who has lost Arvak, you're prompted to search for the horse's skull. You may also see a strange and frightening skeletal steed galloping through the Soul Cairn from time to time. You can't rescue this horse by chasing it. Consult Regional Activity: Arvak the Spectral Steed for more information.

Keep an eye on the horizon as you pass through another black gatehouse. You slowly approach a large and crumbling prison with two shooting flames jetting from the main towers. Continue your maneuvering northeast, across the foundations of a long-lost structure, and back onto the pathway as lightning arcs through the ominous skies. At the next gatehouse, your movements attract the attention of more Bonemen. Slow to deal with three of them escaping from the bone piles and earth at the side of the path, and then step through the gatehouse. Climb the hill to the ornate and looming prison facade. As you reach the steps and view an impenetrable barrier, Serana sees a familiar face.

TIP If Serana isn't with you, she's probably still fighting Bonemen or the other dark denizens of this place. Retrace your steps to help her finish the foes, then return to the prison entrance with her in tow.

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest Menu list, although objectives may.

TIP You should cross-reference this quest with the Soul Cairn map on page 986, which has information on the wide variety of locations in the Soul Cairn, including the locations of every Ideal Master Crystal, Keeper Lair, Lightning Attractor, Teleporter, Reaper Gem Fragment, Conjunction Spell Tome (to summon Soul Guards), as well as the location of the Reaper's Lair, Arvak's Skull, and each page of Jiub's Opus.

The Clouds, the Sky...Everything's Wrong

◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate Valerica

◆ TARGET: Entrance to the Boneyard Prison, in the Soul Cairn

Not Your Mother's Keeper

Serana is ecstatic to finally see her mother. Valerica instantly thinks something is wrong, that Harkon has found a way to decipher the prophecy, but Serana assures her you're both here to stop him, to make everything right. The thought of strangers darkens Valerica's mood, and she orders you to speak with her.

OBJECTIVE: Speak to Valerica

Valerica is suspicious you're here to kill her. You may answer her in any way you wish. Eventually, she reveals that the real key to the Prophecy of the Tyranny of the Sun is Serana herself. The second Elder Scroll that Valerica fled Castle Volkihar with declared that "the Blood of Coldharbour's Daughter will blind the eye of the Dragon." Both Serana and Valerica are "Daughters of Coldharbour" women who offer themselves to the Daedric Prince Molag Bal.

Other revelations abound: Serana's blood is integral to fulfilling the prophecy that Harkon seeks to complete, which is why both mother and daughter fled from Harkon in the first place. But now Harkon grows stronger. The conversation ends with you mentioning you're here for the Elder Scroll and Valerica telling Serana you're here for your own ends.

This talk infuriates Serana, who reveals how dedicated you've been to her in the short time you've known her, especially compared to being placed alive in a sarcophagus by her own mother! After more heated discussions, Valerica comes to an uneasy understanding with her daughter but agrees to assist you both. She has the Elder Scroll safely locked away in her prison, and you're fortunately in a position to breach the barrier that surrounds her.

You must locate the tallest of the rocky spires that surround these prison ruins. Each spire is tended by a Keeper, and destroying all three will release the barrier. Valerica also has one more word of warning: There is a dragon called Durnehviir roaming the Soul Cairn. You are to watch for him; the Ideal Masters have charged him with overseeing the Keepers, and he will intervene if he perceives you as a threat. Your quest updates, and you can ask Valerica for much more information (about her imprisonment, the Soul Cairn, and who the Ideal Masters are).

NOTE The plane of Coldharbour is Molag Bal's dominion within Oblivion. Great slave pens are said to lie in the oozing mud of this domain, while the skies burn in a continuous belch of fire, and a persistent chill envelops the air. This place is arguably more unpleasant than the Soul Cairn you're standing in!

TIP You can complete the following objective prior to finding Valerica, although there are no map markers showing their location if you find the Keepers first. We provide the optimal path to each of them.

OBJECTIVE: Kill the Boneyard Keepers (3)

NOTE The Ideal Masters are mystic entities that lord over the Soul Cairn, controlling every aspect from its fabric to its appearance. Necromancers believe they are the crystalline structures dotting the Soul Cairn, but Valerica believes they've transcended their physical forms. Seek out Valerica for more information.

Freeing a Kept Woman

You may speak to Serana at length about her mother, then check your compass and notice three new markers: These are the locations of the three Keepers. If you're attempting to find the Keepers without the markers, look to the horizon for the tallest rocky spires in the Soul Cairn, with the disintegrating brickwork swirling into the sky.

Keeper 1: The spire is located west of Valerica's location. The Keeper here sits on a massive throne in a large courtyard, surrounded by pillars and other structures. These obstacles provide plenty of hiding opportunities and allow you to duck behind cover to avoid his incredibly damaging weapon swings. Defeat the Keeper, claiming a Black Soul Gem (Grand) and potentially a Dragonbone weapon (at higher levels) from the dust he leaves behind.

Keeper 2: Take the path heading east from the first Keeper. Fight through the low hills of scrub and Bonemen to the next crumbling spire to the southeast. Before you reach the Keeper, deal with any Wrathmen appearing along the path prior to the spire. There are fewer structures to hide behind here, but the Keeper is visible at a greater distance, making ranged attacks much easier.

Keeper 3: Head northeast from the second Keeper. Among the twisted and gnarled trees, as well as the Bonemen and Wrathmen attacks, you may stumble across a soul named Jiub (Side Quest: Impatience of a Saint). Farther northeast is a small tower with an altar inside. Guarded by Mistmen (floating apparitions of skeletal blackness), and attracting lightning as you get close, this altar has Arvak's Skull atop it. Pick it up to complete Regional Activity: Arvak the Spectral Steed.

Continue on a rough path to the northeast, through more Bonemen and Wrathmen combat, toward a circular Teleporter guarded by foes. As the third Keeper's spire has already detached itself from the earth, you must step into the purple Teleporter to reach the spire. Do not fall at this point; instead, head counterclockwise around the edge of the spire and up the steps until you face down the third Keeper, who carries a bow that can drop you with a single arrow. Time ranged attacks to strike before the Keeper can fire his bow, or use the environment for cover. When the third Keeper bursts out of existence, return to Valerica.

Battle for the Boneyard

◇ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Valerica

◇ OBJECTIVE: Follow Valerica

Return to Valerica, who is impressed at your mettle. With the prison barrier down, Valerica warns you to keep an eye out for Durnehviir. You're then instructed to follow her. Pause at the Alchemy Lab or at Valerica's small collection of books before watching her open the giant doors that lead into her prison. This area, known as the Boneyard, is a massive graveyard sealed by a huge perimeter wall of black stone and spires. Suddenly, Serana spots movement. A giant, tattered dragon lands on an arch across the stone yard, enslaved by the Ideal Masters so it can challenge you to combat!

◇ OBJECTIVE: Slay Durnehviir

Durnehviir (picture 1) has attack patterns much like the other dragons you may have fought (and if you haven't, consult the tactics on page 205). His breath is more of a bolt of soul energy, which is just as damaging as fire or frost. The biggest problem are the Bonemen he conjures (shown in the second picture). Deal with them before they swarm you, ideally as Durnehviir circles overhead. Concentrate on the dragon when he lands or hovers close to your location. You may also wish to stay close to Serana and Valerica, letting them deal with the Bonemen or dragon while you provide supporting strikes at the other foe. Once Durnehviir is slain, his body collapses in on itself, but this is only one aspect of the beast, and you aren't rewarded with Durnehviir's soul.

◇ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Valerica

◇ OBJECTIVE: Follow Valerica

◇ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Elder Scroll

Valerica walks to an alcove on the lower wall on the Boneyard's eastern side. Speak with her, and she admits astonishment that Durnehviir was slain... unless the dragon's soul was more resilient than its host body. In fact, the beast may be reconstituting itself. Valerica suggests you take the Elder Scroll and be on your way. Oblige her, and walk to the alcove she's leading you to. Wait for her to unlock a long, ornate chest. Gather the Elder Scroll and any nearby potion concoctions you wish.

➤ Elder Scroll (Blood)

◇ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Valerica

◇ SEEKING DISCLOSURE QUEST OBJECTIVE: Bring both Elder Scrolls to Dexion

◇ OBJECTIVE: Return to Tamriel

At this point, if you had Serana trap part of your soul to allow you to enter the Soul Cairn, you can ask Valerica for help in retrieving it (Regional Activity: The Whole Soul*). Simply follow the marker on your compass to the soul fragment's location and reclaim it, restoring you to full health again.

Quest Conclusion

As a Daughter of Coldharbour, Valerica feels she must remain here, as returning to Tamriel increases Harkon's chances of bringing the Tyranny of the Sun to fruition. Say your good-byes, then begin to retrace your steps back to Tamriel. Head southwest out of the Boneyard and toward the devastated plains of the Soul Cairn. As you're about to leave, a large dragon startles you. Durnehviir has returned, only on this occasion, he wishes you to stay your weapons and listen awhile.

Durnehviir reveals he isn't dead but is trapped between "laas and dinok" (life and death). If you're willing to hear him out, Durnehviir honors you with the name "Qahnaarin" or "Vanquisher." At this point, Side Quest: Durnehviir begins, as the dragon asks a favor of you: to call him while you're in Tamriel, freeing him from this place. To this end, he gives you the three words of a Shout that will summon him.

➤ Word of Power: Curse, Summon Durnehviir

➤ Word of Power: Never, Summon Durnehviir

➤ Word of Power: Dying, Summon Durnehviir

Once you've finished speaking with Durnehviir, travel in a vaguely southwest direction through the Soul Cairn, retracing your steps back up into Volkihar Ruins to complete this quest.

NOTE Once you've bade Valerica farewell, you can always speak to her again, learning more information through conversation, including information on how to retrieve the missing part of your soul, if Serana took it from you in order to enter the Soul Cairn. Consult Regional Activity: The Whole Soul* (page 578) for more information.

Postquest Activities: Seeking Disclosure

Dawnguard Quest: Seeking Disclosure is still active (as is Scroll Scouting if you haven't found the Elder Scroll [Dragon] yet). Exit the ruins via the door in the southwest corner of Valerica's laboratory and out onto the Castle

Volkihar Balcony. From here, Fast-Travel to your next destination: to start the search for the Elder Scroll (Dragon) or, if you have both Elder Scrolls, to the fortress where Dexion Evicus awaits you.

◇ Return to your thrall in Castle Volkihar

◇ Dexion awaits you in Fort Dawnguard

When you meet with Dexion, his eyes are bandaged. This isn't a good sign, and the news gets worse: In his haste to read the first Elder Scroll (Sun), the Moth Priest neglected proper preparation. But you're not finished; it all depends on how much you're willing to risk to find Auriel's Bow. Dawnguard Main Quest: Unseen Visions now begins.

Setting New Sights

NOTE This quest begins at the culmination of the previous three intertwined quests: Seeking Disclosure (which updates after you secure each Elder Scroll) Beyond Death (which has you retrieve the Elder Scroll [Blood] from the Soul Cairn), and Scroll Scouting (which begins the search for the Elder Scroll [Dragon]). Seeking Disclosure updates you to meet the Moth Priest Dexion Evicus, who has been stricken by blindness.

Back at the fortress, once you realize Dexion Evicus cannot read the Elder Scrolls you've assembled, ask him what you need to do to unlock the knowledge contained in the Scrolls. He tells you that Tamriel has a scattering of secluded locations known as Ancestor Glades. The one in Skyrim is located in the Pine Forest. Performing the "Ritual of the Ancestor Moth" within the glade should provide the answers you seek. The ritual involves carefully removing bark from a Canticle Tree, which then attracts Ancestor Moths to you. When seven swarms of moths are following, they provide you with second sight, which you need to decipher the Scrolls. You're welcome to ask Dexion additional questions about his blindness, but for now you have the location of the Ancestor Glade.

- Elder Scroll (Blood)
- Elder Scroll (Dragon)
- Elder Scroll (Sun)

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find a Moth Priest's knife

◆ TARGET: Draw Knife, in the Ancestor's Glade, Falkreath Hold

With all three Elder Scrolls on your person, set out from your fortress, heading toward Falkreath Hold and the Ancestor's Glade. It is located high in the southern mountains close to Pale Pass, near the Bloodlet Throne, and is easily accessible from Angi's Camp (but not from the woodland below Peak's Shade Tower). A small copse of trees and a stone route marker are the only clues to this hidden grove.

Enter the crack in the mountain and into a small cavern; step across the fallen log and through the small winding tunnel, and the glade's majesty soon becomes apparent. Although you're free to fully explore the turquoise mineral pools and splash about in the water, simply follow the ancient stone steps down and around to the glade itself. No one has been here for centuries. Duck under the three ancient henges to reach a carved pedestal shaped like the insignia of the Moth Priests. Floating in the middle of it is the Draw Knife. Take it.

➤ Draw Knife

◆ OBJECTIVE: Gather bark from a Canticle Tree

◆ TARGET: Any Canticle Tree in the Ancestor Glade

Locate one of the Canticle Trees (there's one just to the right of the pedestal, although any of the pink-blossoming trees within the Ancestor Glade will do), and begin to carefully scrape away, harvesting the Canticle Bark until you have enough and your quest updates.

➤ Canticle Bark

◆ OBJECTIVE: Attract Ancestor Moth Swarms (7)

◆ TARGET: Any Ancestor Moth Swarms in the Ancestor Glade

Elder Apparitions

Dotted about the glade are several Ancestor Moth swarms. They are friendly (very friendly, once you walk into their cloud of fluttering wings), and there are more than the seven swarms you need to attract.

Simply walk the rest of the path as it winds through the glade's rocky outcrops, looking for swarms as you go. You can retrace your steps back up to the glade entrance if you wish. But don't lose your footing on the slightly treacherous terrain if you decide to explore off the beaten track. Once the seventh swarm has found you, a beam of bright light emanates from the pedestal altar where you found the Draw Knife.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Enter the column of light and read the Elder Scroll (Blood)

Stand in the middle of the light (you may wish to speak to Serana about the wondrous tranquility you're experiencing), and then access your Items > Books Menu and read the Elder Scroll (Blood). Your vision swims with light and ancient knowledge. You automatically bring out the other Scrolls and your vision changes. It is as if you're gazing down from the heavens, looking at the Reach and Haafingar Holds. The runes of Markarth (to the southwest) and Solitude (to the northeast) are visible, glowing red. Between the two, in the Drudach Mountains close to a Karth River tributary, is a third rune. The rune marks the place to uncover and the entrance to the location of Auriel's Bow!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Serana

Quest Conclusion

Serana was worried—you were as white as a Snow Elf—but after conversing with her, you are imbued with the knowledge of a place called Darkfall Cave. Serana reckons you both should set off immediately, before the forces against you are able to track you down. The quest now concludes.

Postquest Activities

Dawnguard Main Quest: Touching the Sky begins immediately. You can ask Serana about her knowledge of Auriel's Bow before leaving this place. On your way out, prepare for an ambush!

A complement of Dawnguard soldiers, including an Armored Troll, descend from the entrance, determined to thwart your deviant progress. Cull them or flee if their might becomes too much for you.

A half-dozen Vampire Thralls, controlled by a Master Vampire, head down from the entrance, with only one purpose in mind: to crush your hopes of progress. Defeat these night stalkers or flee before them.

Auriel's Odyssey

◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate Auriel's Bow

◆ TARGET: Auriel's Bow, Temple Balcony, Forgotten Vale

TIP This quest is an epic expedition across a vast and previously unexplored wilderness. Therefore, it is worth preparing by gathering potions, lightening your inventory, and stocking up for the trek to come. You should also carry at least 40 Elven Arrows, but wait to use them until you reach the end of this quest.

After defeating (or fleeing from) the "unwelcoming committee" that confronts you as you leave Ancestor's Glade, head outside, then look to your world map. Your next destination, Darkfall Cave, is located south of Mor Khazgur and north of Druadach Redoubt, in the northern part of the Reach. The cave entrance protrudes from the snow level, above some sloping and uneven ground dotted with trees.

Once inside the cave, follow the narrow tunnel around the waterfall, past a Frostbite Spider and web-spun alcove, before heading west across a rickety wooden bridge. The trail goes cold here, until you look down. The way forward lies in the fast-flowing water below.

Face south and drop into the underground torrent, riding it into a plunge pool and over a waterfall to a pair of rushing streams. A few Frostbite Spiders follow you into this dark and dank environment. Deal with them now, as there's a Giant Frostbite Spider in an alcove to the east (it guards a skeleton draped over a chest), a little farther along the cavern. Continue north, following the tunnel as it narrows. Follow the trail of torches up to a campfire. A dead Breton lies here next to a chest. He carries a note detailing his inability to deal peaceably with trolls.

► Darkfall Cave Note

There's a tunnel that slopes up to the west (which returns you to Skyrim's surface), but you should head down, to the east. Avoid the trip wire (unless you enjoy being bruised by falling rocks), and follow the tunnel as it bends around to the north and opens into a larger, waterlogged cavern. Amid the gloom, stare north to some bloody remains, a torch, and a chest guarded by two trolls. Ignore or defeat them (a little too late for the Breton whose corpse you just rifled through), and splash through the rest of the cavern heading west. It is here you spot a very pale elf, standing in worship to an effigy of the sun. Gelebor beckons you forward; you have nothing to fear here.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Gelebor

Knight-Paladin Gelebor welcomes you to the Great Chantry of Auri-El, otherwise known as Alkosh, Akatosh, or Auriel; there are many names for the foremost of the gods. Gelebor is among the last of his race, a Snow Elf not

"turned" or betrayed like the rest of the Falmer you have faced. Gelebor knows why you're here, but before he grants you clues to the Bow's location, he requires your assistance: You must kill Arch-Curate Vyrthur, his brother.

Gelebor believes the Betrayed (Falmer) have done something to Vyrthur, and previous Falmer incursions have resulted in much loss of life: The Falmer stormed the Inner Sanctum of the Chantry and (Gelebor believes) corrupted his brother. Gelebor cannot go to his brother's aid, as he has vowed never to leave the Wayshrines unguarded. With that, Gelebor conjures a ball of light and casts it at the carved sun in the center of the pool. A large, elfen-made shrine rumbles out of the ground. Impressive. Gelebor explains that this Wayshrine was used for meditation and transport long ago, when the Chantry was a place of enlightenment.

Serana asks about the basin, which was used by initiates once their mantras were spoken. They dipped a ceremonial ewer into the basin at each Wayshrine before proceeding to the next. Upon reaching the sanctum, the initiates could present their ewer, filled with the water of all the Wayshrines, allowing them to enter the temple and gain an audience with the Arch-Curate himself. Serana isn't too interested in this symbolism. However, you'll have to be, as this is the only method of accessing the Sanctum to reach Vyrthur! There are five Wayshrines to find, and each requires you to use the ewer to retrieve and mix the sacred waters. You're handed the ewer, and Gelebor wishes you well.

► Initiate's Ewer

◆ OBJECTIVE: Survive Darkfall Passage

◆ TARGET: Western edge of Darkfall Grotto (Wayshrine)

Before you depart, you can speak to Gelebor at length about the spectral Prelates who guard each Wayshrine, find out more about the Chantry, and learn more about the Snow Elves. Then step into the first Wayshrine (which you don't need to extract water from) and into the Portal to Darkfall Passage.

► Seeking Passage and Light

Stepping into Darkfall Passage, head down the narrow tunnel. The odd, luminous fungus plants recede as you approach, plunging you into gloom. These plants retract when you approach or strike them, reducing the light level in their immediate vicinity. Depending on your combat style, you may wish to keep your Vampire's Sight or a light spell active to improve visibility, or take advantage of the darkness by sneaking past the enemies that lie ahead. The Falmer, being blind, are unaffected by the light, but you may find it slightly easier to sneak by the Chaurus in darkness.

Keep your wits about you as a Chaurus Hunter bursts from its ground cocoon. Strike down two Falmer as you reach a small grotto where you must defeat another of the Betrayed, along with a couple of their Chaurus pets. Head down the tunnel to the west, turning north and avoiding the trip wire or you'll receive a Falmer claw trap to the face.

The tunnel turns to the southwest, opening up to a Falmer camp. Make short work of the four or five Falmer foes here, along with another Hunter as you close in on a subterranean waterfall. Then maneuver around to the waterfall's opposite side, edging along the ledge and heading north to a second Falmer camp. After you clear this immediate area of another couple of foes, inspect the chest below the Falmer bridge. Harvest the Gleamblossom if you wish, but remove the chest's trap trigger [Apprentice] or face a skewering from a trap.

Cross the bridge to the makeshift altar of skeletal remains, repelling four more Falmer foes as you head west, avoiding the bones that alert foes ahead. Pass the large glowing crystals, moving south and then east up a tunnel to another

Falmer camp. This area has a Chaurus pen (attack the two beasts from range for easy takedowns) and a toughened Falmer to face. Then drop two more Falmer who enter via both of the two waterfall bridges behind the hut. With the coast clear, head through the water (or drop to a lower ledge, which is flagged in the Atlas on page 841). To the southeast is a dead-end chamber with a trip wire and claw trap and Chaurus Hunters to fight. You don't have to go this way; continue past the skeletal remains and down the windy tunnel.

Finally, you reach two rope releases, and some traps set into the ceiling. Serana comments that whatever is on the other side of this, the Falmer wanted to keep it there. Activate the left rope release, and a rock wall to the right (north) rumbles open. Ahead is a strange, catlike predator.

Either react and kill it immediately, or pull the other rope release and hope to skewer it with the multitude of traps (a claw, spears, and darts) it lets loose. You've brought down a Vale Sabre Cat. Now to find out what it was guarding....

Wayshrine of Illumination: Into the Gloomy Grotto

Step through into the giant Darkfall Grotto. Serana is suitably impressed. Stop at the initial vista point and look to the west. On the grotto's other side is a Wayshrine! To reach it, you can dive off into the water below, risking a death plummet, and then scramble onto dry land. Or, you can take a more sedate (and safer) route to the right (northeast), heading down the sloping path, past some glowing plants and crystals, and startling some Vale Deer (which are skittish but not hostile). Follow the narrow path across the grotto water and up to a shallow cave bathed in purple light, where you must face another Vale Sabre Cat. Wind your way north, to the grotto's opposite side, where your quest finally updates:

◆ OBJECTIVE: Fill the Initiate's Ewer (0/5)

◆ TARGET: Water Basin, at each of the five Wayshrines

You are greeted at the Wayshrine by spectral Prelate Sidanyis. He welcomes you to the Wayshrine of Illumination. Answer that yes, you are prepared to honor the mantras of Auri-El and fill your vessel with his enlightenment. He raises the Wayshrine. Step inside and draw water at the basin (this is very important!). Then step through the Portal to Forgotten Vale.

◆ OBJECTIVE COMPLETE: Fill the Initiate's Ewer (1/5)

Wayshrine of Sight: A Whole Other World

NOTE As you explore the Forgotten Vale, there are two Regional Activities that you can undertake and a multitude of side areas to explore. It is well worth reading up on what needs to be done so you don't miss anything. You should also check the Forgotten Vale map and Atlas information on page 996 to familiarize yourself with the topography of this incredible new land.

Regional Activity: Ancient Falmer Tomes* (page 579)

Regional Activity: Paragon of the Frost Giants* (page 580)

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest Menu list, although objectives may.

You're now in completely unfamiliar territory, somewhere beyond Skyrim's western borders and seemingly in the middle of a giant, rocky pit. Pass the luminous rocks and plants as you wind through the tunnel. You end up at the top of the pit and out into Forgotten Vale itself. The initial valley is usually shrouded in faint mist, with Vale Deer (and the odd Vale Sabre Cat) to do with as you wish. If you want to explore a bit, a Frost Troll lives in a small den up the snowy foothill to your left (southwest). But mainly stay on the valley floor, heading northwest through the old archway ruin and up the rough steps before turning right (northeast). Serana spots a second Wayshrine.

You are greeted by Prelate Athring, who welcomes you to the Wayshrine of Sight. Answer that you are ready to fill your vessel and the prelate opens the Wayshrine. Dip your ewer into the water basin before heading back down the hill. Don't return to Darkfall Cave; instead, press on, exploring farther into the Forgotten Vale.

◆ OBJECTIVE COMPLETE: Fill the Initiate's Ewer (2/5)

TIP As you progress, the Wayshrines you open provide portals to the previous Wayshrines, enabling a rudimentary "Fast-Travel" system between different areas. This is useful when exploring the Forgotten Vale after completing this quest.

Wayshrine of Learning: A Vale Revealed

Head down the hill to the southwest, through another archway and up a hill encased in snow. A group of Frostbite Spiders (and a bigger one behind them) stand between you and the opening to the rest of Forgotten Vale—a massive and sprawling ice-encrusted land dotted with the remains of Snow Elf architecture. It is easy to get lost in this huge valley, with a massive frozen lake to the southwest and many more surprises to come.

TIP With such a large area to explore, you are free to search everywhere and anywhere you wish. However, the following walkthrough shows you the optimal path, taking in all of the sights and combat opportunities. It is, however, but one of the many routes you may wish to take. Remember there are numerous Secondary Locations to discover. Find out more in the Atlas, on page 996.

Head south down the slope toward the water's edge. Along the way you'll spot a skeletal corpse sprawled over a chest ([FV2.A] Snow Lake Entrance: The Sprawled Skeleton). Close to the chest is a strange book; this is one of four unknown books you can gather while you're here, as part of the Regional Activity: Ancient Falmer Tomes. * You can optionally turn right (northwest), working your way to the lake's northwest end. Here, you'll face the first of five Frost Giants (as part of Regional Activity: Paragon of the Frost Giants*) close to a waterfall. Claim the Amethyst Paragon from its corpse. There's a snowy path northwest of here, but you're missing some crucial locations if you take it.

➤ Unknown Book, Vol. I

➤ Amethyst Paragon

For now, head to the lake's edge and look to the left (south). Search for the pointed archway ruin ahead of you, along the lake's left side, and head toward it. Just before you pass through it, there's a Wayshrine on a snowy bank to your left. This one is guarded by the ghostly form of Prelate Celegrath. He welcomes you to the Wayshrine of Learning. Agree to fill the vessel, step into the Wayshrine once it is revealed, and draw from the basin.

◆ OBJECTIVE COMPLETE: Fill the Initiate's Ewer (3/5)

◆ Wayshrine of Resolution: Awake at the Lake

From the last Wayshrine, look to the southwest, toward a snaking snow path up through the frozen rocks. This is your next destination, although you can investigate a waterfall to the southeast, which empties the water from the lake down into a subterranean area with Falmer to face and a final watery plummet back down to Darkfall Grotto and the Wayshrine of Illumination. If you fall down the waterfall, use the Wayshrine portal to return to the third Wayshrine, instead of traipsing all the way back.

Now climb the snaking snow path to the giant frozen lake on a huge plateau overlooking the water below. Gaze above to Auriel's Chapel Temple Balcony, visible high on the cliffs to the south. But not before the guardians of the lake make their appearance! The following combat is optional (as you don't need to investigate the frozen lake) and occurs only if you've completed Main Quest: Dragon Rising.

A wary Serana notices a rumble below the ice, and moments later, two dragons—Naaslaarum and Voslaarum—burst up through the lake and begin to dive-bomb the ice, and your position! This combat is tricky, as you are fighting two dragons simultaneously, in an area where you have no cover but they often do (as they dive through the ice). After you slay both dragons, investigate the rock formation on the eastern edge of the frozen lake, close to the waterfalls. A Word of Power is sealed into the stone.

➤ Dragon Soul (2)

➤ Word of Power: Drain Vitality

Head north and northwest to the opposite end of the frozen lake, looking for an arch and steps to climb. North along the path, past the skeletal remains and other ruined debris, is your next Wayshrine. Greet Prelate Nirilor in the usual manner, requesting he raise the Wayshrine of Resolution. Then fill your ewer for the fourth time.

◆ OBJECTIVE COMPLETE: Fill the Initiate's Ewer (4/5)

◆ Wayshrine of Radiance: An Epic Trek

The final Wayshrine requires a considerable trek, so take a moment to survey the scenery. Head north, toward a natural bridge, and cross it (picture 1). At the other side of the bridge, you can optionally turn right (southeast), head along the previously unexplored path, and turn left (east) to follow a narrow path over the ridgeline. Move through the rocky outcrops to an area above the waterfall where you slew your first Frost Giant, where the snowy path links up. There is a second waterfall here, along with a shallow cave and a second Frost Giant to slay (picture 2). Remove the Sapphire Paragon from the corpse. Both Paragons can be used on the Snow Elf Paragon Portal on the river's northwestern side, across from the shallow cave. Where you end up is revealed in Regional Activity: Paragon of the Frost Giants (page 580).

➤ Sapphire Paragon

Backtrack to the natural bridge and head west, down the rocky ledge to a Falmer hut. Although you can continue to slog your way upstream (and locate Falmer firing down on you from above, Chaurus Hunters hatching on the banks of the rocky river, and the entrance to Shardslope Cave), it is safer and easier to turn northeast, open the Falmer gate, and follow a zigzagging path to a second hut, killing Falmer as you see them. Then swing around to face the southwest (as shown). A series of treacherous cliffs and rickety bridges await!

TIP Shardslope Cave exits farther along the upper cliffside, allowing you to bypass some of the battles in the exterior. However, it's usually worth securing the exterior as you go so you don't find yourself under attack from foes both above and below. Enter Shardslope Cave—an interior Falmer camp with around six foes to face and a spiraling path to the upper exit—at your leisure; it is a purely optional area.

Expect Falmer bowmen along the rock ledges, bridges, and crags as you progress southwest. You cross a rickety bridge and a rocky bridge heading west. At the flapping banner (marking the upper entrance to Shardslope Cave), turn and look southeast. The Falmer have been busy creating bridges and huts throughout this gigantic fissure. Clamber slowly down to a bridge with a hut at the far end (picture 1). Then climb the steep, rocky path to the northeast. There are chests and long-range takedown options along the way. At the top is a circular path to the right (south) leading counterclockwise past a shallow cave with a third Frost Giant to face (picture 2). This foe carries the Emerald Paragon.

► Emerald Paragon

TIP Don't worry about backtracking to the Paragon Portal: There's time to complete this once this quest is over.

Continue counterclockwise, past the precariously placed chest. Head roughly west across a rickety bridge, then to a rock bridge to a Falmer hut. Cut down the Falmer that emerges before crossing another bridge to the south.

There are two more huts (check the bridges to come and the general area for foes as you progress) and more Falmer bridges downhill heading east, past another hut. Then switch back to the west, to a dead-end ledge with another hut (which has Unknown Book, Vol. III inside). Now descend south, to the river's edge. To the east is a snowy hill you can climb to find Moonstone Ore Veins and a great view of the Frozen Lake. But your main path is upstream, south past a trio of Falmer, toward a thin gap in a giant glacier hanging over the river. Enter the Glacial Crevise.

► Unknown Book, Vol. III

Glacial Crevise: An Icy Pilgrimage

Wade south through the waist-deep icy water until the tunnel opens up to a massive interior chamber. Up ahead, a Frost Troll is stomping around, and two Falmer appear on the snowy bank on the left side. Wait for them to fight it out, then finish up the remains. Continue up the snowy bank to the remains of the bridge. Cross it to the icy ledges and work your way along the path, past two huts with Falmer to deal with, and into a tunnel with a gate at the far end. This brings you out at an incredibly tall ice fissure with water at the bottom. Step over or deactivate the trip wire so you aren't clawed. Then head west along the fissure ledge.

NOTE From the initial chamber, you can swim west, past a Falmer hut into the fissure, and ignore the upper ledge route completely, although you're open to attacks from above.

Remove the Giant Frostbite Spider blocking the ledge in front of you. Then scan the Falmer hut and bridge at the fissure's far end, tackling the two foes patrolling. Cross to the opposite side, optionally heading back to a dead end and another foe. Push open the gate in the fissure's northern wall, entering a narrow L-shaped tunnel with a trip wire in the middle (watch that claw!). Head into the next section of the crevice, killing two more Falmer. You can then descend to more huts for more combat or head east through another gate.

This leads to a hut and a path curving around to the east and out to another large crevice area with a huge drop to your left. You have excellent visibility for long-range strikes. There are also two huts to inspect, a bridge to fight your way across at the far end, and one more tunnel section to the east, which finally brings you out into Forgotten Vale again.

Return to Forgotten Vale

Face your fourth Frost Giant on steep, rocky ground. Welcome to the Falmer fissure, a set of narrow crags where the Falmer have constructed numerous bridge pathways. But first, inspect the path leading north, past a strand of bones and up through a gate to a steep ravine with a Frost Giant tending to his bone collection at the top. Slay him, and any Falmer in your way, and claim the Diamond Paragon from the corpse.

► Diamond Paragon

Return to the fissure and inspect the first two huts for items. Then drop down to ground level and gaze east; there are a couple of trip wires (and claw traps), as well as Falmer that attack from their upper walkways. Slowly fight your way along this narrow pass, killing Falmer as you go and checking huts for items and using them as cover. There's Quicksilver Ore to mine at the far end under the huts, but the exit is up above.

Take the walkway southeast to the second part of the fissure, with four huts to ransack and a group of Chaurus Hunters to remove from their nests below. Check the hut on the upper walkway at this area's far eastern end; there's an Unknown Book to claim here. Then drop down and find the gate into a sloping tunnel to the south. Climb the sloping tunnel, passing a hut and a Quicksilver Ore Vein, and trigger the trip wire so the subsequent rockfall passes harmlessly by. There are more Hunters to face, and more Ore Veins, as you reach the tunnel summit.

➤ Unknown Book, Vol. IV

The last Wayshrine lies under some Falmer walkways and huts. It is tended by Prelate Edhelbor. Agree to his request, and he opens the Wayshrine of Radiance for you. Dip the ewer into the last basin: You now have the offering needed to unlock the door to the Inner Sanctum. Then inspect the Falmer huts above the Wayshrine; the top one has potions to grab.

◆ OBJECTIVE COMPLETE: Fill the Initiate's Ewer (5/5)

◆ OBJECTIVE: Gain entry to the Inner Sanctum

◆ Purging the Inner Sanctum

It is but a short walk to the magnificent Inner Sanctum of the Snow Elves. Cross the bridge, which is still mostly intact, and enter an ornate courtyard. While in decay, the place still holds a sense of grandeur, in part due to the statue of Auriel that dominates the temple grounds. Climb the curved steps behind the statue, and empty the ewer into the water basin. The ceremonial water runs down three channels, to Auriel's crest, and a faintly green light shines forth, unlocking the Sanctum's entrance.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate Arch-Curate Vyrthur

◆ TARGET: Arch-Curate Vyrthur, Auriel's Chapel

You're greeted by a multitude of Falmer. But fortunately, these hapless Betrayers have been frozen in ice and pose no immediate threat. Many are clustered around a central shrine to Auriel. There are gifts to Auriel that you can take at the foot of the pedestal, as well as items to pry from the hands of the Falmer. But be warned—your actions may rouse them from their torpor, causing them to attack!

Next, inspect an altar along the western wall of the temple entrance. Activate the altar, and you place your ewer onto it; this opens a secret door directly ahead of you. Step through, then turn around and grab the ewer and step back before the door closes. Now investigate the secret passage you've found; it leads to an ice cave where the fifth and final Frost Giant dwells. Claim the Ruby Paragon from his corpse, then activate a second altar in the northern wall. Place the ewer on the altar to access a second, smaller hidden chamber with a chest, a variety of potions, and Elven Arrows. Check the entire area for skeletal remains and other items, before returning to the first secret door. Place the ewer on the side altar (grab it again afterward!), and step back through into the main temple entrance.

➤ Ruby Paragon ➤ Elven Arrows (30)

When you're ready to proceed, open the ceremonial doors in the northern wall and head through, following the large corridor past more frozen Falmer. They each carry items that may interest you, though again, disturbing them may cause them to awaken. Check for a chest along this corridor, too, and continue winding through the corridor to an icy hole in the northwest corner as the corridor's structural integrity increasingly weakens.

Head into a rocky passage with a side cave to your left (southeast) containing a chest. Then continue down the passage and into Auriel's Chapel. The icy passage drops into frozen ruins and a very narrow corridor to your left (northeast). Step out into the chapel, where Arch-Curate Vyrthur is waiting on his throne, surrounded by frozen Falmer.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Confront Arch-Curate Vyrthur

◆ Vyrthur's Minions: Chapel Battle

Vyrthur has sealed himself behind large shards of ice and a magical barrier. As you approach, he mockingly refuses to hand the bow over and is actually happy you've brought your "fetching companion" to him.

What he wants with Serana is something of a mystery, but there's little time to ponder as he waves his arm and many of the previously frozen Falmer shatter back to life!

You're immediately assaulted by around eight Frozen Chauruses. Use the relatively large size of the chapel to your benefit, staying on the move while slaying each Chaurus one at a time. Vyrthar then activates six Frozen Falmers; you must deal with them quickly, using swift movement to dodge their attacks. Once you dispatch these initial waves of foes, Vyrthar calls your combat a wasted effort. The battle intensifies!

When Vyrthar begins to pull down the ceiling, dodge the falling debris, then repel five more Frozen Falmer (including a Shaman) before more sections of ceiling and support columns come crashing down. Fend off the next wave of Falmer, and Vyrthar conjures an Ancient Frost Atronach, along with around eight remaining Falmer. Combat becomes exceptionally fraught at this point, as you battle to slay all the frozen foes you can. Aside from being swift of foot, you may wish to attempt some of the following tactics to gain the advantage:

When Vyrthar starts pulling down the ceiling and destroying columns, he only does it if you move to a new part of the chapel. So if you can focus the fight in one part of the room, you won't have to worry about him dropping the ceiling on you.

Alternatively, if you can coax the Falmer (and the Ancient Frost Atronach) and maneuver them around the room correctly, you can actually get Vyrthar to pull the ceiling and columns down on his own minions: Let them take the damage, instead of you.

If you're having trouble with the Ancient Frost Atronach, employ both strategies. Focus the early stages of the fight in one area of the room; then when he is summoned, begin pulling him under the fallen roof and column masonry that are being destroyed.

The narrow entrance hall can be a death trap (as it's a dead end), but it does force the enemy to fight you one at a time. It's worth firing on your foes from here (as you won't be struck by falling chapel sections) and then backing up if you're swarmed.

If you have access to Rune Spells (especially the Fire Rune spell), you may wish to lay some at the foot of the throne steps so the Ancient Frost Atronach suffers damage after being summoned. If you're in the entry corridor, firing from range and casting exploding runes, you can severely weaken your foes before they reach you.

If all else fails, stay close to Serana, then step behind her so she absorbs most of the enemy aggression. She soon stumbles, but this can afford you some time to heal or launch your own attacks.

Let Twilight Fall and Blood Spill: Temple Balcony Battle

When all of Vyrthar's minions have fallen, the Snow Elf is most put out and intends to bring the entire chapel down around you all. Before you can react, he does just that. Serana helps you to your feet as you follow her toward a sealed Wayshrine and the Temple Balcony, which overlooks the frozen lake far below. But you're not here for the vistas: Head up the steps to the balcony edge, and watch as Serana firmly requests the bow.

TIP Just prior to this point, it's worth using any items (potions or apparel) with Resist Shock capabilities!

A wounded Vyrthar spits back that Gelebor's story (that Vyrthar had been corrupted by the Betrayed) is nothing close to the truth: A look into Vyrthar's eyes verifies he is actually a vampire! The moment he was infected by one of his own initiates, he tells you both that Auri-El turned away from him. Vyrthar sought revenge on the god, not by facing Auri-El directly but by chipping away at the god's influence across the world. He needed the blood of a vampire and the god's own weapon—Auriel's Bow. And thus the prophecy was born; the Tyranny of the Sun was created by Vyrthar but lacked a vital ingredient: the blood of a pure vampire. The blood of a Daughter of Coldharbour! It seems a final combat is inevitable, as Vyrthar suddenly breaks free of Serana's grasp.

OBJECTIVE: Slay Arch-Curate Vyrthar

Vyrthar has an extremely nasty shock attack that can floor you in seconds. But the advantage here is that he's outnumbered: Provided you can dispatch any creatures he conjures, you can work together with Serana to bring him down. Step behind her if you need a moment to heal or recover, and use your own healing spells to keep her on her feet. Ranged weapons are easy to hit with, but watch out for Vyrthar's dagger assaults if you choose to face him in melee. Eventually the Prelate falls. Inspect his form before heading down the steps to find Gelebor waiting for you.

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

Quest Conclusion

Speak to Gelebor, who has summoned the Wayshrine at the temple balcony. He knows that the restoration of this Wayshrine means Vyrthar must be dead. After you explain the Betrayed weren't to blame, Gelebor is actually pleased, as he hopes his brethren might shed their hatred and believe in Auri-Ei once again. As for now, you've restored the Chantry, you have the right to wield Auriel's Bow, and Gelebor is happy to help bless any Elven Arrows you have, transforming them to fabled Sunhallowed Arrows!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve Auriel's Bow

You can question Gelebor further about what his plans are, but to finish this quest, claim the sparkling bow in the Wayshrine. Have Gelebor create Sunhallowed Arrows (from Elven Arrows in groups of up to 20 at a time). Ask Gelebor about Auriel's Bow once you have it, and you're told that vampire's blood can also affect arrows fired from this bow. Speak to Serana (after starting the next quest), and she (reluctantly) agrees to treat any Elven Arrows you may have with her blood, creating Bloodcursed Elven Arrows (in groups of up to 20 at a time).

➤ Auriel's Bow

➤ Sunhallowed Arrows (20 or more)

➤ Bloodcursed Arrows (20 or more)

TIP Consult page 139 or page 551 for the effects of these arrows. You can return (via Wayshrines) to Gelebor and create as many Sunhallowed Arrows as you like. The same goes for Bloodcursed Arrows, although Serana supplies those. Only Elven Arrows can be imbued with this power.

Postquest Activities

Dawnguard Main Quest: Kindred Judgment begins the moment you speak to Serana. You're also free to complete any remaining Regional Quests before leaving Forgotten Vale (don't forget to insert all five Paragons into the portal). The fourth Unknown Book (Vol. II) is located in an area only accessible via the Paragon Portal.

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dawnguard Main Quest: Touching the Sky

LOCATIONS: Castle Volkihar, Forgotten Vale, Fort Dawnguard

CHARACTERS: Garan Marethi, Gelebor, Isran, Serana

ENEMIES: Lord Harkon

◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak to Serana, Speak to Isran (Dawnguard only), Confront Harkon with Auriel's Bow, Slay Harkon

TIP At this point, it's worth stocking up on Elven Arrows, then having Serana or Gelebor transform them into Bloodcursed or Sunhallowed Arrows (respectively). If you sided with the Dawnguard, take advantage of their unique weapons as well, including enhanced crossbows and the Rune series of items from the Lost Relic faction quests. Also, set Auriel's Bow as a Favorite: It is incredibly helpful. Need more help? Consult the "Initial Preparations" section below.

Fast-Travel away from the temple balcony. Your next destination depends on your alliance.

Dawnguard: A New Dawn Rises

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Isran

Auriel's Light Shines

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Serana

After your talk with Gelebor, turn and speak with Serana. She tells you that it's time to face her father.

After what her mother told her, Serana realizes she can't trust her father. His death is the only option. You can proceed to Castle Volkihar at your earliest convenience.

Bringing the fight to Harkon is easier than letting him relentlessly stalk you both, but you will need allies in order to assault the castle. Serana suggests you head back to Isran and let him view the prize you've attained. He's likely to lend a sword or two to the cause.

Travel back to Fort Dawnguard. Here, Isran is uncharacteristically incredulous, marveling at the beauty of Auriel's Bow. After one final nod toward the trustworthiness of Serana, Isran agrees to address the Dawnguard; his men deserve to know they've gained the upper hand. Wait a few moments for the Dawnguard to assemble (including the friends you may have made completing the Faction Quests), and listen to Isran as he rouses his forces. The time has come to march on the lair of these wretched abominations and wipe them out once and for all! Isran promises to meet you outside Castle Volkihar.

Twilight Over Castle Volkihar

OBJECTIVE: Confront Harkon with Auriel's Bow

Whenever you are ready, travel to Castle Volkihar.

If you're allied with the vampires, simply head inside the castle as you have countless times before, passing your brethren in the banqueting hall. Take the stairs to the left (northwest), activating the pull chain and opening the double doors to Volkihar Cathedral. Harkon is there, in Vampire Lord form, waiting for you.

If you're allied with the Dawnguard, when you arrive at the jetty and watchtower, a full complement of Dawnguard troops, including your friends and Armored Trolls, are readying their weapons under the command of Isran. Assault the vampires charging across the bridge, with their hated Death Hounds and gargoyles. Fight your way up to the main door, then into the keep. You may elect to lead the charge or provide supporting fire for the more melee-focused members of the Dawnguard. In any case, the combat is likely to be confusing and hectic, but it is worth spending the time to systematically slaughter every vampire you see across the feasting hall and any that retreat into the side chambers. When the Dawnguard have the upper hand, pass your friends in the banqueting hall and climb the stairs to the northwest, activating the pull chain to reach the double doors leading to Volkihar Cathedral. Harkon is there, in Vampire Lord form, waiting for you.

You can attack Harkon immediately, if you wish. Otherwise, you must listen to a barrage of offensive comments about your relationship with Serana. She stands her ground, estranging herself once and for all. Harkon now turns his attention to you, challenging your intentions. After further belittling, Harkon offers you a chance: a single opportunity to hand over Auriel's Bow to him. You can:

Refuse, beginning combat.

Or agree, giving over Auriel's Bow. He attacks you anyway, but you are now deprived of the power of Auriel's Bow.

Your confrontation with Harkon begins now!

OBJECTIVE: Slay Harkon

Harkon's Lament

Lord Harkon is a formidable opponent, regardless of how experienced you are. He's fast, evasive, powerful, and almost all of his attacks drain your Health and restore his own. Below are the best methods of defeating him.

Initial Preparations

Before returning to Castle Volkihar, make sure to do the following:

Stock up! Unless you plan on fighting Harkon as a Werewolf or Vampire Lord, you should bring with you a sizable number of Health, Magicka, and Stamina potions, as needed.

Choose weapons or spells that take advantage of Harkon's weaknesses. The Dawnguard's weapons, especially the Runic ones (from Dawnguard Faction Quest: Lost Relic) work well against him. Spells that do fire damage or that damage undead also work well against him. However, note that spells that normally turn or repel undead will not cause Harkon to flee.

Speak to Knight-Paladin Gelebor and have him make you some Sunhallowed Arrows before leaving the Forgotten Vale. These inflict extra damage on Harkon when they break his Shadow Shield.

Before the Battle

The following tactics work well just after entering Volkihar Cathedral:

Listen to the poignant scene between father and daughter. But you should also take advantage of Harkon's static position by striking him with your best shot. You'll increase your chances considerably by starting the fight with a Fire Storm or a Sneak attack at point-blank range before Harkon can retaliate.

This should be painfully obvious, but...don't hand over Auriel's Bow to Harkon. You may not live to regret it.

General Battle Tactics

As a Vampire Lord, Harkon has several powerful attacks and strategies:

He uses Drain Life to suck the health from you, increasing his health in the process (picture 1).

He uses Raise Dead to summon skeletons from the bone piles around the room, and he can raise them a second time to continue their assault (picture 2). Periodically, gargoyles will also break from their stone shrouds to attack. Deal with them first.

He tends to glide rapidly across the room, making him difficult to hit (picture 3).

He uses the power of bats to teleport short distances. This allows him to evade your attacks and prevents him from becoming pinned down. It also dispels any long-duration effects (like burning or slow) you may have inflicted on him. He typically employs this after absorbing too much punishment (usually in a short period of time) or after time passes.

The Elder Scrolls V

SKYRIM

QUESTS: DAWNGUARD MAIN QUEST

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Although you may not think it, Harkon doesn't have all that much health. However, he has several ways to regenerate and evade your attacks. Use his lack of health to your advantage by striking him with single, powerful attacks instead of with many less-effective swipes, as the latter just causes him to turn into bat form and flee.

Harkon prefers his "Magic" (rather than "Melee") Vampire Lord form, floating quickly around the tiered room. Don't waste valuable arrows or projectile spells when he's shifting about, as you're likely to miss. Save them instead for when Harkon comes to a stop. When this happens, however briefly, unload with as many strikes as you can muster.

Occasionally, Harkon shifts to his melee stance and attacks with his claws (picture 4). This is your best opportunity to attack, especially with your own melee weapons.

Has Harkon disappeared? Then he is attempting to regenerate his health in Mistform (although this doesn't occur as rapidly as it does when you're in Vampire Lord form and use this technique). Quickly dispatch any surviving minions to force him back into combat.

Serana is also a force to be reckoned with. And if Harkon or one of his skeleton or gargoyle minions are concentrating their attacks on her, allowing you some easier strikes, then so much the better.

Combating Harkon's Shadow Shield

When Harkon takes damage, he retreats to his blood shrine and casts Shadow Shield (picture 5). When this occurs, use Auriel's Bow and fire an arrow (of any kind) to immediately bring the shield down. Harkon draws energy from the shrine to replenish his health while the shield is up, so removing it is vital for gaining the upper hand and reducing Harkon's power and the length of the battle.

The one time when you might consider leaving Harkon behind his Shadow Shield is when the gargoyles are attacking, as they can be formidable to face on their own. You have two (or three at higher levels) gargoyles to face, so remove all but the last one, break the shield, and face the final gargoyle. Then turn your attention back to Harkon.

When firing Auriel's Bow at the Shadow Shield, employ Sunhallowed Arrows if you have any, as they inflict extra damage to Harkon.

Are you all out of arrows? Then rush the shrine and bash the Shadow Shield with Auriel's Bow; this also dissipates it. This isn't an elegant solution, but it's effective.

Did you give Auriel's Bow to Harkon? Then you deserve every extra attack inflicted upon you! Expect a lengthy combat, as you have no way to force Harkon from his Shadow Shield. The battle is not impossible, though: Harkon will use Shadow Shield only three times. After the third casting, you can defeat him.

Getting Hairy: Werewolf Form

Fighting Harkon as a werewolf is a challenge. Your speed and high-damage attacks work well against him, but his spells sap your health quickly, and you have few (or no) opportunities to feed. You also can't use Auriel's Bow to break his shield.

As much as possible, avoid Harkon while he's in Magic form to conserve your strength, or let Serana act as a distraction. Match him claw-for-claw in Melee form.

If you have the Savage Feeding perk, the gargoyles that emerge midway through the battle are your only feeding opportunity. Dig in quickly, before Harkon or Serana resurrect them.

Harkon's Mistake: Vampire Lord Form

As a Vampire Lord, you can match Harkon spell for spell and attack for attack. Your abilities may differ in some cases—he has Shadow Shield and a more versatile Bats power, while you have the benefits conferred by your perks and quest items (such as the Amulets of Night power from the Faction Quest). But without the use of Auriel's Bow, you're in for a long, drawn-out fight.

Depending on your aim, you may find it easier to match your Melee form against his Magic form (he's hard to hit with Drain Life while on the move), and your Magic form against his Melee (he's easy to hit while he's running right at you).

Summoned gargoyles and resurrected minions are effective decoys, but remember that Harkon can drain their health as well. Use them judiciously, or they may end up just prolonging the battle.

The epic struggle continues until Lord Harkon's health is sapped, his crushing verbal abuse snuffed out, and his vampire form tears itself apart. Shrieking his final words to his daughter, his bones collapse in a pool of ash and gore at the foot of his blood shrine. Sift through his remains to secure Harkon's Sword—and Auriel's Bow if you were foolish enough to give to him.

► Harkon's Sword

Quest Conclusion

Once you've picked through the pool of blood and offal, Garan Marethi walks forth into the cathedral, offering his sympathies to Serana. Then he turns your way, congratulating you on being the superior vampire.

Once you've sorted through the heap of bones and blood, Isran walks into the cathedral and finally realizes his debt to Serana. Then he turns to you, vowing that the prophecy of Auriel's Bow will never come to pass.

Postquest Activities

You may now continue adventuring, with or without Serana (who stays at the castle). As the new master of the vampires, you may continue their Faction Quests. And now, when adventuring during daylight hours, your Bloodcursed Arrows can turn the lands into perpetual darkness (as shown, although you can use Sunhallowed Arrows too). May your reign of terror last for the ages!

You may now continue adventuring, with or without Serana (who stays at Fort Dawnguard). As the hero of the Dawnguard, you may continue their Faction Quests. And now, when adventuring during daylight hours, your Sunhallowed Arrows can call down a powerful volley of sunfire, turning enemies into immolated husks (as shown, although you can use Bloodcursed Arrows as well)! May tales of your valor be told through the lands!

POSTQUEST ACTIVITIES

NOTE Once you've completed Dawnguard Quest: Kindred Judgment, you can access the following additional activities based on your faction. *Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest Menu list, although their objectives may.

MINOR SPOILERS

ELDER SCROLLS FOR SALE*

NOTE This activity is available to both factions.

After completing the final Dawnguard Main Quest, return to the fortification of your alliance and speak to Dexion Evicus, the Moth Priest. You can bring the conversation around to the topic of the Elder Scrolls that you're carrying. In time, he would like to see them returned to the Imperial Library. You can:

Give him the Blood and Sun Scrolls.

Or request 6,000 gold for them, which he's willing to pay.

REPAIRING THE CASTLE*

NOTE This activity is available only to the vampire faction.

Now that you lead the vampires in Castle Volkihar, you can go about refurbishing this grand dwelling. Aside from the bedroom that you gain (Lord Harkon won't be needing it anymore), you can also speak with Garan Marethi and request that he clear the rubble from the passage that connects the keep to the courtyard (where the moonial is located). This allows for faster travel through the castle, although the fastest way to reach the Soul Cairn is still to Fast-Travel to the balcony, then step into Valerica's Laboratory from there.

SERANA'S CURE*

NOTE This unmarked quest (there are no objectives) is available only after completing Dawnguard Main Quest: Kindred Judgment, and only if you are allied with the Dawnguard.

It takes at least five days for Serana to trek to Morthal, find Falion, receive the cure, and return to Fort Dawnguard. Occupy yourself with other adventuring during this time. If you check in on Serana by visiting Falion's House in Morthal, she will be there (as shown), but she still doesn't want you to intrude into this private matter.

Return to Fort Dawnguard and speak with Serana. You don't actually need to be in the fort to begin the following conversation, but the location is ideal for meeting up with her again. After exhausting any more urgent topics of conversation, you can suggest Serana seek a cure for her vampirism. When she says no, answer with any reasoning you wish. Then (to reaffirm your choice, as this can't be undone), tell her you'll support her decision to cure herself. She reluctantly agrees and says she knows of a priest named Falion who can help. She doesn't want you to accompany her; this is one task she wants to be left alone for. And with that, Serana leaves your company.

Eventually, Serana arrives back at the fort a changed woman; her eyes reveal how much she's changed (see pictures). She tells you it's like the world is alive again, though she seems to miss her old powers. You might, too, as she no longer has any of her vampiric abilities or resistances (or their associated weaknesses), though she remains a formidable wizard.

VALERICA'S RETURN*

NOTE This activity is available to both factions.

Once you've defeated Lord Harkon, Valerica no longer needs to remain in exile in the Soul Cairn. Backtrack to the Volkihar Balcony, open the door into her Laboratory, enter the Soul Cairn, and trek back to her location in the Boneyard.

You can now convince her to return to Castle Volkihar (to live with you and Serana as vampires or to start a more peaceful sect within the castle). She will make her way back on her own; you need not chaperone her.

Visit her the next time your adventure brings you to Castle Volkihar, and you will find that she has moved back into her lab and is now tending a garden in the moonial courtyard. Help yourself to any of the ingredient plants in the garden or to the potions in her chambers.

DAWNGUARD FACTION QUESTS

The following nine Faction Quests become available after you complete Dawnguard Main Quest: A New Order. They can be completed during (or after) the Dawnguard Main Quest and typically offer you a task that results in strengthening the Dawnguard. Simply approach any resident of Fort Dawnguard and ask, "What can I do to help?"

NOTE Most of these quests are given out at random.

These quests are available only to adventurers who have sided with the Dawnguard against the vampires. If you've thrown your lot in with Lord Harkon, expect open hostility and a sealed Fort Dawnguard!

CAUTION

TIP Remember you can utilize the talents of Serana (or any other Follower) and the Dawnguard's Armored Trolls to help you with these tasks. For more information on Armored Trolls, consult page 193.

ANCIENT TECHNOLOGY

Quest Giver: Sorine Jurard

Sorine is making good on her offer to improve Isran's crossbows, but she requires further inspiration and knowledge for this to happen—knowledge she believes the long-dead dwarves may have possessed. She wants you to find a particular Dwemer Schematic hidden somewhere in Skyrim.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Dwemer Schematic from [Dwarven Dungeon or Bandit Lair]

◆ TARGET: Dwemer Schematic, in a [random Dwarven Dungeon or Bandit Lair]

Journey to the location Sorine has indicated, and battle through the Dwarven automatons, bandits, or other foes blocking your path. The schematic in question is always located inside a large treasure chest. Some are hidden deep inside a lengthy dungeon, while others are closer to the surface; it all depends on the topography of the dungeon you're sent to.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Sorine

◆ TARGET: Sorine Jurard, Fort Dawnguard, the Rift

Quest Conclusion

With the schematic in hand, return to Sorine, and she eagerly examines your find. Aside from a random weapon or item reward, Sorine also teaches you how to make the item described in the schematic at Gunmar's Forge. Once the quest concludes, you're also able to purchase it from Sorine.

NOTE Crafting Crossbows and Bolts: It is important to remember that if you want to craft your own crossbows and bolts, you'll need to learn the Steel Smithing and (eventually) Dwarven Smithing perks. For a complete list of raw Smithing materials needed to craft each item, consult page 81. If you're interested in fully enhancing a crossbow, aim to purchase (or craft) an Enhanced Dwarven Crossbow (which should be further tempered to Legendary quality) with a variety of Dwarven Bolts, depending on the enemies you're facing. Finally, remember that most crossbows and bolts can be made only at Gunmar's Forge inside the fort itself.

► [Crossbow Improvement]

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with another resident of Fort Dawnguard and take on a new Faction Quest. This quest can be completed a total of six times. Each time you accept it from Sorine, she will send you in search of a new schematic that unlocks a new crossbow or crossbow bolt technology, in the order listed below.

✓	SCHEMATIC	ITEM CREATED*	COMBAT ENHANCEMENT
<input type="checkbox"/>	#1 Enhanced Crossbow Schematic	Enhanced Crossbow	Attacks with this crossbow ignore 50% of armor.
<input type="checkbox"/>	#2 Exploding Fire Bolt Schematic	Exploding Steel Bolt of Fire	Explodes for 10 points of fire damage.
<input type="checkbox"/>	#3 Exploding Ice Bolt Schematic	Exploding Steel Bolt of Ice	Explodes for 10 points of frost damage to Health and Stamina.
<input type="checkbox"/>	#4 Exploding Shock Bolt Schematic	Exploding Steel Bolt of Shock	Explodes for 10 points of shock damage to Health and half that to Magicka.
<input type="checkbox"/>	#5 Dwarven Crossbow Schematic	Dwarven Crossbow	Does more damage (and weighs slightly more) than a standard crossbow. Dwarven Bolts of Fire, Ice, and Shock can now be bought, crafted, and used (which cause 15 points of damage instead of 10).
<input type="checkbox"/>	#6 Enhanced Dwarven Crossbow Schematic	Enhanced Dwarven Crossbow	Attacks with this crossbow ignore 50% of armor.

NOTE * These items can now be purchased from Sorine or crafted at Gunmar's Forge.

Quest Giver: Sorine Jurard. This quest occurs only once.

Finding Arkay's Voice

Once you learn that the Moth Priest was abducted by vampires during Dawnguard Main Quest: Prophet, Sorine Jurard may, during the course of your regular conversations, ask if you have a moment. She's been talking with Gunmar and is concerned about the severity of the vampire threat. She believes the Dawnguard will need Florentius, a Priest of Arkay, to help. Sorine thinks Isran may not want his help but wants you to find out anyway.

OBJECTIVE: Speak with Isran

Find Isran and inform him that you "need to find someone named Florentius." Isran, as expected, is deeply concerned about the man and certainly doesn't trust him. Mention that Sorine thought he'd be able to help, and Isran swallows his feelings and gives you approval to find Florentius, who was last seen aiding the Vigilants of Stendarr at Ruunvald.

OBJECTIVE: Find Florentius

TARGET: Ruunvald Excavation, the Rift

Travel to Ruunvald Excavation in the snowy foothills of the Velothi Mountains, east of Shor's Watchtower and south of Tolvald's Cave. You need to trek south from the map marker to reach a gap in the mountainside that allows access up, then go north past the snow line to the excavation entrance. Close by is a tent with an interesting journal to read. It recounts the actions of Volk, a Vigilant guard who mentions that the excavation team was taking longer and longer to return to the surface, then disappeared entirely. Curious...

Volk's Journal

A Charmed Life

Enter the Ruunvald Excavation and peer into the maw below. You should spot a Vigilant with a strange red haze about his head. This Vigilant, and all others in this part of Ruunvald, have been charmed and should be seen as hostile enemies. There's nothing you can do to save them, except to send them to Stendarr, courtesy of a quick death. Battle your way down the mine shaft and into a second mine cavern, engaging more Charmed Vigilants and their Husky hounds. Eventually, you reach a chamber with a rickety bridge. Here you'll find further adversaries, including Volk (pictured), who is possessed like the rest of them. Deal with all who oppose you before searching for a tunnel on the lowest level leading south to Ruunvald Temple.

After a short passage, you enter the main temple room. This is where your primary adversaries, including a warlock named Minorne and the ill-fated expedition leader Moric Sidrey, have imprisoned Florentius close to the raised altar. Dispatch everyone who isn't called Florentius. Search the corpse of Minorne to discover the Ruunvald Key, which is handy to open the otherwise-inaccessible gate to the cage where Florentius is located.

Ruunvald Key

Quest Conclusion

Once freed, Florentius Baenius asks what he (and Arkay, as he professes to have direct communication with the god of the cycle of birth and death) can do to help you. Once you mention Isran, Florentius thinks you're a joke, but once "Arkay" has instructed him that it's a good idea, he begrudgingly agrees to head off to Fort Dawnguard. You don't need to accompany him; he appears the next time you arrive at that destination. The quest now concludes.

Postquest Activities

Now head south, using the key to open the iron door. Enter a room with a treasure chest and an alcove lever in the southeast area near the bed; the lever raises a stone staircase leading to an exit into Skyrim.

When Florentius moves in to Fort Dawnguard, a new alchemy lab appears in the forge area. Florentius sells a variety of items (mainly potions) to help you and sometimes has a Faction Quest of his own: Lost Relic. You may now speak with another resident of Fort Dawnguard and take on a new Faction Quest.

Vendor (Apothecary): Florentius Baenius

CLEANSING LIGHT

Quest Giver: Gunmar. This quest can occur more than once.

Gunmar has discovered the whereabouts of a vampire lair. He wants you to take out the head vampire inside the lair, which is usually sufficient to scatter its minions, although he'd prefer it if you destroy all of them. However, you aren't penalized if you fail to completely remove the vampiric presence.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the Master Vampire at [a Vampire Lair]

◆ TARGET: Master Vampire, [random Vampire Lair]

Journey to the Vampire Lair and begin to systematically cull all of its inhabitants. The tactics you use are completely up to you. Find and face down the Master Vampire, slaughtering all those with fangs before this quest is complete.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Gunmar

Quest Conclusion

With the hissing blood of the vanquished vampires still staining your weapon, return to Fort Dawnguard and seek out Gunmar. He has a small reward for your courage.

➤ Leveled Weapon or Item

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with another resident of Fort Dawnguard and take on a new Faction Quest.

HIDE AND SEEK

Quest Giver: Gunmar. This quest can occur more than once.

Gunmar has located the whereabouts of a vampire masquerading as a common citizen. This "citizen" is nothing but a parasite, ready to clamp down on the necks of any nearby innocent. Stop this deviancy right away! Gunmar requests a discreet kill; you can ask him further questions if you wish.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Discreetly kill [vampire masquerading as a traveling bard, pilgrim, or merchant]

◆ TARGET: The vampire, in [a settlement]

Sometimes, you can speak with your target and persuade or intimidate them into following you. Lead them somewhere out of the way, make sure you're alone, and then quickly take them out in a single strike.

Alternately, you can leave whatever establishment (usually a tavern) you may have found the vampire in and wait for your quarry to wander the settlement's streets. Survey the area to make sure you're alone, or cast magic so you're not seen. Then defeat the vampire without being seen (achieve this easily by crouching so you're hidden and striking the vampire with a ranged shot).

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Gunmar

Quest Conclusion

Once the pretend citizen is a very real corpse, journey back to Fort Dawnguard and meet up with Gunmar. He's happy there's one less monster to worry about, and you're rewarded forthwith.

➤ Leveled Weapon or Item

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with another resident of Fort Dawnguard and take on a new Faction Quest.

When you reach the settlement, seek out the vampire in citizen's clothing. You're able to ask him or her a few questions, which confirms your suspicions (as do those bloodred eyes). However, killing the beast in cold blood won't complete the quest and is seen as a crime. Instead, a spot of stealth is in order.

Quest Giver: Gunmar. This quest can occur more than once.

Gunmar has learned of a possible vampire, and while he doesn't know its exact whereabouts, he has information on someone who does. You're to pay a visit to the beast's last known contact and "urge" them to reveal the vampire's location.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find evidence of the vampire's whereabouts

◆ TARGET: [Vampire's friend], at a [random settlement]

Visit the person indicated in your quest log (or the place where they usually reside), and attempt one of the following:

Get straight to the point; tell them you're looking for a vampire. The friend doesn't know what you're talking about. Now you can:

◆ (Persuade) Ask them to tell you what you need to know.

◆ (Bribe) Offer some coin to jog their memory.

◆ (Intimidate) Threaten to get rough.

◆ (Brawl) Or bring out your fists and actually get rough.

One of these options is likely to work. Otherwise, you can:

◆ Pickpocket the friend for the information you need, or ◆ Search their residence for proof, which is sometimes found in one of their chests.

➤ Letter from the Vampire

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the Master Vampire at [a random bandit or warlock lair]

Locate the lair mentioned in the vampire's letter, and journey there ready to defeat this foul presence, along with any bandits or warlocks aligned with the monster. Once you kill the Master Vampire, your quest updates.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Gunmar

Quest Conclusion

After the bloody battle, head back to Fort Dawnguard for a meeting with Gunmar. For those who cherish memories of loved ones, their compassion often conceals the beast. But your compassion compels you to destroy it. Good work!

➤ Leveled Weapon or Item

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with another resident of Fort Dawnguard and take on a new Faction Quest.

A JARL'S JUSTICE

Quest Giver: Isran. This quest can occur more than once.

Isran is concerned about a visiting "advisor" in the Jarl's court. He orders you to destroy this creature before it can infiltrate the Jarl's inner circle and complete whatever foul business it was contemplating. However, Isran warns you that the Jarl's guards are unaware of the threat and will treat violence against the advisor as a crime. You need to convince the Jarl that the threat is real. Or you can simply try not to get caught!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Warn [a Jarl] about the vampire threat

◆ TARGET: [a random Jarl], in [one of the Hold Capitals]

Visit the Jarl in question, and inform him that a vampire has infiltrated his court. The Jarl believes this to be a somewhat bold claim and requires some proof before he can possibly believe it. The only proof available is contained on the Advisor himself. Seek out this suspicious character and pickpocket him. On his person are Orders from his vampire masters.

➤ Orders

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring evidence to [the Jarl]

At this point, continue not to attract attention, return to the Jarl, and present the evidence via a new conversation topic. The Jarl now entrusts you to take care of this unwanted visitor (as shown in the picture). The Jarl's guards won't interfere with you now that you're carrying out the Jarl's justice.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Destroy the vampire masquerading as a visiting advisor

Now simply return to the visiting advisor and kill him.

This quest can also be completed by finding the visiting advisor and slaying him without proof. However, this murder, if detected, is considered a major crime, and you'll suffer the consequences for your actions. However, this quest still completes.

CAUTION

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Isran

Quest Conclusion

With the Jarl's court back in order, return to Fort Dawnguard and locate Isran. He has a small reward for your dedication.

► Leveled Weapon or Item

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with another resident of Fort Dawnguard and take on a new Faction Quest.

LOST RELIC

Quest Giver: Florentius Baenius. This quest can occur up to three times.

Once you've freed Florentius during Dawnguard Faction Quest: Bolstering the Ranks, he requests that you help him (and Arkay) secure a fabled relic from the Dawnguard's past. Arkay has told Florentius where the relic is, but he requires you to retrieve it.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the [Dawnguard Relic] from [a bandit, Falmer, Forsworn, vampire, or warlock dungeon]

◆ TARGET: [Dawnguard Relic], in [a random dungeon]

Enter the dungeon you're prompted to trek to, and battle or sneak your way to a large treasure chest somewhere within. Inside is the relic you seek. Take it!

► [Dawnguard Relic]

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Florentius Baenius

Quest Conclusion

Dawnguard Rune Axe

Dawnguard Rune Hammer

Dawnguard Rune Shield

Head back to Fort Dawnguard, and present the relic to Florentius. He (and Arkay) thank you for your service, and in addition to a small item reward, Florentius gifts you the relic itself. Use it wisely!

► Leveled Weapon or Item ► Dawnguard Relic

The following three relics are (randomly) available during this quest. For further information, consult pages 139 and 144.

✓	RELIC NAME	PROPERTIES
<input type="checkbox"/>	Dawnguard Rune Axe	For every 10 undead you kill with this axe, the axe will do +10 Sun Damage to undead (up to +100).
<input type="checkbox"/>	Dawnguard Rune Hammer	Bashing places a rune on a nearby surface; the rune explodes for 50 points of fire damage when enemies come near.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Dawnguard Rune Shield	+10 Bash damage against vampires and sustained blocking creates a minor Sun Shield that does 10 points of damage while draining the wielder's Stamina.

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with another resident of Fort Dawnguard and take on a new Faction Quest.

PREEMPTIVE STRIKE

Quest Giver: Gunmar. This quest can occur more than once.

Gunmar has found another hated beast hiding from the light of day. It seems a vampire has infiltrated a group of bandits (or warlocks) and may be about to turn all the inhabitants into bloodsucking fiends. You are to dispatch the vampire and any other hostiles you see fit.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the Master Vampire at [a bandit or warlock lair]

◆ TARGET: Master Vampire, [random bandit or warlock lair]

Commence your task by heading to the lair in question, and slay anyone who stands in your way. You need not defeat any of the usual inhabitants (although you can—they're always hostile toward you). However, you must find and defeat the Master Vampire, snuffing him from this realm, before this quest can conclude.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Gunmar

Quest Conclusion

Once the Master Vampire has tasted your vengeance, trek back to Fort Dawnguard and find Gunmar. He offers a trinket or weapon for your services.

► Leveled Weapon or Item

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with another resident of Fort Dawnguard and take on a new Faction Quest.

Quest Giver: Florentius Baenius. This quest can occur more than once.

Florentius has some grave news. While you were adventuring, a group of bloodsuckers made off with your associate! This vicious night stalker seeks to gain leverage over the righteous, but there is hope: Your brethren is still alive. A rescue attempt must be undertaken at your earliest convenience.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Rescue [your spouse or friend] from [a bandit or warlock lair]

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the Master Vampire

◆ TARGET: [Random bandit or warlock lair]

NOTE The kidnapping is based on your previous friendship with certain denizens of Skyrim. The following citizens may be kidnapped:

Any nonessential person (so, not a Jarl) you've completed a task, quest, or favor for (in this case, Faendal of Riverwood).

Anyone who has previously been a Follower of yours.

Anyone you are currently married to.

You have a twofold task to accomplish: locate the loathsome lair, search out the Master Vampire within, and vanquish the beast. Once done, locate the victim and talk to them. This releases their bonds, and they are happy to return to their previous location without any further chaperoning.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Florentius Baenius

Quest Conclusion

Florentius is awaiting your safe return. Naturally, Arkay has already told him of your triumph, and he offers you the following as a reward for ridding the lands of another vampire:

➤ Leveled Weapon or Item

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with another resident of Fort Dawnguard and take on a new Faction Quest.

VAMPIRE FACTION QUESTS

The following ten Faction Quests become available after you complete Dawnguard Main Quest: The Bloodstone Chalice.

These can be completed during (or after) the Dawnguard Main Quest and typically offer you a task that results in strengthening the vampires of Castle Volkihar. You can have only one of these quests active at a time. Simply approach any resident of the castle and ask, "What can I do to help?"

NOTE Most of these quests are given out at random. The one exception is Vampire Faction Quest: Destroying the Dawnguard, which becomes randomly available only after you complete Dawnguard Main Quest: Kindred Judgment. Note the additional stipulations for Amulets of Night Power and The Gift (detailed below).

These quests are available only to adventurers who have sided with the vampires against the Dawnguard. If you've joined Isran and fight against the Dawnguard, expect open hostility and a sealed Castle Volkihar.

CAUTION

TIP Remember you can utilize the talents of Serana (or any other Follower) and bring a Death Hound to help you in these tasks.

For more information on Death Hounds, consult page 176. Finally, there's a small chance you may receive a Blood Potion as a reward at the end of any of these quests.

AMULETS OF NIGHT POWER

Quest Giver: Feran Sadri. This quest occurs only once. You must have the Vampire Lord perk "Summon Gargoyle" to receive this quest.

Once you've chosen the Vampire Lord perk "Summon Gargoyle" from the Perk constellation, visit Feran Sadri, who has located the last known resting place of a set of ancient Amulets of Night Power. He thinks they should be among vampires, not lying about unguarded for mortals to find. You can ask Feran what the amulets do, where they came from, and if you can keep them once you find them. The amulets are yours...if you can acquire them!

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Amulet of the Gargoyle from [a random dungeon].
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Amulet of Bats from [a random dungeon].
- ◆ TARGET: Amulet of the Gargoyle, in a [random dungeon]
- ◆ TARGET: Amulet of Bats, in a [random dungeon]

Journey to the location Feran Sadri has indicated, and battle through the foes blocking your path. The amulet you're searching for is sometimes located inside a treasure chest or is being carried by a particularly strong enemy (like a giant) or on the body of a slain corpse. Sometimes an amulet is hidden deep inside a lengthy dungeon, and sometimes it is closer to the surface. Be sure to visit both dungeons (in either order), and claim both amulets.

Amulet of the Gargoyle

Amulet of Bats

✓	AMULET NAME	PROPERTIES
<input type="checkbox"/>	Amulet of the Gargoyle	While wearing this amulet, your Summon Gargoyle spell summons an additional gargoyle for 30 seconds. Vampire Lord form only.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Amulet of Bats	While wearing this amulet, Bats will drain life from any nearby enemies. Vampire Lord form only.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Feran Sadri

Quest Conclusion

With both amulets stored in your inventory, head back to Castle Volkihar, and speak with Feran Sadri. He trusts you'll put those amulets to good use. He also rewards you.

- Leveled Item
- Blood Potion (small chance)

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with another resident of Castle Volkihar and take on a new Faction Quest.

ANCIENT POWER

Quest Giver: Feran Sadri. This quest can occur more than once.

Feran Sadri has been performing a little research on the Bloodstone Chalice you filled during Dawnguard Main Quest: The Bloodstone Chalice. He believes its salutary effects can be prolonged if it is infused with potent vampiric power. To this end, he's located the petrified remains of an elder vampire. You are to bring these remains to him.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Ancient Vampire [body part] from [a random dungeon].
- ◆ TARGET: Ancient Vampire [body part], in a [random dungeon]

Locate the place Feran Sadri has mentioned, and explore it thoroughly until you reach the body part you're searching for. It is usually inside a treasure chest, deep in the dungeon. Claim these gruesome (and desiccated) remains.

- Ancient Vampire [body part]

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Feran Sadri

Quest Conclusion

When you return to Castle Volkihar, Feran Sadri tells you he'll make the necessary preparations for the infusion into the Chalice. You're then rewarded.

- Leveled Weapon or Item
- Blood Potion (small chance)

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with another resident of Castle Volkihar and take on a new Faction Quest. In addition, you can return to the Bloodstone Chalice and drink from it. When you complete this Faction Quest, you receive the Blood of the Ancients ability (which causes your Vampiric Drain to absorb Magicka and Stamina), and the duration of this ability grows each time you complete this quest. So try to find as many body parts as Feran Sadri allows you to!

Quest Giver: Fura Bloodmouth or Garan Marethi. This quest can occur more than once.

Fura (or Garan) has discovered a cluster of feral vampires running wild and upsetting the mortals. You are to cull these brutish beasts before the problem gets out of hand. You must take out the head vampire inside the lair, but any other vampires lurking there are also optional kills. However, you aren't penalized if you fail to completely remove the vampiric presence.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the Master Vampire at [a Vampire Lair]

◆ TARGET: Master Vampire, [random Vampire Lair]

Journey to the vampire lair and begin systematically culling all of its inhabitants. The combat style you use is completely up to you. Find and face down the Master Vampire, slaughtering all that are feral and fanged of tooth, before this quest is complete.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Fura Bloodmouth (or Garan Marethi)

Quest Conclusion

Stride back to Castle Volkihar and regale your task master with tales of your victory. You may have pitied those thin-bloods, but after disposing of a few, you realize they aren't worth the worry. Have a present:

- Leveled Weapon or Item
- Blood Potion (small chance)

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with another resident of Castle Volkihar and take on a new Faction Quest.

DECEIVING THE HERD

Quest Giver: Feran Sadri. This quest can occur more than once.

Feran Sadri has learned that the Dawnguard have increased their operations and have been aggressively recruiting. You are to put a damper on their efforts and give these troublemakers something to worry about. You are to murder someone and make a public display of it. The execution must happen in the streets, for all to see. The higher the profile of the victim, the better. To further change the public's opinion of the Dawnguard, you can optionally don their garb before committing the murder to make it seem as if you're a member of their sect, sowing confusion among the herd. Feran hands over Dawnguard armor and an Incriminating Note to plant on the victim you choose. You may ask Feran what he means by a "high-profile" target. Try the following:

- A member of the Hold's ruling or exiled government, such as the Housecarl or Court Wizard
- A priest, bard, or innkeeper
- Any merchant (blacksmith, etc.)

- Dawnguard Heavy Armor
- Dawnguard Full Helmet
- Dawnguard Boots
- Incriminating Letter
- Dawnguard Gauntlet

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill someone out in the streets of [a city]

◆ [OPTIONAL] OBJECTIVE: Make it a public kill while wearing Dawnguard armor

◆ [OPTIONAL] OBJECTIVE: Choose a high-profile victim

◆ OBJECTIVE: Plant letter on [victim]

◆ TARGET: Any citizen [a high-profile citizen is recommended], in [a city]

Don your Dawnguard Armor, Boots, Gauntlet, and Helmet. Then journey to the city and walk up to a high-profile target. If in doubt, choose the blacksmith or an innkeeper or merchant you don't normally patronize or receive training from. Then slaughter them. This instantly increases your crime, so attempt to plant the Incriminating Letter as soon after the murder as possible (before the objective updates, even). Then flee, fight, or pay your fine.

It is wise to leave Serana behind when completing this task, as she has the annoying knack of resurrecting the person you killed, making it difficult to immediately plant the evidence and retreat.

CAUTION

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Feran Sadri

Quest Conclusion

Once you've slain the high-profile citizen and placed a letter professing to be from the Dawnguard on the corpse, return to Castle Volkihar and tell Feran Sadri of your triumph. This should direct the people's anger toward the Dawnguard for a time. Now receive your reward.

- Leveled Weapon or Item
- Blood Potion (small chance)

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with another resident of Castle Volkihar and take on a new Faction Quest.

Quest Giver: Fura Bloodmouth or Garan Marethi. This quest occurs only once. It is randomly available once you complete Dawnguard Main Quest: Kindred Judgment.

Fura Bloodmouth (or Garan) believes that now that you possess Auriel's Bow, the Dawnguard may make a concerted effort to claim it. She recommends striking first, before they can muster a larger force. You are to kill their leaders.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the Dawnguard leaders

◆ TARGET: See below, in Fort Dawnguard

Trek to the entrance to Dayspring Canyon, or Fast-Travel directly to Fort Dawnguard. At the fort's exterior entrance, expect to be waylaid slightly by Vori, who is openly hostile but is not a critical kill. Neither are the refugees in the small camp below the fortress (although they make good eating!). Enter the fortress, and begin your massacre. The following foes must be defeated:

Agmaer (armed with a Crossbow and Dawnguard Axe)

Celann (armed with a Crossbow and Dawnguard Axe)

Durak (armed with a Crossbow)

Florentius Baenius (armed with fire magic)

Gunmar (armed with a Crossbow and Dawnguard Axe)

Isran (armed with Dawnguard Hammer)

Sorine Jurard (armed with a Crossbow)

NOTE Sceolang and Bran (two Dawnguard huskies) are also part of the attack force but are not vital to completing this quest.

Once you're inside the fort and begin your killing, you may be overwhelmed by enemies almost immediately. The Dawnguard leaders are tough and attack with both ranged and crushingly brutal melee weapons, and they certainly aren't pleased to see you. In order to survive, you may wish to consider the following:

Continuously move throughout the fort:

If you explored the fort thoroughly during Dawnguard Main Quest: Dawnguard, you know where the dead ends are and can therefore avoid becoming trapped. Staying in the main entrance hall is just asking to be slaughtered with attacks coming from multiple directions.

Vary your attack style: Remember you have potent powers at your disposal. You can (for example) utilize stealth and quickly attempt sneak attacks on two or three leaders before anyone notices (this includes using the spiral stairs to flee from enemies before sneaking back for a silent war of attrition when they fail to find you). Attack during the night, and more foes are likely to be sleeping in the dormitory to the north. Or attack during the day, then quickly flee outside, where you can fire Sunhallowed Arrows at the sun, raining death down on your enemies from above.

Bring reinforcements: If most of your foes are focused on defeating Serana, and a Death Hound is dealing with the Dawnguard Huskies, you have fewer enemies to repel. Better yet, make your own reinforcements by resurrecting the fallen Dawnguard leaders as zombies, then using them to take down their former allies.

The Vampire Lord form is another powerful asset at your disposal. If you're lucky, and you've collected the Amulets of Night Power and Rings of Blood Magic prior to this quest being given (which has a random chance of occurring), and you've diligently increased your perks (e.g., so you can summon two gargoyles while wearing one of the Amulets), you can theoretically make your raiding party up to seven members strong (you, a foe you've raised from the dead, Serana and a foe she's raised from the dead, a Death Hound, and two gargoyles)!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Fura Bloodmouth (or Garan Marethi)

Quest Conclusion

Once every Dawnguard leader lies dead, gather what spoils you wish, then return to Castle Volkihar. Fura (or Garan) reckons your victory should slow the Dawnguard down. And it does: The Dawnguard Attack Wilderness Encounter will no longer occur. You also receive your reward:

➤ Leveled Weapon or Item

➤ Blood Potion (small chance)

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with another resident of Castle Volkihar and take on a new Faction Quest.

THE GIFT

Quest Giver: Vingalmo. This quest can occur more than once. You must be married (and wait a few days) before you can receive this quest.

Vingalmo has heard of your wedding at the Temple of Mara in Riften (completing of Side Quest: The Bonds of Matrimony) and wonders whether your spouse might benefit from Harkon's Gift. You are to get your spouse to trust you, calming their nerves via Vampire's Seduction, and then embrace them.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Turn [your spouse] into a vampire

◆ TARGET: [Your spouse], in [your home]

Travel to where your spouse is located. You need not talk to them; simply cast Vampire's Seduction, and when they're bathed in the green light of your magic, speak to them and elect to feed. After a sharp embrace, your betrothed joins you in the immortal life!

Biting someone is a crime, so be prepared to pay a fine, fight, or flee if you do this with others watching.

CAUTION

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Vingalmo

Quest Conclusion

When your spouse has received their gift, head back to Castle Volkihar, and tell Vingalmo of your other family's addition. You may wish to visit your spouse periodically to see how their progression is going. For the moment, claim your other reward.

➤ Leveled Weapon or Item

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with another resident of Castle Volkihar and take on a new Faction Quest.

THE HUNT

Quest Giver: Garan Marethi (and sometimes Fura Bloodmouth). This quest can occur more than once.

Garan Marethi (or Fura Bloodmouth) has learned the whereabouts of a troublesome Dawnguard member, usually traveling in the guise of a bard, pilgrim, or merchant. You're ordered to track him down and dispose of him. However, discretion is important; the vampires don't want to "stir the nest, just skin a rat." If you ask more specifically for information, Garan (or Fura) spells it out so a troll could understand: Don't get caught.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill [Dawnguard member]
◆ [OPTIONAL] OBJECTIVE: Make it a discreet kill
◆ TARGET: [Dawnguard member], in [a settlement]

When you reach the settlement, seek out the Dawnguard in citizen's clothing. You're able to ask him or her a few questions, which confirms your suspicions (as does that shifty expression). However, killing the rat in cold blood won't complete the quest and is seen as a crime. Instead, a spot of stealth is in order.

Sometimes, you can speak with your target and persuade or intimidate them into following you. Lead them somewhere out of the way, make sure you're alone, and then quickly take them out in a single strike. This isn't possible every time.

Alternately, you can leave whatever establishment (usually a tavern) you may have found the Dawnguard in, and wait for him or her to wander the settlement's streets. Survey the area, or cast magic so you're not seen. And then defeat the Dawnguard troublemaker without being spotted (this is easily achieved by crouching so you're hidden and striking them with a ranged shot).

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Garan Marethi

Quest Conclusion

Once the pretend citizen is a very real corpse, head back to Garan Marethi (or Fura Bloodmouth) inside Castle Volkihar. He (or she) is impressed (although less so if you were seen), and you're given your reward.

➤ Leveled Weapon or Item
➤ Blood Potion (small chance)

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with any Castle Volkihar resident, asking whether they require help, and continue additional Faction Quests.

NEW ALLEGIANCES

Quest Giver: Vingalmo. This quest can occur more than once.

Vingalmo tells you he's found a new candidate, ripe for Harkon's Gift. Your task is to welcome this soul into the family. Currently, the candidate is a pathetic creature, but the gift will embolden them. You are to calm the nerves of this lost soul through Vampiric Seduction. When they are pliant, embrace and bite them on the neck. Ask further questions if you wish.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Turn [a citizen] into a vampire
◆ TARGET: [A citizen], in [a settlement]

Seek out your quarry, who lacks the enthusiasm to exist much longer in this world. Target them, and use Vampire's Seduction. When the candidate is bathed in the green light of your power, speak to them, electing to feed. After a quick bite, the newest vampire of Skyrim is birthed!

Biting someone is a crime, so be prepared to pay a fine, CAUTION fight, or flee. Or, wait until no one is about to complete your seduction.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Vingalmo

Quest Conclusion

After you bite the citizen, journey back to Castle Volkihar and inform Vingalmo your fangs worked properly. He appreciates your help and tells you that if you visit your prey again, they are likely to be more appreciative of their transformation. Wait for a day or so and visit them to see how confident they become, if you wish. There is a coffin in the new vampire's home that you can use, too, if you wish.

➤ Leveled Weapon or Item
➤ Blood Potion (small chance)

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with another resident of Castle Volkihar and take on a new Faction Quest.

Quest Giver: Fura Bloodmouth or Garan Marethi. This quest can occur more than once.

Fura Bloodmouth (or Garan Marethi) has found a feral-blooded vampire holed up with other foes. The vampire has infiltrated a lair and may be about to turn all the inhabitants into bloodsucking fiends. You are to dispatch the vampire and any other hostiles you see fit.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the Master Vampire at [a bandit or warlock lair]

◆ TARGET: Master Vampire, [random bandit or warlock lair]

Commence your task by heading to the lair in question, and slay anyone who stands in your way. You need not defeat any of the usual inhabitants (although they're always hostile toward you). However, you must find and defeat the Master Vampire, snuffing him from this realm, before this quest can conclude.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Fura Bloodmouth (or Garan Marethi)

Quest Conclusion

Once the Master Vampire has tasted your vengeance, traipse your way back to Castle Volkihar, and tell Fura Bloodmouth (or Garan Marethi) of your antics. Your task master always thinks it best to deal with a problem by ripping it at the root. You're then offered a valuable item for your time.

➤ Leveled Weapon or Item

➤ Blood Potion (small chance)

Postquest Activities

You may now speak with another resident of Castle Volkihar and take on a new Faction Quest.

RINGS OF BLOOD MAGIC

Quest Giver: Feran Sadri. This quest occurs only once.

After you've completed a few tasks for him successfully, Feran Sadri lets you in on a discovery he's made: He's found the whereabouts of a set of ancient Rings of Blood Magic. He isn't about to let some vagabond add them to a treasure pile. You can ask Feran what the rings do, where they came from, and if you can keep them once you find them. The rings are yours...if you can find them!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Ring of the Beast from [a random dungeon].

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Ring of the Erudite from [a random dungeon].

◆ TARGET: Ring of the Beast, in a [random dungeon]

◆ TARGET: Ring of the Erudite, in a [random dungeon]

Journey to the location Feran Sadri has indicated, and battle through the foes blocking your path. The ring in question is sometimes located inside a treasure chest, being carried by a particularly strong enemy (like a Hagraven), or on the body of a slain corpse. Sometimes a ring is hidden deep inside a lengthy dungeon, and sometimes it is closer to the surface. Be sure you visit both dungeons (in either order), and claim both rings.

Ring of the Beast

Ring of the Erudite

✓	RING NAME	PROPERTIES
<input type="checkbox"/>	Ring of the Beast	While wearing this ring, you will receive 100 extra Health and your claw attacks will do an additional 20 damage. Vampire Lord form only.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Ring of the Erudite	While wearing this ring, you will receive 100 extra Magicka and will regenerate Magicka faster. Vampire Lord form only.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Feran Sadri

Quest Conclusion

With both rings on your person, return to Castle Volkihar, and speak with Feran Sadri. He trusts you'll put those rings to good use. He also rewards you.

➤ Leveled Weapon or Item

You may now speak with another resident of Castle Volkihar and take on a new Faction Quest.

DAWNGUARD SIDE QUESTS

Optimal Quest Start

Most Side Quests are available from the moment you begin your adventure, although it is wise to learn if there are prerequisites to complete first. As Side Quests aren't usually linked to one another (with a couple of exceptions), you can start them at your leisure.

NOTE Cross-Referencing: Do you want to see maps and learn more about the traps, non-quest-related items, collectibles, crafting areas, and other important rooms of note in every location during these quests? Then cross-reference the location you travel to with the information on that location contained in this guide's Atlas.

Available Quests

There are a total of four Dawnguard Side Quests available. For information on the 25 main Side Quests, see page 426. Aside from the exceptions detailed below, most of these quests are independent of one another and can be completed whenever you encounter them.

DURNEHVIIR

PREREQUISITES: Begin

Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death

MINOR SPOILERS

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dawnguard Main Quest: Chasing Echoes, Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death

LOCATIONS: Soul Cairn (Boneyard), Tamriel

CHARACTERS: Durnehviir

◆ OBJECTIVES: Summon Durnehviir in Tamriel, Learn the first word of Durnehviir's Shout, Learn the second word of Durnehviir's Shout, Learn the third word of Durnehviir's Shout

Initial Preparations

Important Character

Durnehviir ("Curse Never Dying") is a dragon that has been trapped within the Soul Cairn for an untold amount of time. He was once a vibrantly colored beast soaring through the skies of Tamriel, but he was tricked by the Ideal Masters and trapped in the Soul Cairn. The Cairn has taken its toll on him, rendering his formally colorful scales mottled, gray, and flayed. Once known by a different name he's long forgotten, Durnehviir now roams the Soul Cairn attempting to find any way he can to once again breathe the clear air above Tamriel and leave this land of undeath behind.

Durnehviir is a dragon trapped inside the Soul Cairn, guarding the Boneyard where Valerica (Serana's mother) is trapped. While on Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death, you free Valerica from her barrier by killing the three Keepers. Next, you head into the Boneyard and face Durnehviir as part of the quest. Once you defeat him, retrieve the Elder Scroll (Blood) and depart the Boneyard. Head southwest out of the Boneyard, and travel to the devastated plains of the Soul Cairn. As you're about to leave, Durnehviir startles you. He has returned, but on this occasion he wishes you to stay your weapons and listen awhile.

Durnehviir reveals he isn't dead but is trapped between "laas and dinok" (life and death). If you're willing to hear him out, Durnehviir honors you with the name "Qahnaarin" or "Vanquisher." At this point, Side Quest:

Durnehviir begins, as the dragon asks a favor of you—to call him while you're in Tamriel and free him from this place. To this end, he gives you the three words of a Shout that will summon him.

- Word of Power: Curse, Summon Durnehviir
- Word of Power: Never, Summon Durnehviir
- Word of Power: Dying, Summon Durnehviir

◆ OBJECTIVE: Summon Durnehviir in Tamriel

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn the first word of Durnehviir's Shout

TIP The location of your meeting with Durnehviir is shown in the Atlas for the Soul Cairn (see page 986).

Now conclude your adventures in the Soul Cairn, return to Skyrim, and begin this quest in earnest.

▶ Torn from the Soul Cairn

You will need to spend three Dragon Souls to unlock all three words of Durnehviir's name. Then select this Shout and summon him back into the world of the living (Magic > Shouts > Summon Durnehviir).

Simply locate an area of land that is flat and wide enough to accommodate a dragon, such as the tundra plains west of Whiterun (as shown in the previous picture). You can call Durnehviir in any exterior location but not inside dungeons or spaces with high cliff walls (such as Eldergleam Sanctuary or the Ancestor's Glade).

TIP The crosshairs glow red if Durnehviir can't be summoned at a particular location. Move to a more suitable area and try again.

The tattered dragon breathes the free air of Vus once more and offers more than simple gratitude. He teaches you the first word of the Soul Tear Shout.

- Word of Power: Essence, Soul Tear

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn the second word of Durnehviir's Shout

Now wait until you recover, and summon Durnehviir for a second time. He awards you the second word of the Soul Tear Thu'um.

- Word of Power: Tear, Soul Tear

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn the third word of Durnehviir's Shout

Finally, summon the dragon one last time, after which he gathers enough strength to break free of the psychic control of the Ideal Masters. He also teaches you the final word:

- Word of Power: Zombie, Soul Tear

Your Thu'um cuts through flesh and shatters souls, commanding the will of the fallen.

▶ Postquest Activities

Try out the Soul Tear Shout: Expend up to three Dragon Souls to gain the most potent form of this Thu'um, which damages foes, sucks their souls from their forms (and transfers them into any Soul Gems you may be carrying), and—at its most devastating—raises the foe you just slew to act as a zombified thrall!

FACE TO FACE*

PREREQUISITES: None

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Riften, The Ragged Flagon

CHARACTERS: Galathil

◆ OBJECTIVES: Locate the face sculptor in Riften

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest Menu list, although objectives may.

▶ Under the Knife

On your journeys through Skyrim, you can speak to many a barkeep (such as Hulda in Whiterun) and learn much from their gossiping (Miscellaneous Objective: Innkeepers). Visit any innkeeper outside of Riften, and they may mention a rumor that someone living in Riften has the amazing ability to "change your face."

Or, if you're wandering through Riften, you may chance upon a city guard who mentions knowledge of the "face sculptor" visiting the Ragged Flagon. You receive a Miscellaneous Objective:

◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate the face sculptor in Riften

◆ TARGET: Galathil, the Ragged Flagon

Enter the Ratway, and make your way to the Thieves' Guild hideout and infamous tavern, the Ragged Flagon. The cowed Dark Elf sitting on the water deck is the infamous face sculptor Galathil, who utilizes a mixture of magic and deft cutting to rearrange your features for a (potentially) reasonable fee of 1,000 gold. Pay her the septims, and the following occurs:

You can completely change your facial appearance, just like you did prior to your escape from Helgen at the very start of your adventure.

You cannot change your race or sex. If you're a female Khajiit, you stay one.

If you've contracted vampirism, Galathil notices this straightaway. Her techniques work only on the living, so you'll have to seek a cure before she agrees to work on you. Consult Side Quest: Rising at Dawn (page 463) if you wish to be cured.

Postquest Activities

You can change your face as often as you wish, as long as you have the funds to pay Galathil.

IMPATIENCE OF A SAINT

PREREQUISITES: Complete Dawnguard Main Quest: Chasing Echoes

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dawnguard Main Quest: Chasing Echoes, Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death

LOCATIONS: Soul Cairn: Barrier Wall, Black Chapel, Black Church, Black Folly, Black Minster, Boneyard Citadel, Foundation Altar, Ideal Masters Crystal Folly, Morven Stroud: Soul Husk Merchant, Soul Pool Foundation

CHARACTERS: Jiub

ENEMIES: Boneman, Mistman, Wrathman

◆ OBJECTIVES: Find pages from Saint Jiub's Opus (10), Return to Jiub

The Rise and Fall of Saint Jiub

In order to find Jiub, see the walkthrough for Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death, as Jiub is located on a main thoroughfare between the towers guarded by Keepers 2 and 3. Find the Location: Gnarled Glade where a lone ghost is waiting by a burned-out campfire.

As you approach, the ghost is babbling about publishing books and becoming rich. Talk to him, and he speaks of his "opus." After further questioning, he informs you he's in quite the predicament, having lost all of the pages of his life's work. Carry on the chat, as he reveals more of his background, and you reveal that he's actually dead.

Crestfallen, Jiub realizes his writings can no longer be seen, until you both agree that you could carry his work out of the Soul Cairn for him. However, in order to write the second volume of his opus, he requires notes from his first volume. Those are the pages you are to gather for him.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find pages from Saint Jiub's Opus (10)

◆ TARGET: Single pages, across the Soul Cairn

⚡ TIP You can gather pages before or after meeting Jiub; it is entirely up to you.

What follows is a description of where each of the pages are located. They are listed from 1 to 10, although you won't find them in that order without significant backtracking across the Soul Cairn. In each case, three pictures are shown: They reveal the location from a distance, as you close in on the location, and finally at the location itself. Each location is also named: The names are references to the Atlas only (they don't appear on your local map). Check the compass direction on each picture so you know from which direction to approach. For precise map locations of each page and its number, check the map on page 986.

NOTE This quest is open to both factions. It becomes available only after you enter the Soul Cairn as part of Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death. Although every effort has been made to accurately pinpoint each location, it is well worth consulting the Soul Cairn Atlas and the Soul Cairn map (page 986), which has cartographical locations shown as well.

Important Character

Jiub (the Eradicator)

If you've ever adventured in Morrowind and woken up on a ship near a fellow prisoner, you'll already have met Jiub. After your initial introduction to the Dark Elf, you never see him again. However, during the time of Oblivion, he is referred to as Saint Jiub, a mysterious hero who tells you he somehow drove all the Cliff Racers from Vvardenfell. Jiub ended up in the Soul Cairn when his soul became trapped inside a Black Soul Gem.

Spending hundreds of years as a soul in the Soul Cairn has taken its toll on poor Jiub. He's now completely obsessed with authoring his books. Due to his current state (dead), he can never leave the Soul Cairn, nor can he be "slain." Once you make him aware of his predicament, Jiub hopes you'll spread the word of his face when you return to Tamriel.

Steps of the Barrier Wall:

These are located on the southern (initial side) of the barrier wall, just southeast of the stepped gap in the wall where the main path leads you from the start of the Soul Cairn. The page is next to the window atop the steps, to the right of a Soul. On the window's right side is The Book of Life and Service and a Soul Gem.

➤ Jiub's Opus

Ideal Masters Crystal Folly:

➤ Jiub's Opus

The Black Folly, Fallen Word Wall: The Black Folly, on the western side of the Boneyard wall, is just left (west) of where Valerica is imprisoned. Head through the entrance with the purple soul pools glowing on either side, and inspect the fallen Word Wall once you're inside. The page is next to a treasure chest, with a ruby and coin purse, half hidden in the low mist.

➤ Jiub's Opus

Boneyard Citadel:

Travel to the Boneyard entrance where Valerica is imprisoned. Head right (east), around the exterior Boneyard wall, to the fortification attached to the wall. Climb the steep steps, and locate the page beside a chest inside the highest of the small spires. It is guarded by a Mistman.

➤ Jiub's Opus

Soul Pool Foundation:

This is on the route between Keepers 2 and 3, just south of where Giub is located. The area consists of relatively flat scrubland, with low steps up to a stone foundation and circular soul pool. The page is on the ground, near an Elven Shield, a skull and some Soul Gems on the outside of the circular soul pool.

➤ Giub's Opus (Page 5)

Foundation Altar:

Southeast of the Boneyard Citadel and northeast of Arvak's Skull is a stepped area leading to an open altar, close to the perimeter barrier (to the east) and just east of the teleport to Keeper 3. Beware of Bonemen guarding this altar, which has Spell Tome: Conjure Mistman on it. Below it is the page, next to a coin purse and Soul Gem.

➤ Giub's Opus (Page 7)

The Black Church: While on the main path from the Soul Cairn entrance, en route to the barrier wall, close to where the soul that lost Arvak is located, look to your right (east). Just north of the Black Chapel is the Black Church, an obsidian stone structure with four entrances into a small inner room. The page lies here, next to a chest, coin purse, and Soul Gem.

➤ Giub's Opus (Page 6)

The Black Chapel: After climbing down the entrance steps from Volkihar Ruins, facing northeast and walking down the main path, the first building you see on your right (east) is the Black Chapel. Shoot an arrow into each turquoise orb so the bars at the chapel entrance recede. Then climb to the page inside, at the foot of a chest, next to a dagger and coin purse.

➤ Giub's Opus (Page 8)

The Black Minster: After stepping across the barrier wall, locate the ruined foundations with four pathways off it. Face northwest and follow the path as it winds around to the north. Pass two black structures with Master Crystals atop them. Ignore those, and instead head for the largest structure on the northern edge of the Soul Cairn. It has a stepped entrance and a barred opening to the right of that. Enter the Minster, wandering the maze of corridors until you reach a teleport to the roof. The page is by a chest below the Crystal, near a Soul Gem.

➤ Jiub's Opus (Page 9)

Morven Stroud: Soul Husk Merchant: After you cross the barrier wall, turn right (east) and wander to the remains of a cart where a ghostly trader named Morven Stroud resides. The page is on one of the barrels close to his cart.

➤ Jiub's Opus (Page 10)

◇ OBJECTIVE: Return to Jiub

Quest Conclusion

After you gather all of Jiub's pages, revisit the poor fellow and offer the parchments to him. He is most excited and rewards you with a pristine copy of his first volume. Now his words can be read back in Tamriel! As an added bonus, Jiub also gives you his Locket.

- Saint Jiub's Opus
- Locket of Saint Jiub

Postquest Activities

You can read Saint Jiub's Opus or sell it for a tidy profit.

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest Menu list, although objectives may.

A Lack of Cartographical Evidence

There are a huge number of Wilderness Encounters that can occur during your adventures in Skyrim (a complete list can be found on page 682). However, three of them (Dawnguard Novice, Dawnguard Outrider, and Dawnguard Remains) lead to this unmarked quest.

Like all Wilderness Encounters, these three are also random, so patience is necessary (and the encounters may take a while to occur). These particular encounters will occur only after you've completed Dawnguard Main Quest: The Bloodstone Chalice (Vampires) or Dawnguard Main Quest: A New Order (Dawnguard).

In each case, you find a member of the Dawnguard (or what's left of them) and a note, detailing the locations of three Wilderness Caches—dead drops set up by the Dawnguard to resupply their agents in the field. After reading the note, you can now find these hidden chests and claim the items they contain.

You can't simply ignore the Wilderness Encounters or notes and wander off to find these Wilderness Caches; they appear only after you have experienced the Wilderness Encounter and read the corresponding note.

CAUTION

Caches 1–3: Dawnguard Novice

This Wilderness Encounter occurs only late at night (try between 11:00 p.m. and 1:00 a.m.) and only in Whiterun Hold. Dawnguard Novice Hakar is running from two vampires. Save him, and he abruptly resigns from the order, drops his items (which includes his Dawnguard Armor, orders, and a Cache Key), and flees for Rorikstead. Reading his note reveals the location of the Dawnguard Caches in Whiterun Hold (see below). You can also claim the orders and Cache Key from his corpse if he dies. You can now find Wilderness Caches 1, 2, and 3. If you don't take the Cache Key, the strongboxes are all locked [Expert]. The last of the three Caches you find contains a Scroll.

- Dawnguard Orders: Hakar
- Dawnguard Cache Key

Cache 1: "In Rorikstead, in the pasture behind Frostfruit Inn." Simple and direct. This cache is hidden between a fallen log and some large rocks in the pasture.

Cache 2: "Near Stendarr's Shrine in the center of the tundra." The shrine in question is Secondary Location [6.1]: Shrine of Stendarr: The Two Pillars. The cache is up against the rocks just behind the shrine.

Cache 3: "South of Whiterun's Western Watchtower." This cache is located on a small island in a stream south of the watchtower.

Caches 4–6: Dawnguard Outrider

This Wilderness Encounter occurs only in Hjaalmarch, the Pale, or Winterhold Holds. Dawnguard Saliah rides by you on horseback. If you try to talk to her, she quickly brushes you off—she has no time for conversation. Kill or pickpocket her for her orders (which reveal the Caches in Hjaalmarch, the Pale, and Winterhold) and a Cache Key. You can now search for Wilderness Caches 4, 5, and 6. If you don't take the Cache Key, the strongboxes are all locked [Expert]. The last of the three Caches you find contains a Scroll.

- Dawnguard Orders: Saliah
- Dawnguard Cache Key

Cache 4: "In Morthal, on the islet due east of the mill." It's easy to get lost in the marsh, but these directions are clear: carefully walk due east from the mill to find this cache up against a tree.

Cache 5: "Outside Nightgate Inn, at the foot of the pier." The cache is nestled among the rocks on the south side of the pier.

Cache 6: "Near Winterhold, under the great arch." The arch itself is not a marked location, but it's easy to spot from the road as you make your way south from Winterhold. The cache is buried in the snow at the foot of the arch.

Cache 7–9: Dawnguard Remains

This Wilderness Encounter occurs only in Haafingar or the Reach. Dawnguard Lynoit lies dead on the ground, surrounded by three smoldering vampire ash piles. Loot his body for his orders, which reveal the Caches in Haafingar and the Reach. You can now locate Wilderness Caches 7, 8, and 9. If you don't take the Cache Key, the strongboxes are all locked [Expert]. The last of the three Caches you find contains a Scroll.

➤ Dawnguard Orders: Lynoit

➤ Dawnguard Cache Key

Cache 7: "On the small island south of Solitude Sawmill." This is the island out in the middle of the Karth River. It requires a short swim, but it's not hard to find.

Cache 8: "Due east of the entrance to the ruin Volskygge." The cache is up against a fallen log east of Volskygge.

Cache 9: "On the east side of Karthwasten Bridge." After crossing the bridge, search the rocks around the dead tree to find this cache.

Quest Conclusion

Continue your adventuring until you've pried open all nine caches and recovered their treasure!

DAWNGUARD REGIONAL ACTIVITIES

Optimal Activity Start

The following activities are available during your time exploring two large areas: the Soul Cairn and the Forgotten Vale. Think of them as a subsection of Side Quests specific to these geographical areas. For quests that span more than these locations, consult the Side Quest chapter (page 564).

NOTE Cross-Referencing: Do you want to see maps and learn more about the traps, non-quest-related items, collectibles, crafting areas, and other important rooms of note in every location during these quests? Then cross-reference the location you travel to with the information on that location contained in this guide's Atlas.

Dawnguard: All of these activities are marked with the Dawnguard sign and are accessible only when Dawnguard is available.

Available Activities

There are a total of eight Regional Activities: seven in the Soul Cairn and two in Forgotten Vale. Aside from a few exceptions, most of these tasks are independent of one another and can be completed whenever you encounter them or if you return to either location.

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dawnguard Main Quest: Chasing Echoes, Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death

LOCATIONS: Soul Cairn

CHARACTERS: Arvak, Soul

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Find Arvak's skull in the Soul Cairn, Return Arvak's Skull, *Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest Menu list, although objectives may.

NOTE This unmarked quest is open to both factions. It becomes accessible only after you enter the Soul Cairn as part of Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death.

◆ A Good Deed for a Noble Steed

TIP The exact locations of the soul who once rode Arvak and Arvak's Skull are shown in the Atlas on page 986. Don't forget to check the map of the Soul Cairn, too.

Among the various oddities and general chaos that pervades the Soul Cairn, there are a couple of strange occurrences tied to a spectral steed named Arvak. You can:

Witness the spectral horse galloping across the Soul Cairn (as shown). You're unable to stop or interact with him. This is a Wilderness Special Encounter: Arvak (see page 682).

You can encounter a soul trapped in the Soul Cairn, just northeast along the path from the first Boneman encounter and black chapel, close to the entry portal. The soul pleads with you to "find my Arvak." The steed accompanied this soul into the Cairn but fled after they were attacked by monsters. The soul loves his horse dearly and wants his suffering to end. Your quest updates.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find Arvak's skull in the Soul Cairn

The horse's skull is located on the direct route between the location of Keepers 2 and 3. Northeast of the second Keeper's location, look for a small tower with an altar inside. This altar has Arvak's Skull on it and is guarded by Mistmen (floating apparitions of skeletal blackness) and lightning.

➤ Arvak's Skull

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return Arvak's Skull

After you retrieve the skull, the soul you met earlier appears in a small graveyard just northeast of the altar (look for the compass waypoint with the Miscellaneous Objective active). The soul is ecstatic, as he can sense that Arvak's soul has been freed! In gratitude, the soul teaches you a spell that causes Arvak to appear before you.

➤ Summon Arvak

Postquest Activities

All that remains now is to summon Arvak to aid you on your travels. Select Magic > Conjuration > Summon Arvak, and with enough Magicka, you are able to conjure the spectral horse in the following locations:

Skyrim Exterior
Soul Cairn

Blackreach
Dayspring Canyon

Forgotten Vale Exterior
Solstheim

TIP The crosshairs glow red if Arvak can't be summoned in a particular area; move to a more suitable locale and try again. Arvak is useful to have if you prefer horses for travel and combat, want to conjure a loyal beast just before a battle, or want to travel on horseback through areas that other horses aren't able to reach. Arvak is especially well suited for mounted combat (see page 106), since, unlike other horses, he can't be permanently killed. Simply cast the spell to summon him once again.

Keeper's Altar: This is located in the southeast corner of the Soul Cairn, along the eastern path just past the tower where the second Keeper resides, between the Keeper's tower and the Reaper's Lair. Enter this small, arched structure, and claim the Spell Tome from atop the altar. Beware of a Wrathman ambush once you take the tome.

➤ Spell Tome: Conjure Wrathman

Spell Tome: Conjure Mistman

Foundation Altar: Southeast of the Boneyard Citadel and northeast of Arvak's Skull is a stepped area leading to an open altar, close to the perimeter barrier (to the east) and just east of the teleport to Keeper 3. Beware of Bonemen guarding this altar, which has the Spell Tome: Conjure Mistman on it. Below it is Jiub's Opus (page 7), next to a coin purse and Soul Gem. Watch for a Mistman ambush after the book has been swiped.

➤ Spell Tome: Conjure Mistman

Postquest Activities

You can read all three books regardless of your Conjuration Skill level. If you have enough skill or Magicka to cast these spells, you can summon the denizens of the Soul Cairn to fight for you as your adventure continues.

◆ Summoning Men of Bone, Mist, and Wrath

Within the Soul Cairn, three special Spell Tomes have been left by unknown hands. They provide conjuration practitioners with everything they need to summon their own Bonemen, Mistmen, and Wrathmen to aid them in battle. These spell books can be found at the following locations:

Spell Tome: Conjure Boneman

Soul Graveyard: Once you've moved across the barrier wall, head northwest toward the cluster of larger and imposing buildings in the northeast corner of the Soul Cairn. Look for the Black Minster (the long building on the north horizon with a floating crystal above it). To the left (west) of that, close to where Keeper 1 rests, is a Soul Graveyard. In the middle is an altar. The Spell Tome rests on the obsidian plinth below it. Prepare for a Boneman ambush after you grab the book.

Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death

LOCATIONS: Soul Cairn, Black Temple, Keeper's Castle, Obsidian Hall,

ENEMIES: Boneman, Mistman, Reaper, Wrathman

◆ OBJECTIVES: None

NOTE This quest is open to both factions. It becomes accessible only after you enter the Soul Cairn as part of Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death. Although every effort has been made to accurately pinpoint each Reaper Gem Fragment, it is well worth consulting the Soul Cairn Atlas chapter and the Soul Cairn map (page 986), which has cartographical locations shown as well.

Initial Preparations

During your exploration of the Soul Cairn, you may chance upon a Reaper Gem Fragment. This is the only clue you have to the existence of something strangely terrifying that you can conjure to face in this realm (aside from the other oddities and foes to encounter).

Reaper Gem Gathering: Three Fragments of Power

What follows is a description of where each of the three Reaper Gem Fragments are located. They are listed from one to three, although you don't need to find them in that order. In each case, three pictures are shown: They reveal the location from a distance, as you close in on the location, and finally at the location itself. Each location is also named. The names are references to the Atlas section only (they don't appear on your local map). Check the compass direction on each picture so you know from which direction to approach.

Reaper Fragments: First Location

The Keeper's Castle:
If you're completing Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death, cross the barrier wall and turn left (northwest). Cross the undulating ground until you reach the fortification where the first Keeper resides. Or, if you've met Valerica and are starting your search for Keepers to fight, simply trek from the Boneyard to the first Keeper (as detailed in the quest). After fighting the Keeper in the courtyard, turn left (southwest). Fire an arrow or bolt through each of the turquoise orbs to release the gate ahead of you. This leads to an outer courtyard of standing stones, an Ideal Master Crystal that burns away at you, and a chest. Retrieve the Fragment from the chest.

Reaper Fragments: Second Location

The Obsidian Hall: South of the Boneyard is a very large ruin, with huge walled sides. It is directly north of the second Keeper location. Head around to the large opening and face north, wander inside (defeating any foes that appear), and locate the small, circular teleport in the smaller courtyard. You're transported to the upper roof (rather than the roof section you can reach via the nearby steps), where an Ideal Master Crystal hovers over a chest to the south. Grab the Fragments from the chest. Then carefully drop to the lower rooftop and escape.

➤ Reaper Gem Fragment (1/3)

➤ Reaper Gem Fragment (2/3)

Reaper Fragments: Third Location

The Black Temple: North of Arvak's Skull and just west of the floating citadel where the third Keeper is stationed is a medium-sized blocklike temple structure with an Ideal Master Crystal hovering above the roof. The structure is at the base of the hill on which the Boneyard is located. Enter the building, look for the open doorway to the right (north), and climb the steps to the roof. An Ideal Master Crystal hovers over a chest to the south. Take the Fragments from the chest and retrace your steps.

► Reaper Gem Fragment (3/3)

Quest Conclusion

Reaper's Lair: Journey to the Soul Cairn's southeast corner, east of the second Keeper's residence, and inspect the black structure. Look south for the imposing doors and enter the building. Step forward to the Reaper Shard Receptacle; insert the Soul Fragments you've collected into this altar. With all of the Fragments placed, a Reaper Gem is fused together. Moments later, the Reaper is summoned!

This ghostly stuff of nightmares is a hooded shadow armed with a massive axe. His glowing red eyes stare through you, and he's immediately hostile, as are the Bonemen minions that also appear. The first part of combat must include dodging the disgusting vomit he sprays across the chamber. Failure to step out of the flying acid results in some nasty damage.

Hopefully the Reaper will become preoccupied with slaying Serana, allowing you to attack from a different direction. Dodge or block those heavy axe swipes, and whittle down the Reaper's health until he falters and finally falls. Search his Ghastly Remains for your reward.

► Black Soul Gem (3)

Don't let the Reaper haunt your nightmares.

◆ OBJECTIVES: None

NOTE This quest is open to both factions. It becomes accessible only after you enter the Soul Cairn as part of Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death.

Husk Hunting for Morven

Located to the east of the main path through the Soul Cairn, just after you've stepped across the barrier wall, is the soul of a merchant named Morven Stroud. He's one of the few souls who can hold a conversation with you.

Begin to talk, and you'll discover Morven wound up here after he sold an item with suspect ingredients to a necromancer coven. Morven was once a highly respected trader in High Rock (at least, according to Morven, he was), but now he waits here. Eternally. Offer to pass the time by collecting the only item he wants: Soul Husks. Return with 25 of them, and you can rummage through what he has left on his cart.

You may now begin collecting Soul Husks throughout the Soul Cairn (as this is the only place where they grow). You can find them in chests or growing in clusters. The largest concentration of them is in the Husk Pasture (shown).

When you have 25, return to Morven, and you're able to "purchase" one of the following (which is a random leveled item of the type you select):

A sword (25 Husks)	Light armor (25 Husks)	A Spell Tome (25 Husks)
A battleaxe (25 Husks)	Heavy armor (25 Husks)

Or you can keep your Soul Husks, as Valerica also makes use of them (see Regional Activity: Valerica's Concoction).

TIP Soul Husks are actually edible and are found in your Food menu. For ten seconds, you gain 10 percent Magic Resistance and are protected from Soul Drain effects in the Soul Cairn.

Postquest Activities

You can continue to collect Soul Husks and exchange them for goods.

Hunting Husks for Valerica

Once you've helped Valerica, claimed the Elder Scroll, and have no further critical objectives to accomplish, you can speak to her again. Among the topics of conversation, you can request her help in dealing with the crystals around these parts. The crystals in question greatly drain you and can make life difficult when you're exploring. Valerica has spent decades perfecting an extract that increases the potency of Soul Husks. If you bring five of these Husks to her, she'd be happy to provide you with some.

You may now begin collecting Soul Husks throughout the Soul Cairn (as this is the only place where they grow). You can find them in chests or growing in clusters (shown). The largest concentration of them is in the Husk Pasture. When you have five, return to Valerica, who prepares and hands you the concoction.

Postquest Activities

Valerica continues to make Soul Husk Extract for as long as you return with Soul Husks. Once she leaves the Soul Cairn (as part of Postquest Activity: Valerica's Return*; see page 552), this option is no longer available.

CHARACTERS: Urag gro-Shub

ENEMIES: Falmer, Frost Giant

◆ OBJECTIVES: Bring Ancient Falmer Tomes to Urag gro-Shub

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest Menu list, although objectives may.

This quest is open to both factions. It becomes accessible only after you enter Forgotten Vale as part of Dawnguard Main Quest: Touching the Sky. Although every effort has been made to accurately pinpoint each location, it is well worth consulting the Forgotten Vale Atlas chapter and the Forgotten Vale map (page 996), which has cartographical locations shown.

Initial Preparations

To activate this unmarked quest (which is just a Miscellaneous Objective once you find the first book), simply find one of the four Ancient Falmer Tomes (as shown, also known as "Unknown Books") in the Forgotten Vale. These can be found in any order, and not all of them need to be found. However, you receive 1,000 gold for each book you find, so this is well worth your time.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring Ancient Falmer Tomes to Urag gro-Shub

◆ TARGET: Unknown Books I, II, III, and IV, Forgotten Vale

◆ TARGET: Urag gro-Shub, Arcanaeum, College of Winterhold

Tome Gathering: Four Books Forgotten

In this section, we tell you where each of the books are located. They are listed in numerical order, although you won't find them in that order without some backtracking through the Forgotten Vale. In each case, a picture of each location is shown, and each location is also named: The names are references to the Atlas section only (they don't appear on your local map). Check the compass on each picture so you know from which direction to approach.

Unknown Book, Vol. I

Snow Lake Entrance: The Sprawled Skeleton: When you reach the snowy hill and the Forgotten Vale lake, head south down the slope toward the water's edge. Along the way, you'll spot a skeletal corpse sprawled over a chest. Close to the chest is the book and a coin purse. This is usually the first book you'll find.

➤ Unknown Book, Vol. I

Unknown Book, Vol. II

Upper Falls Overlook: This is the most difficult book to find. First you must trek to the location of the third Frost Giant, which is in the northern Falmer cliffs area that you traverse before reaching the Glacial Crevice. The Frost Giant lives by a shallow cave high above the main river fissure, off a circular Falmer path (see page 1001). Slay this foe and claim the Emerald Paragon from its corpse. Then (usually after completing the Dawnguard Main Quest) journey to the Paragon Portal Platform (see page 1000), close to the second Frost Giant's location, and insert the Emerald Paragon. You emerge at Upper Falls Overlook, high above the Frozen Lake and close to the Temple Balcony. Head to the waterfall's edge and look right (east). The book is by some arrows, a bow, a chest, and a skeleton. This is usually the last book you'll find.

NOTE Consult Regional Activity: Paragons of the Frost Giants* for more information on the Emerald Paragon.

➤ Unknown Book, Vol. II

Unknown Book, Vol. III

Falmer Hut, Dead-End Ledge: Journey across the northern Falmer cliffs, the area you must traverse before reaching the Glacial Crevise. On your descent, with the river below you and the Glacial Crevise to the south, head across a couple of bridges (one Falmer-made and the other natural). There's a Falmer Hut with a mammoth skull adorning it. The book is on a table inside the hut, near some potions and other trinkets. This is usually the second book you'll find.

➤ Unknown Book, Vol. III

Unknown Book, Vol. IV

Falmer Hut, the Falmer Fissure: After emerging from the Glacial Crevise, enter the Falmer Fissure, and fight your way to the second part of this location, with four huts to ransack and a group of Chaurus Hunter Fledglings to remove from their nests below. Be sure to check the hut on the upper walkway at this area's far eastern end; the Unknown Book is here on a table near potions and a Falmer chest, just before you drop down and enter the sloping tunnel to the south. This is usually the third book you'll find.

➤ Unknown Book, Vol. IV

Quest Conclusion

When you have one or more of these tomes, visit the College of Winterhold and seek out Urag gro-Shub in the Arcanaeum. Ask him if he has any interest in ancient Falmer tomes, and he agrees to purchase them from you for 1,000 gold, plus a translated version of the book. Collect all four for the following rewards:

- 1,000 gold (per book)
- The Betrayed (translated version of Vol. I)
- Journal of Mirtil Angoth (translated version of Vol. II)
- Diary of Faire Agarwen (translated version of Vol. III)
- Touching the Sky (translated version of Vol. IV)

Postquest Activities

Return to Urag gro-Shub if you missed any books, until you've found and sold all four and pocketed the translated copy and your "finder's fee."

Dawnguard Main Quest: Unseen Visions

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dawnguard Main Quest: Unseen Visions, Dawnguard Main Quest: Touching the Sky

LOCATIONS: Forgotten Vale Darkfall Grotto (Paragon Portal), Forgotten Vale Forest (Paragon Portal), Forgotten Vale Overlook (Paragon Portal), Frost Giant Lair, Falmer Cliffs: Circular Falmer Path, Inner Sanctum, Lower Lake, North Falmer Fissure, Paragon Portal Platform, Glacial Crevise (Paragon Portal), Inner Sanctum (Paragon Portal)

CHARACTERS: None

ENEMIES: Falmer, Frost Giant, Frost Troll

◆ OBJECTIVES: None

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest Menu list, although objectives may.

This quest is open to both factions. It becomes accessible only after you enter Forgotten Vale as part of Dawnguard Main Quest: Touching the Sky. Although every effort has been made to accurately pinpoint each Frost Giant location, it is well worth consulting the Forgotten Vale Atlas chapter and the Forgotten Vale map (page 996), which shows cartographical locations and the hidden areas you can reach with each of the Paragons.

Initial Preparations

Hidden throughout the Forgotten Vale are shallow caves where Frost Giants dwell. These huge and sinewy beasts each carry a unique Paragon Stone. The first part of this task is to gather all of the Paragons. The second part of this task is to utilize the Paragons at a special Portal, which can transport you to otherwise-inaccessible parts of the Vale. Collect as many (or as few) Paragons as you wish.

This task requires little preparation; in fact, it is recommended that you undertake it during Dawnguard Main Quest: Touching the Sky, as all of the Frost Giant locations are close to the route you take through Forgotten Vale. This is an unmarked quest, so there are no objectives to watch for.

In the following section, we describe where each of the Frost Giants are located. They are listed one to five, although you can face them in any order you choose. In each case, a picture of the location is shown, along with its name: The names are references to the Atlas section only (they don't appear on your local map). Check the compass on each picture so you know from which direction to approach.

When facing a Frost Giant in combat, utilize the techniques you previously employed when fighting Giants. Beware of the Frost Giants' club smash, which is devastating, and don't get caught in the rocky terrain! It is wise to fire on these foes from a distance or let Serana (or any Armored Trolls, Huskies, or Death Hounds you've coaxed along with you) take the brunt of the hurting.

Part 1: Giant Killer—A Frosty Reception

Frost Giant 1

Frost Giant Lair (Lower Lake): From the entrance to the lower lake (where the first Unknown Book is located, just after the battle with the Frostbite Spiders), turn right (northwest) and work your way to the lake's northwest end. The Frost Giant is close to a waterfall, in a shallow cave. There's a snowy path northwest of here. Claim the Amethyst Paragon from its corpse.

➤ Amethyst Paragon

Frost Giant 2

Frost Giant Lair (Paragon Portal Platform): After traversing the Frozen Lake and activating the Wayshrine of Resolution, head north toward a natural bridge. At the bridge's other side, turn right (southeast), head along a previously unexplored path, and turn left (east) to an unexplored ridge. Move through rocky outcrops to a rushing river above the Lower Lake where you slew your first Frost Giant. This is where the snowy path (mentioned above) links to, and that's another route here. Slay the Frost Giant at the shallow cave, and remove the Sapphire Paragon from the body.

➤ Sapphire Paragon

TIP This location has a Snow Elf Paragon Portal on the river's northwestern side. You insert each of the Paragons here. This can be done no matter how many you have.

Frost Giant 3

Frost Giant Lair (Falmer Cliffs—Circular Falmer Path): At the flapping banner marking the upper entrance to Shardslope Cave, head southeast, down to a rickety bridge with a hut at the far end. Then climb the steep rocky path to the northeast. At the top is a circular path to the right (south) leading counterclockwise past the shallow cave with the third Frost Giant to face. Watch your step, as this path is precarious! Loot the Emerald Paragon from the dead giant.

➤ Emerald Paragon

Frost Giant 4

Frost Giant Lair (North Falmer Fissure): Having just navigated through the Glacial Crevice, enter the Falmer Fissure (a set of narrow crags where the Falmer have constructed numerous bridge pathways). Inspect the path leading north, past a bone rope and up through a gate to a steep ravine with a Frost Giant tending to his bone collection at the top. Slay him, and claim his Diamond Paragon.

➤ Diamond Paragon

Frost Giant Lair (Inner Sanctum): Having entered the Inner Sanctum, in the initial chamber with the frozen Falmer, inspect an altar along the western wall of this temple entrance. Activate the altar and place your Ewer on it. This opens a secret door directly ahead of you. Step through, then turn around and grab the Ewer. Step back before the door closes.

Now investigate the secret passage you've found; it leads to an ice cave where you face the fifth and final Frost Giant. Claim the Ruby Paragon from its corpse before activating a second altar in the northern wall. Place the Ewer on the altar to access a second, smaller hidden chamber with a chest and a variety of potions and Elven Arrows. Check the entire area for skeletal remains and other items; then return to the first secret door, placing the Ewer on the side altar (grab it again afterward!) and stepping back through into the main temple entrance.

➤ Ruby Paragon

Part 2: The Really Forgotten Vale

With one or more Paragons in your possession, return to the site where you defeated the second Frost Giant and claimed the Sapphire Paragon (by the rushing river and two waterfalls). Look for this partially ruined Paragon Portal Platform (pictured). Activate the Paragon Socket, and insert the Paragon of your choice. The structure glows, and an archway to an otherwise-inaccessible part of the Forgotten Vale becomes accessible. Step on through to the following areas:

Amethyst Paragon

Darkfall Grotto (Paragon Portal): You're teleported to a high rock ledge overlooking the waterfall that leads (after some enforced swimming) into Darkfall Grotto. Search the area for a chest and potion. You can dive into the water below or use the paragon arch to safely teleport back.

➤ Chest and Potion

Sapphire Paragon

Inner Sanctum (Paragon Portal): You appear in a ruined section of the Inner Sanctum. On the other side of the room of arched windows are three chests, some well-made armor, and a scattering of valuable gems (including a diamond, amethysts, and various garnets). Now return to the Paragon Platform.

➤ Chest (3), and Gems

Emerald Paragon

Forgotten Vale Overlook (Paragon Portal):

You emerge at the highest point in the Forgotten Vale—a rushing river tumbling from a waterfall. Follow the river downstream, to the edge of a second waterfall. Don't fall to your death here; instead, gaze out across the Frozen Lake (weather permitting) and check out Auriel's Chapel Balcony (which can't be reached either). Look east toward a small pillar ruin, a skeleton, a chest, arrows, a bow, and an Unknown Book (part of Regional Activity: Forgotten Vale: Ancient Falmer Tomes).*

➤ Chest, Arrows, and Bow ➤ Unknown Book, Vol. II

Diamond Paragon

Glacial Crevice (Paragon Portal):

You're transported to a small, high ledge near the ceiling of the Glacial Crevice. Aside from a dangerous jump-off, there's a single chest to ransack before you return.

➤ Chest

Ruby Paragon

Forgotten Vale Forest (Paragon Portal): This location is the largest and consists of a sealed glade of thick woodland with sloping ground to the northwest that leads to a Frost Troll den. To the southwest, a powerful Falmer clad in fancy armor is finishing off the Frost Troll threat before turning his attention to you. Face the Falmer Warmonger in battle, and once you best him, peel off his armor and claim the legendary artifact he was carrying: Auriel's Shield. This is a fine prize!

➤ Falmer Hardened Armor ➤ Auriel's Shield
➤ Falmer Hardened Helm

Quest Conclusion

Slay any Frost Giants you may have missed, and fully investigate all five hidden areas to complete this quest.

Postquest Activities

The Ruby Paragon leads you to a location where you have the most to gain, as Auriel's Shield is an exceptional item. Remember you can sell the Paragons you don't want or need anymore, or you can display them in your home as a memento of this task.

DRAGONBORN QUESTS

GENERAL OVERVIEW

A new power – an ancient, creeping terror – is gradually enveloping the island of Solstheim off the coast of Morrowind. For it seems the long-forgotten tombs and sacred stones are resonating; grasped firmly by the machinations of the first Dragonborn: Scholars tell of a priest named Miraak, who served the dragons with a group of powerful acolytes, before finally turning against his dragon masters, and finding new strength and knowledge under the yoke of the Daedric Prince Hermaeus Mora. Miraak is demonstrating his fortitude by siphoning the island's All-Maker Stones, and enslaving its inhabitants. As his power grows, he has even sent his followers into the provinces of Skyrim in search of the 'false' Dragonborn, the only one who may be capable of stopping his return.

NOTE Cross-referencing: Would you like to see maps and learn more about the traps, non-quest-related items, collectibles, crafting areas, and other important rooms of note in every location during these quests? IMPORTANT LOCATIONS

Raven Rock

Raven Rock is a settlement located in the remains of the Hirstaang Forest. It's situated strategically in a small cove on the southern end of Solstheim. In Raven Rock's glory days, a pair of large docks jutted out into the cove, which provided access to the cargo ships the East Empire Company needed to send ebony out of and bring supplies into the colony. Now, only a single rickety dock remains. The eastern end of the city is dominated by the Bulwark, a massive stone fortification used to defend the town. A long, tall cliff protects the town's northern side, sheltering it from Solstheim's harsh conditions. Ever since Red Mountain's eruption, the once-lush pine forest has been transformed into ash waste. The Bulwark now serves as a different kind of barrier—protecting Raven Rock's inhabitants from ash storms.

Tel Mithryn

Dominated by the Telvanni tower along the island's southern coast, this Dunmeri settlement sits a little east of the ruins of Fort Frostmoth. It has a classic mushroom shape, with a fungal growth hollowed out into a top floor and a stalk holding it up off the ground. Currently, one section of it appears to be withered and dying. At the base of the stalk are bulbous growths that form secondary buildings. Tel Mithryn is home to Neloth, a Telvanni wizard who survived the Red Year of Vvardenfell. Neloth has been experimenting with the ash and other debris, such as heart stones, from the eruption of Red Mountain. He has multiple goals, but all of them involve returning to Vvardenfell and becoming Arch-Mage, although sometimes it just looks like accumulating power for power's sake.

◊ Skaal Village

Skaal Village is located along the Felsaad Coast. The terrain is flat but rocky and dotted with pine trees and low scrub. There is no real economy here, as money has little value to the self-sufficient Skaal. Hunting is the main source of sustenance, as the Horkers on the northern coast and nearby Lake Fjalding are relative easy and lucrative prey. More adventurous Skaal seek the elusive Snow Wolf or Snow Bear, whose pelts are highly valued among their people.

◊ The All-Maker Stones

The animistic Skaal hold these ancient carved stones to be evidence of their deity, part of a simple cosmology in which the All-Maker created all matter and the world. While these notions may seem primitive to Nords of Skyrim, the magic that courses through these stones is very real—so much so that Miraak seeks to siphon it and has tainted them with evil, compelling the weaker-willed people of Solstheim into constructing strange arched shrines for this purpose.

◊ Temple of Miraak

In the distant past, one of the great temples of the Dragon Cult stood atop Solstheim's central mountains. It was destroyed by the dragons long ago, in the war fought over Miraak's betrayal, and forgotten. Now it is the site of the Tree Stone, one of the five All-Maker Stones sacred to the Skaal people. But a new temple is rising, with strange arches and an ornate. Its architects are the ordinary people of Solstheim, who have unknowingly fallen under the control of Miraak.

◊ Nchardak

The dwarven city of Nchardak was built on a series of platforms extending out into the Sea of Ghosts. Thousands of years of disuse, and the cataclysmic Red Year, have decimated the ruin, causing most of it to sink into the sea. Only the tops of a few towers and the walkways connecting them still rise above the waterline. Many are tilted at precarious angles or have been ruined entirely, but a few, such as the domed Reading Room, remain intact.

QUESTS: DRAGONBORN MAIN QUEST

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Amid a black ocean filled with writhing tentacles lies the endless library of forbidden knowledge. This realm of Oblivion is the domain of Hermaeus Mora. Black-covered books adorn every edifice. Pages flutter as if pulled by invisible string. And grotesque creatures malformed by Mora stalk the constantly elongating and retracting halls, feeding off the ghosts of those seeking knowledge. The laws of the mortal world hold no power here.

IMPORTANT CHARACTERS

Frea Crag-Strider

Frea is the daughter of Storn Crag-Strider. When Miraak began to seize control of Solstheim, she was with her father and was protected from Miraak's mind control. Her friends were not so fortunate and haven't been seen in quite some time. While her father focused on protecting the village, she devised a way to make that protection portable so that she could attempt to find out what has happened. With a special talisman to keep her safe, she's made it to the top of the strange temple in the center of Solstheim, looking for answers.

Eventually, the other dragon priests discovered Miraak's heresy and led a crusade against him. He was defeated, his followers killed or scattered, and his temple razed. But Miraak was able to escape into Hermaeus Mora's realm of Apocrypha, where he has been growing in knowledge and power over the centuries while he waited for a chance to return.

Hermaeus Mora

Hermaeus Mora is the Daedric Prince of Knowledge, he who scryes the tides of Fate, weaving his way through the past and future. Always lurking, he is the void and the ever-seeing eyes. He resides everywhere and nowhere but takes glee in tormenting mortals from his realm in Oblivion, the plane called Apocrypha, where the infinite pages of countless books containing all forbidden knowledge are found.

Storn Crag-Strider

Storn is the Skaal shaman, the spiritual advisor to the tribe. Stoic and patient, the Skaal look to him in times of difficulty for guidance and comfort. He communes with the land and calls upon the power of the All-Maker, the creator and sustainer, to protect them. Times have grown harder of late, and now his people have been shattered by the loss of most of the tribe to some unknown dark magic. At the last moment, Storn was able to shield the remaining few of his people from this spell, but it is taking all of his concentration to maintain the barrier, and he can't keep it up forever.

AVAILABLE QUESTS

There are a total of seven Dragonborn Main Quests. Aside from Cleansing the Stones, which must be completed after The Fate of the Skaal but before the conclusion of The Gardener of Men, each quest leads directly into the next, as shown in the following table:

Neloth

Master Neloth is the Telvanni wizard who dwells in Tel Mithryn. Neloth seems to have difficulty with the concept that other people matter. He judges their health and well-being solely based on his personal comfort and needs. That said, he is no fool. He recognizes power and that power in others must be respected. At this point in his life, he has given up kidnapping women. He claims that it no longer interests him. Once you've kidnapped someone, you have to put up with their whining and complaining. It just isn't worth it.

Miraak

Miraak was the first Dragonborn. His destiny may have been to defeat Alduin back in the Mythic Era, but he chose a different path: to use his Dragonborn abilities to gain power for himself. Originally a dragon priest, he was seduced by Hermaeus Mora and secretly became his disciple. He gathered a cult to Hermaeus Mora at his temple on Solstheim.

DRAGONBORN MAIN QUEST

DRAGONBORN

PREREQUISITES: Complete Main Quest: The Way of the Voice

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Main Quest: The Way of the Voice, Main Quest: The Horn of Jorgen Windcaller, Dragonborn Main Quest: The Temple of Miraak

LOCATIONS: Earth Stone, High Hrothgar, Raven Rock, Temple of Miraak, Windhelm, Northern Maiden, Windhelm Docks

CHARACTERS: Adril Arano, Frea, Gjalund Salt-Sage, Neloth

ENEMIES: Cultist

◆ OBJECTIVES: Find out who sent the Cultists, Read Cultists' Orders, Travel to Solstheim, Search for information about Miraak, Investigate the shrine, Reach the Temple of Miraak

Once the fracas ends, inspect the corpses of the Cultists. Pick up the piece of paper marked "Cultists' Orders," which seems to be a missive from a Lord Miraak to his two minions, urging them to find and kill you. There's also a clue to their method of travel. You must retrace their steps by seeking out the ship the Northern Maiden, docked at Windhelm.

► Cultists' Orders

◆ OBJECTIVE: Read Cultists' Orders

◆ OBJECTIVE: Travel to Solstheim

◆ TARGET: Gjalund Salt-Sage, Northern Maiden, Windhelm Docks

Called to Solstheim

NOTE The island of Solstheim is treacherous and unforgiving, and its more ferocious inhabitants are tough to slay without proper killing equipment. Once you begin this quest, gather enough provisions so you don't waste time traveling back and forth from Skyrim.

After your initial meeting with the Greybeards of High Hrothgar, unseen forces begin to conspire against you. To catch your first glimpse of your new and threatening foes, head to any town or city once Main Quest: The Horn of Jorgen Windcaller begins. In this example, your stroll through Riverwood was disrupted.

Enter any settlement and the regular jocularly with the town guards is silenced by the arrival of two strange figures wearing distinctively odd masks and clothing. One of the Cultists challenges you (head to another settlement if no challengers present themselves), mocking your supposed status as the true Dragonborn! Apparently, Lord Miraak is soon to appear, and you are but his shadow! The two Cultists then attack. Slay both of them, with or without the help of the townsfolk.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find out who sent the Cultists

TIP Consider visiting a smaller settlement such as Dragon Bridge or Riverwood, as the Cultists are easier to spot, but the guard still offers effective backup to your own combat prowess.

Such fighting inside a settlement can lead to the slaying of unimportant residents; this won't impact any major quests but may diminish the Favors you can attempt, so you may wish to draw the Cultists away from the villagers.

CAUTION

Aboard the Northern Maiden

Head to Windhelm and descend to the dockside area near the East Empire warehouse. Locate the Northern Maiden and its forlorn-looking captain. Speak to Gjalund Salt-Sage, choosing your words how you like. It transpires that Gjalund was befuddled for most of the trip, losing whole days of his memory after agreeing to bring the Cultists aboard. He has little desire to return to Solstheim, though. Unless you:

(500 gold) Agree to pay him double his usual rate, or

(Persuade) Tell him he owes you for bringing those killers to your doorstep, or

(Intimidate) Let him know you're not taking no for an answer.

When you're successful, Gjalund agrees to set sail. Ready yourself for the voyage to Solstheim. As you arrive at the port of Raven Rock, Gjalund hopes you'll find out what's been going on around these parts.

TIP Plan your excursion to Solstheim wisely:

◆ If you lack proper attire, weapons, or supplies for such a lengthy trip, you might wish to make proper preparations before you speak with Gjalund.

◆ Consider traveling light; although there is a house you can acquire (see page 99), there's nowhere you can initially store your excess items.

◆ Solstheim (and in particular, the town of Raven Rock) has all of the usual merchants and services, so you need not return to Skyrim between every adventure. However, after you first arrive in Raven Rock, you can Fast-Travel back to the mainland (and vice versa) at any time or pay Gjalund to take you back.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Search for information about Miraak

QUESTS: DRAGONBORN MAIN QUEST

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Rumors at Raven Rock

As you disembark, you're stopped by a Dunmer named Adril Arano. Ignore him if you want, but it's better to listen to what he has to say. He wants to know your intentions. You can:

Be as secretive as you like and investigate by speaking to other townsfolk.

Better yet, you can eke out some information from him; tell him you're looking for Miraak. Initially, he shrugs off your question and makes sure you know that House Redoran of Morrowind runs this sovereign territory. Ask him about Miraak again, and he stops to think. He's sure he doesn't know the name but reckons it may have something to do with the Earth Stone nestled on the high ground just outside of town. After he imparts this bit of information, you can quiz him about his suspicions regarding visitors and learn more about the town of Raven Rock.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Investigate the shrine

◆ TARGET: Neloth, at the Earth Shrine

Exit the docks and turn left, heading along the main thoroughfare. There are numerous merchants and other buildings of interest to check out (the Atlas on page 1037 has all this information), but aside from extra activities, you have a few options. You can:

Talk to the townspeople of Raven Rock. There are many to choose from, and they offer you variations on one of three pieces of information:

That Miraak sounds familiar, but the person can't remember why.

That the name has some connection to the shrine at the Earth Stone.

That this entity conjures up images of a temple near the middle of this island.

Ignore the townspeople and head directly to the Temple of Miraak if you're feeling antisocial or haven't the time for pleasantries.

TIP Ask about Miraak when speaking to Glover Mallory the blacksmith; then talk to Dreylla Alor, a merchant of general goods. You'll receive enough information to bypass the visit to the Earth Shrine and head straight to a strange temple. You don't have to pick those two; anyone with a full name is likely to give you some help.

If you head west and southwest along the main thoroughfare and around to a promontory overlooking the town, you can see some villagers hard at work erecting a strange monument around an odd glowing sacred stone the size of a frost giant. The majority of the workers seem transfixed and speak in short bursts as if possessed. Seek out a dark elf named Neloth, who ponders awhile on why you aren't in the same state as these drones. You can:

Ask him what these people are doing: He doesn't know but wants to leave them like this to find out.

Inquire about Morrowind, and he tells you a little more about the place.

If someone in Raven Rock hasn't mentioned the temple to you yet, Neloth will, and the quest updates.

NOTE This Earth Stone is one of six Sacred Stones to be found on Solstheim. Much like the Standing Stones of Skyrim, they grant great power to those who seek it. However, at the moment, the stones are consumed by a strange green energy. Try to activate any Stone and you will awake to find yourself helping in the construction. You will free the thralls forced to build these shrines for Miraak later in this quest.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Reach the Temple of Miraak

Enthralled at the Temple

Feel free to explore the large island of Solstheim, as there are multiple ways to reach the Temple of Miraak. You can choose to do that now or after partaking in a few side quests. The optimal path to the Temple—which is reasonably direct and takes in some of the scenery so you get your bearings—involves backtracking across Raven Rock along the main thoroughfare heading east, through the gatehouse.

After passing through the bulwark, follow the gray beach with the strange pentagonal rock column formations. In the far distance is Red Mountain (in Vvardenfell, the main island of Morrowind), spewing great plumes of volcanic ash, which explains much of Solstheim's ground coloration. Just up ahead is Old Attius Farm, where Captain Velesh is taking a hammering from a group of Ash Spawn. Help or avoid this fracas; find out more by starting Side Quest: March of the Dead (page 632).

Continue north up the rocky escarpment, until the gray ash gives way to tundra. Climb northeast, through the gaps in the crags; the skeletons of slain dragons appear, half buried in the snow. Locate the steep steps and archways, continuing your ascent up and into the Temple of Miraak. There's a splendid view from the wooden scaffolding at the top.

Quest Conclusion

Ignore the Reaver thralls chiseling new construction for their master, who have nothing to say but a monotonous chant about "his" return. As you descend into the central cloister, you should seek out Frea, a woman desperately attempting to free her friend Ysra from her mental bonds. Approach her to end this quest.

Take a long left turn up the beach to the ashen, decimated forest, watching for intermittent savaging by Ash Hoppers. Weave around the gnarled stumps, rocky outcrops, and blighted trees in a roughly northern direction. Along the way, expect to run into a few nasty surprises, such as a Burnt Spriggan and a hunting party of Reavers.

PREREQUISITES: Complete

Dragonborn Main Quest: Dragonborn

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dragonborn

Main Quest: Dragonslayer, Dragonborn Main Quest: Dragonborn, Dragonborn Main Quest: Cleansing the Stones, Dragonborn Main Quest: The Fate of the Skaal

LOCATIONS: Temple of Miraak

CHARACTERS: Frea

ENEMIES: Cultists, Draugr, Gatekeeper, Miraak, Sahrotaar, Seeker

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Talk to Frea, Find the source of Miraak's power, Read the Black Book, Talk to Frea

MINOR SPOILERS

As the snow flurries dance around this circular arena, ignore Frea's mind-addled friend and talk to her yourself. She sternly explains she is one of the Skaal, the native people of this region, and that something has taken control of the minds of her tribe. Many work on great stone shrouds that corrupt the island's venerated and ancient standing stones. Her father is a shaman, who believes that Miraak has returned. You respond that you've already had a run-in with his cultists. You can ask Frea for:

More information about Miraak. This updates your objective.

Further knowledge of her people, the Skaal.

Why she's out here on her own.

And what exactly the Tree Stone is.

Down Among the Dead

NOTE This quest normally begins when you speak to Frea at the end of Dragonborn Main Quest: Dragonborn. However, there is another, very remote, possibility. If you never encountered the Cultists who begin that quest and instead traveled to Solstheim, visited the remote ruin of Saering's Watch, learned and unlocked the first word of the Bend Will Shout, and tried it out on the Wind Stone near Skaal village—all of this entirely on your own—you can free the Skaal "early." In that case, Storn will send you to find Frea at the temple, which begins this quest and skips over Dragonborn Main Quest: Dragonborn.

From this point on, Miraak becomes an incredibly disruptive force on the isle of Solstheim (and throughout Skyrim). In particular, he may appear after you have killed a dragon and steal its soul away from you, making it significantly harder to unlock further Shouts. For more information, see World Interaction: Soul Stealing (page 683).

CAUTION

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Frea

- ◆ TARGET: Frea, Temple of Miraak (exterior)

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the source of Miraak's power

- ◆ TARGET: Black Book, the Temple of Miraak Sanctum

It doesn't take Miraak's cultists long to show themselves. Face them down with Frea's fearsome axe-work, and descend the curved ramp they came from. Open the door and enter the temple, working your way down the stone corridor and checking the antechambers on each side for supplies, as Frea advises. Aside from the burned and caged corpses, expect potions and poisons before you descend farther. Watch for the dart trap just before the narrow stairs where two more Cultists appear. Defeat them, and any Draugr you disturb if you stumble to the sides of this room.

- ◆ TIP Frea is a tough Skaal warrior, and you can certainly let her lead the way into combat if you wish to conserve your potions, magic, or stamina.

Pass through the small burial chamber where Frea warns of the many traps Miraak's minions may have prepared for you. Sure enough, there are floor plates to avoid in the subsequent connecting chamber (unless you're ready to receive a battering ram to the stomach), steps down to a portcullis that opens via the adjacent chain, and a vast pit chamber where Frea notices more poor souls trapped in hanging cages. She also spots a stone viewing abutment overlooking the vast steps in the chamber's center of.

Head clockwise around the chamber's edge, repelling Draugr threats that burst from their vertical coffins. After two or three Draugr, face three or four Cultists ascending from the pit steps. Once you and Frea cut down all foes, thoroughly inspect the chamber: As Frea predicted, there is a way to the stone abutment; maneuver up the rubble and coffins under the pillar and then clamber atop the pillar, where you find a large treasure chest. Return the way you came, and descend the pit steps into a Draugr crypt.

Activate the handle next to the small portcullis door and step through into a small tomb where the walled coffins contain a variety of long-dead Nords to cut down (you may wish to move around the pillars and rubble so Frea attacks from a different direction than you, splitting your enemies' focus). After you defeat the Draugr, clamber through to a long passageway heading north. Watch for the seated Draugr behind you.

Avoid the swinging blade trap's floor plates as the passage splits into two narrower corridors. Both meet up farther along the crypt, both have Draugr infesting them, and both have a floor plate and a battering ram to avoid as you enter. The lower chamber offers higher ground, making it slightly easier to navigate. The corridors merge at the entrance to a long hall. Beware the floor plate and fire trap as you reach the double doors.

Enter this long hall of swinging blade traps and make short, quick bursts of speed between the swings to avoid any nasty contusions. A Whirlwind Sprint Shout can see you to the hall's end, but don't dash too early and stop at a blade's arcing cut. Pull the lever to remove the spear bars, step over the remains of the inactive Nordic Puzzle Door, and descend to the wooden double doors.

Bars block the way to the west, so head down the narrow passage, ignoring the dead Draugr that collapses out of its tomb. Pull the handle to remove the barrier. As the wooden bridge falls into place, step down into the three-ramped chamber, where a Cultist and two Draugr minions are waiting to repel you. Watch the floor plate and dart trap as you descend to meet them. Tackle any ranged foes, then the Cultist, and split or combine your attacks with Frea if you wish. After the battle, locate the double doors leading to the Temple of Miraak Sanctum.

Keeper of the Dragon Cult

Proceed along a suspended cage bridge. Step across the scattered bones, into the connecting tunnel, and wind around, slaying four to six skeletons and a couple of Draugr who step out of their coffins and onto a floor plate that activates battering rams; attack these foes from above. Step into the cavern of the guardians, watching for active Draugr and bursting coffins as you go.

Head down the steps across the stone crypt, keeping to the cavern's right (northeast) side so you don't end up in a small dead-end pit. Watch for a floor plate and battering ram, and work your way around the stone ledge to face down further Cultist threats. A fiery cauldron has been lit at the top of the narrow steps down into an ancient burial site for members of a dragon cult. Frea is shocked that Miraak would display the skeletal remains of a dragon in such a disrespectful manner.

Animosity between Miraak and his dragon cult brethren is the least of your worries. Step up to the Word Wall on your left (south) and learn a word of the Dragon Aspect Shout. The transference of power from the wall triggers a Draugr ambush; expect two or three annoyances from the row of coffins and a particularly nasty foe known as the Gatekeeper to burst from the tomb below the dragon skeleton. Defeat everything that moves, and inspect the Gatekeeper's corpse to claim the key to go farther into the temple. The door to which the key belongs is behind the Gatekeeper's sarcophagus.

➤ Word of Power: Dragon Aspect

➤ Temple of Miraak Key

NOTE The Dragon Aspect Shout is powerful, giving you improved armor and a range of other benefits, but it isn't something you have to use as a part of this quest.

TIP The Gatekeeper has his own Shouts, and these may stall or disarm you. Circle him or head up the steps to more easily avoid these attacks.

Waking Dreams of a Starless Sky

Pass the banquet table and its long-dead feasters, opening a second iron door with the key. After a connecting corridor with a window, move into another feasting hall, devoid of foes but featuring strange carved totems you haven't seen before. Pass by these weird fishlike heads into the kitchens, which hold a few ingredients and a narrow windowed passage with a handle to pull. This opens a secret door between two sets of shelves in the feasting hall. Gather your resolve and head south, through the winding tunnel to a ruined reading nook.

This circular chamber has a large spiral staircase below, but it is currently barred. Frea points out there is nothing here but ruined books. But there's also a secondary chamber with a square-shaped trapdoor and menacing statuary. Activate the handle in front of the fish faces to open the trapdoor. Descend the spiral steps, which connect to the ones you could see if you looked down from the reading nook.

Descend to the connected circular corridors with the fiery maws lighting your path. At the end is a stone wall with a handle to pull, lowering a staircase. Go even lower, opening a wooden door. This leads to a massive and lengthy stepped chamber, adorned with dragon bones and falling boulders. Prepare to be embroiled in a fast-paced battle with some skeletons, three falling boulder traps (stay mobile and leap to the side if you trigger any), and a nasty veteran Draugr with a sharp blade. Once you bring this foe to his knees, climb the final steps to a large treasure chest near the odd, lumpy carving of the Keeper of Forbidden Knowledge, inspect it, then activate the chain in the alcove behind the chest.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Read the Black Book

Scramble down a winding tunnel to reach a particularly ominous final chamber. This circular area is dominated by a thick stone altar, upon which rests the heavy Black Book. Frea warns you there are dark magics at work here. When you are ready, pick up the book and read it.

► Black Book: Waking Dreams

Unlike other books you may have read, this one strangles you with a dark tentacle and transports you to a strange plane of existence. This is Apocrypha, the realm of Hermaeus Mora, where the crackling towers of learning mingle with archways of despair and confusion. Forced to kneel and unable to move, your appearance interrupts Miraak. Flanked by Seekers (and his own gigantic serpent dragon, Sahrtaar), he speaks to you as a pretender to his throne as the true Dragonborn. If you've completed Main Quest: Dragonslayer, he comes close to commending you on your prowess but insists you have no idea of the power a true Dragonborn can wield.

Yelling the Dragon Aspect Shout, his form is imbued with power—a power that you cannot hope to achieve. After further hubris, he commands two of his Seekers to return you to the mortal plane and sets off on his dragon mount.

TIP You can immediately reread Waking Dreams and explore the realm of Apocrypha within. The guidance through these strange and frightening otherworldly islands is contained in Dragonborn Main Quest: At the Summit of Apocrypha, which is the optimal time to attempt this.

Remember that whenever you pick up a Black Book, you can read it at any time by opening it in your inventory. Black Books work only on Solstheim, not in mainland Skyrim.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Frea

Quest Conclusion

You regain consciousness at the Black Book altar. Speak with Frea and answer her questions. Miraak has proven himself to be extremely dangerous, and the book you retrieved must be shown to her father. He might be able to further your knowledge.

NOTE This Black Book is one of six that link Tamriel to the plane of Apocrypha. If you wish to travel deeper into Hermaeus Mora's realm, consult the "Black Book" quests in the Solstheim Side Quests section. These begin on page 608.

PREREQUISITES: Complete

Dragonborn Main Quest: The Temple of Miraak

MINOR SPOILERS

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dragonborn Main Quest: The Temple of Miraak, Dragonborn Main Quest: Cleansing the Stones, Dragonborn Main Quest: The Path of Knowledge

LOCATIONS: Saering's Watch, Skaal Village, Shaman's Hut, Temple of Miraak, Wind Stone

CHARACTERS: Frea, Storn Crag-Strider

ENEMIES: Dragon, Draugr, Frost Troll, Lurker

◆ OBJECTIVES: Accompany Frea to Skaal Village, Talk to Storn Crag-Strider, Learn the Word of Power, Use the "Bend Will" Shout on the Wind Stone, Defeat the Lurker, Talk to Storn

Storn of the Skaal

◆ OBJECTIVE: Accompany Frea to Skaal Village

◆ TARGET: Storn Crag-Strider, Skaal Village

Follow Frea out of the exit tunnel, and back into the Solstheim wilderness. A few dozen footfalls farther down the snowy mountainside, Frea pauses and asks if you can see a green light down the valley. This is the Wind Stone, where her people work against their will. She beckons you on, away from that possessed place, to the village and her father, Storn.

Follow her across the wooden bridge heading east. Frea stops again with her village in the middle-distance. She explains Storn used magic to raise a barrier around the settlement, protecting the few remaining Skaal from Miraak's control. Continue to follow her into Skaal Village, where a group of elders are kneeling in prayer. She approaches them and tells them her news. It seems Storn has more stories to share.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Storn Crag-Strider

Approach Storn Crag-Strider and he asks that you speak quickly, as his powers of protection are dwindling. You mention Miraak, and Storn recalls reading about terrible battles fought at the temple. He asks if you are Dragonborn. Answer however you wish. Storn then tells you to journey to Saering's Watch. There is a Word of Power there that Miraak has already mastered. Knowing this Thu'um may help to break the spell Miraak has over the Skaal people. Before you go, you can:

Ask for further information about Miraak.

Ask what he means about freeing his people from control.

Ask why you need to learn this Word of Power.

When Storn's answers have concluded, prepare to journey west, into the craggy, snowbound mountains of northern Solstheim.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn the Word of Power

◆ TARGET: Word Wall, Saering's Watch

Free Will

The trek to Saering's Watch is dangerous and difficult to traverse. The optimal path is to set out in a northwest direction, crossing back over the wooden bridge and skirting the edge of the Headwaters of Harstrad. Next, maneuver north, then northwest up the steep snowy slopes to pass by the entrance to Benkongerike. Turn right (north), heading under the stone henges as you reach the outskirts of Saering's Watch.

Pass under the henges (don't head farther up the mountain, as this places you away from the Word Wall) and head to the more open snowy cliffs where a great dragon is swooping down to attack a group of Draugr, recently resurrected from their tombs inside this ancient site. Other creatures may be prowling this area too (they are usually waiting among the rocky crags on the mountaintop, near the edge overlooking the ruins). Although not imperative, it is worth engaging in the battle here. You can:

Slay anything that moves, in no particular order. Wading in is fine. Firing down from a vantage point above these Draugr ruins is better.

Remember that you can also watch the dragon and Draugr battle it out, and then mop up any survivors if you aren't confident you can take them all on at the same time.

When you've thwarted the enemies in this vicinity, enter the ruins, looking for the three-headed stone serpent torch attached to the wall to the south. There is a set of stone steps to the left and right (heading southwest and northeast). Climb to the left to reach a secondary promontory with more steps up to the exterior Word Wall. Close by is a large treasure chest and the remains of a ritual involving candles and a long-dead skeleton. Approach the Word Wall, and learn your new Shout.

➤ Word of Power: Bend Will

NOTE If you have already learned this word before speaking with Storn, he sends you to the Wind Stone directly.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Use the "Bend Will" Shout on the Wind Stone
◆ TARGET: Wind Stone, in Solstheim

▶ The Lurker at the Threshold

Before continuing, spend a Dragon Soul to unlock the Bend Will Shout (the dragon you just slew at the base of Saering's Watch will do nicely). Equip and Favorite the Shout before descending back the way you came, down the mountainside heading roughly southeast. Before you step onto the wooden bridge, go down the hillside, heading north toward the All-Maker's Wind Stone. The Skaal you speak to are beyond your ability to help and mumble praises to Miraak. Clear your throat and bellow the Bend Will Shout directly at the stone. The rock arches glow red and then explode, snapping the Skaal villagers from their malaise. As the pieces of masonry fall away, something is summoned from Hermaeus Mora's realm!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat the Lurker

NOTE Did Miraak appear and steal the soul of the dragon you just slew? There's little you can do about this annoyance. If you're out of Dragon Souls to expend on Bend Will, travel back to Skyrim, locate a dragon lair, and slay another.

If you activate the Wind Stone before cleansing it, you'll join Miraak's other thralls in constructing the arches around this site. Fortunately, you have the willpower to snap out of this trance.

After cleansing the Wind Stone, you can commune with it. It grants you the power of the North Wind for a single day. Find out more information about the All-Maker Stones of Solstheim on page 94.

- ▶ All-Maker Power: North Wind (target takes 20 points of Frost damage for 10 seconds, plus Stamina damage)

The grim fish-headed statuary at Miraak's temple bears a resemblance to the unspeakable atrocity that appears to thwart you and the regrouping Skaal. Step forward and engage the Lurker, watching for its dark tendrils, ranged attack of black spittle, and foot-stomping splashes. This tough fellow is more easily contained if you utilize the Wind Stone to hide behind as you dodge its attacks. When the slimy beast is slain, your quest updates:

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Storn
◆ TARGET: Storn Crag-Strider, Skaal Village

Quest Conclusion

Climb the hill with the freed Skaal tribe members, and head back to Skaal Village. Enter the shaman's hut if Storn isn't in the village exterior, and speak with him. He already knows you've prevailed. You can speak to him about the following matters:

Let him know his people are free. He mentions that you are now a friend of the Skaal. Ask him what to do next, and he asks if you might perform the same cleansing Shout on the rest of the stones of Solstheim.

Ask him for further information about Miraak.

Ask him what the All-Maker is.

Ask him what his role is among the Skaal.

Postquest Activities

Continue your conversation with Storn, and he asks you to remove Miraak's presence from the remaining All-Maker Stones. This starts Dragonborn Main Quest: Cleansing the Stones.

Tell Storn that isn't enough and that Miraak needs to be stopped now. He tells you this is beyond his power and understanding. You must learn more about the Black Book you're carrying. Storn won't read such unnatural tomes, but he recommends the Dark Elf Wizard Neloth to aid you in these matters. At this point, Dragonborn Main Quest: The Path of Knowledge begins. After this, you can quiz Storn about:

More information on the Black Books.

Neloth and his role in finding more Black Books.

After completing this quest, you can persuade Frea to join you as a Follower.

NOTE At this point, there are a few Regional Activities you can attempt at Skaal Village. These can be done at any time from this point on. Check page 671 for more information.

◆ OBJECTIVES: Cleanse the Sun Stone, Cleanse the Beast Stone, Cleanse the Earth Stone, Cleanse the Water Stone

Before the Cleansing

NOTE This quest begins after you complete Dragonborn Main Quest: The Fate of the Skaal. With the Wind Stone already freed, there are four All-Maker Stones (other than the Tree Stone at Miraak's Temple) that you must remove from Miraak's influence. You may complete this quest at any time, but you must conclude it before you can finish Dragonborn Main Quest: The Gardener of Men.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Cleanse the Sun Stone
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Cleanse the Beast Stone
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Cleanse the Earth Stone
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Cleanse the Water Stone

The following information may prove pertinent as you reach each of the All-Maker Stones:

- ◆ The encounters at each of the Stones can be attempted in any order.
- ◆ Once you utter the Bend Will Shout, the construction around the Stone glows brightly and explodes.
- ◆ Immediately afterward, a Lurker is summoned. Slay it to complete the objective.
- ◆ Some battles may involve additional Lurkers or other foes. However, you need slay only the Lurker indicated by the objective arrow for the objective to complete.
- ◆ These can be difficult fights, so bring a Follower or summoned creature to assist you. You can also take advantage of the landscape around the Stone (and even the Stone itself) for cover opportunities.
- ◆ The enthralled workers at each site sometimes help you by engaging the Lurkers. But do your best to protect them, as they can die and may cause you to miss out on some minor Favors.
- ◆ Once the Stones are freed of Miraak's disruptions, you can gain power from each of them. For complete details, consult page 52.

Sun Stone: Purging the Ashen and the Elvish

The Sun Stone is just north of Tel Mithryn. Bellow the Bend Will Shout, and prepare for combat with one (or more) Lurkers. The following information may prove helpful:

The Dark Elf Ulves Romoran, who works in the kitchens of Tel Mithryn, is currently enslaved here. Keep him alive if you wish to speak with him afterward.

The other stone workers are Reavers and are expendable.

Beware of Ash Spawn and Ash Hoppers in the vicinity: remove these threats first or your chances of victory are further hindered.

Watch your wild attacks when engaging Lurkers; accidentally slaying the Dark Elves helping your battle can increase your bounty on Solstheim.

➤ All-Maker Power: Sun Flare.

Beast Stone: Freeing the Weakling Rieklings

The Beast Stone is west of the Thirsk Mead Hall and southeast of the Temple of Miraak. Yell the Bend Will Shout, and ready your weapons for a Lurker incursion. Remember the following as you approach:

There are a small number of Rieklings working at the building site. They are expendable. Beware of a Cultist or two in this area. They join in the battle against you, so try and place the Lurker between you and them. If you get lucky, their attacks may strike the beast, causing them to turn on each other.

➤ All-Maker Power: Conjure Werebear.

Earth Stone: Horror Near Raven Rock

The Earth Stone is southwest of Raven Rock, on the overlook where you may have met Neloth during Dragonborn Main Quest: Dragonborn. Call upon the Bend Will Shout, then face the Lurker that emerges. Heed the following at this juncture:

Citizens of Raven Rock are working at this Stone. During daytime hours, expect Bralsa Drel and Rirns Uervu (both incidental during Solstheim Side Quest: The Final Descent) here.

During nighttime hours, expect to find Cindiri Arano (Raven Rock Favor), Dreyla Alor (incidental), Fethis Alor (merchant and Solstheim Side Quest: The Great Solstheim Strongbox Hunt*), Glover Mallory (merchant and Raven Rock Favors), and Milore lenth (merchant and Raven Rock Favors). Since there is a high risk that some (or most) of these civilians will die, it's safer to cleanse this stone during the day.

There are two or three Redoran Guards working here during the day. They are expendable.

Although there are many Raven Rock citizens within fleeing distance, beware of who is attacking (and being slain by) the Lurkers.

➤ All-Maker Power: Bones of the Earth.

Water Stone: Untangling the Final Bonds

The Water Stone is north of Raven Rock and due west of Fahlbtharz, on a steep cliff path. Demolish the masonry with your Bend Will Shout, but watch for the following difficulties:

There are four sailors—Benkm, Hjalmar, Liesl, and Palevius Lex—enslaved at this Stone. Once freed, they may help in a fight but are expendable. Should any survive, they wander to the shore to wait for a ship and their freedom. They aren't involved in any other quests.

Expect a Cultist or two, and a dragon will fly in from a nearby island to the west. This can hamper your progress or help out considerably (if the Lurker and dragon end up fighting each other). But beware of lengthening odds if you're facing all three foes.

➤ All-Maker Power: Waters of Life.

Quest Conclusion

When all but the Tree Stone has been cleansed of Miraak's influence, this quest concludes. You should now continue with your Dragonborn Main Quest tasks (as completing this allows you to finish that quest line).

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dragonborn Main Quest: Cleansing the Stones, Dragonborn Main Quest: The Gardener of Men

LOCATIONS: Nchardak, Nchardak Aqueduct, Nchardak Great Chamber, Nchardak Reading Room, Nchardak Workshop, Tel Mithryn

CHARACTERS: Neloth

ENEMIES: Dwarven Ballista, Dwarven Centurion, Dwarven Sphere, Dwarven Spider, Reaver

◆ OBJECTIVES: Objective: Talk to Neloth, Travel to Nchardak with Neloth, Restore the steam supply to the Dwemer reading room, Release the book from the Dwemer contraption

You may have already met Neloth as part of Dragonborn Main Quest: Dragonborn or by visiting his tower at Tel Mithryn on your own. He has since returned to Tel Mithryn, in the southeast of the island. Beware of ash creatures as you approach.

Look for the lantern-lit root pathway that leads up to a circular door into the main structure of Tel Mithryn. Enter the tower, and then float up the magical lift to the upper floor where Neloth is practicing his magic. He doesn't recall inviting you here. Speak to him of the Black Book, after which you can converse on the following topics:

Your exploration to find more of these Black Books. Continue this line of questioning, mentioning you need to know what Miraak knows if you wish to stop him. Keep talking as Neloth reveals he knows the whereabouts of a Black Book connected to Miraak.

Questions regarding the Daedric Lord Hermaeus Mora.

The Black Book Neloth has learned the location of is sealed within a "reading room" in the dwarven ruin of Nchardak. He agrees to accompany you to see the tome, which is visible but firmly locked away.

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

TIP Getting to know Neloth, despite his high-and-mighty attitude, is worthwhile, especially after this quest, as he offers several Side Quests (listed on page 606). Some of them only become available after you complete Dragonborn Main Quest: The Gardener of Men.

The tower lift inside Tel Mithryn takes one person at a time. Floating up is the only way to reach Neloth's higher chambers. Floating down is the only way to reach the exterior door without falling and killing yourself. Try not to embarrass yourself using this exit method.

CAUTION

City of a Hundred Towers

Neloth sets off at a quick pace, first due north, then northeast along the coastline. As you approach a copse of windswept trees, with the ruins of Nchardak looming from the water's edge, Neloth remarks on the Dwemer architecture and says that the book is housed in the dome at the far end of the sprawling, half-sunken stone walkways and platforms.

Step onto the sloping stone bridge, watching for "riffraff"—Reaver scavengers who lurk among the ruins—and tackle them one by one. Watch for long-range bowmen from upper platforms as you go. You can head across the left or right series of walkways. Although they look precarious, they both lead to the main domed platform where the Reaver leader can be found examining the door to the Reading Room. Neloth proves his mettle by backing you up. After you deal with all of the Reavers, approach the sealed door.

Inspect the control switch to the door's left. Neloth explains that these pedestals are activated by special cubes. Fortunately, he secured one during his initial exploration and opens the seal, allowing you into the Nchardak

Reading Room. Inside, Neloth peers down through the huge seal on the ground that houses the tome you seek. So tantalizingly close! But this calls for a laborious method of book extraction; you must restore the steam supply to this room, which will allow you to access the Black Book.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Restore the steam supply to the Dwemer reading room

◆ TARGET: Five Control Cubes in the ruins of Nchardak

Cube Collecting

Using the cube Neloth already found, he approaches another control switch and opens the doors to an elevator that leads down to the Nchardak Great Chamber. Pull the lever to travel down, then follow Neloth as he explains the history of Nchardak, the "City of a Hundred Towers." At the bottom of the steps is a promontory with a view of a vast, waterlogged chamber. In front of you are two blue pedestals.

Neloth explains that most of the lower levels of the city are flooded but that the old Dwemer water pumps still work. With that, he places the Control Cube into the pedestal, which lowers the water level some of the way. You will need to locate four more cubes so the boilers can restore the steam power to the room above. Take the Dwemer Control Cube from the pedestal, then follow Neloth again. The water level rises, but there's nothing you can do about that for the moment.

TIP As you may have noticed, there are two distinct types of pedestals: blue and red. Blue pedestals require you to leave a Control Cube atop them. Red ones just require you to place and remove the Cube.

NOTE From this point forward, it is worth remembering how many Control Cubes you are carrying. A running total is listed for each section to make sure you haven't missed anything.

➤ Dwemer Control Cube Total: 1

Neloth pores over a strange set of instruments that suggest where a Cube may be found. Head south to the door that leads to the Nchardak Workshop, and insert the Cube into the red pedestal to the door's left to open it.

Head inside, then take the first left, where you find a pedestal with a second Control Cube. Neloth suspects the rest won't be so easy to obtain. Take the Cube, and the flamethrower traps ahead of you subside, but Dwarven Spiders and Spheres are released. Remove their threat and continue down the corridor.

➤ Dwemer Control Cube Total: 2

Your Dunmer friend remarks that this part of the city comprised the "Great Workshops of Nchardak." As Neloth drones on about the manufacture of automatons, check the half-flooded chamber.

To the left (north) behind a barred wall is another Cube. You can't reach it yet, so stay on the bridge and move to the opposite (eastern) side, where there are two blue pedestals. Place one of your Cubes into either pedestal; they both lower the water level to waist level.

► Dwemer Control Cube Total: 1

Head down to the ground floor, deal with the Dwarven Spheres and Spiders, and locate the red pedestal in the water on the northern side, below the small gold bridge. Place your only Cube into this slot (you automatically remove it again), and a set of stone steps rise behind the bridge. You need to climb the stairs, but the bridge is blocking your path. You can:

Make your way around the midlevel perimeter of the room, proceed out onto the bridge, and drop onto the stairs from there. If you choose this path, be careful—the Centurion on the room's west end (just beneath where you came in) will come to life if you approach him, and several piston traps threaten to push you back down to ground level.

Attempt to jump up onto the bridge (or the platforms near it) from ground level. This is possible but difficult.

Remove the Cube you placed in the blue pedestal earlier and simply swim over the bridge.

NOTE You can ignore the red pedestal by the bridge, which simply raises and lowers it.

However you got there, the gold door in the north wall leads into a small, reasonably wide chamber with a secondary area around and to the left (south), leading to a new Control Cube (near the barred wall you couldn't get to earlier). Grab this Cube (you should now have two), and Neloth tells you the water is rising; you must take care. Slay the spiders that have emerged behind you, then head back to the workshop chamber and retrieve the Control Cube you left in the blue pedestal there. This raises the water level even more, which allows you to proceed into the next chamber. Head south toward the gold door.

► Dwemer Control Cube Total: 3

Once inside, turn right (west) and proceed through the collapsed passage. If you can't reach the door on the far side, double-check to make sure you have all three Cubes—the water level will only be high enough if you have all of them. Beware of Spheres and Dwarven Ballistas in the subsequent chamber, and the waiting Centurion as you find the next Control Cube in a rubble-filled alcove to the north. Take it!

► Dwemer Control Cube Total: 4

You may wish to deal with the automatons here before taking this Cube, since the rising water level makes the fight much more difficult. In particular, it's worth preemptively attacking the Centurion, who normally activates only after you've taken the Cube.

CAUTION

If you didn't attack the Centurion, he emerges as soon as you take the Cube...right as the room begins to flood! Hurry up the stairs to the west, climb to the upper balcony, and finish off the Centurion and any remaining automatons.

Then place a Cube in the red control switch, lowering a bridge and allowing you to escape this chamber. Head down and open the double doors leading back to the Great Chamber.

► Assault on the Aqueduct

Quite a haul! The last Cube you need lies beyond a door on the Great Chamber's north side, but to access it, you must drain the entire room. Place a Cube on each of the pedestals and leave them there. A small group of Dwarven Automata will emerge behind you; defeat them, then follow Neloth down the spiraling ramps.

► Dwemer Control Cube Total: 2

From the boiler platform, you can travel south or north. The southern ruin contains a Sphere to battle and another blue control pedestal. Insert a Cube, lowering the water level, and head down the ramp to a ground-level door with a red pedestal.

Open the door with your last Cube, claim the items from a chest inside, and optionally wander the floor of the chamber for a second chest [Apprentice]. Then retrieve your Cube from the southern ruin before continuing.

On the chamber's northern side, attack the two Ballistas with Neloth's help. Then place a Cube into the red control switch, sliding open the gate to the Nchardak Aqueduct.

activator in the overlook, so that's your next target. All three gold bridges must be lowered to reach it.

TIP Well...not necessarily. If you have the Whirlwind Sprint Shout, you can sprint across the channel without lowering any of the bridges. This allows you to enter a secret chamber to the right of the overlook (which is otherwise sealed when you begin fiddling with the bridge controls). A chest awaits here.

This is achieved by some reasonably straightforward deduction: Locate the three red pedestals above the entrance corridor, heading up the ramp to find them. Activate the left pedestal, then the right one, to lower all three bridges. Then head back down to ground level to fight off the newly awakened Dwarven Spiders and Spheres. Follow Neloth, backing him up (or letting him take the bulk of the battering), slaying enemies as you go, until you cross all three bridges. At this point, Neloth moans again about the muck he's been wading through.

Head east up the stone steps and turn left (north), entering a balcony with a blue pedestal overlooking the entire chamber. Slot in and leave a Cube, lowering the water level below.

► Dwemer Control Cube Total: 1

Don't lose focus of your main goal: the gold door at the far (west) end of the chamber, accessible and visible now that the water has drained. Open it using the red control switch, and head into the short corridor beyond. Beware the floor plate that triggers a wall trap, then bypass the rotating blades by heading around the column to your left. Activate the red control switch to open the gold gate, and claim your last Cube! Stand to the side when you do, or you'll be struck by a flurry of darts!

► Dwemer Control Cube Total: 2

Swim back out to the main aqueduct chamber, which has once again become waterlogged. Neloth is thrilled that all five Cubes have been found, but you'll need to gather them all! Neloth has already pried the previous Cube from its pedestal to the east, so swim under the three red pedestals and head south into the Great Chamber.

TIP There are a couple of optional side chambers in the aqueduct. You can now swim up to the one on the east side of the overlook and use the red pedestal to claim a chest and other scattered items, including a Kagrumez Resonance Gem, which is necessary for Solstheim Side Quest: The Challenges of Kagrumez*.

► Kagrumez Resonance Gem

You also have a second chance to access the room to the west of the overlook. Reactivate the left and right bridge control pedestals to restore the bridges to their initial position, then swim into the newly opened side chamber to claim a chest.

► Retraction of the Contraption

Return to the Great Chamber and climb back to the upper level where the two blue pedestals are. Take one of the two Cubes, causing the water to rise but leaving it lower than the boiler platform. Speak to Neloth, and he hands over the Cube from the aqueduct. You now have all four Cubes needed to restart the boilers.

► Dwemer Control Cube Total: 4

Drop to the lower platform. There are four blue boiler control pedestals here, so insert your four remaining Cubes to finally restart the boilers. Suddenly, the giant gold drawbridge lowers, and an immense steam Centurion clanks over the bridge to engage you in battle. Fight it where you stand, or take advantage of the huge chamber to drop it from afar. The Centurion was guarding a small alcove with a treasure chest.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Release the book from the Dwemer contraption

◆ TARGET: Black Book, Nchardak Reading Room

TIP Is the Centurion giving you trouble? Then consider retreating to the room's upper level, where the four Dwarven Ballistas you might have noticed earlier are aimed directly at his path.

Quest Conclusion

Make sure all four boiler pedestals are activated (you shouldn't be carrying any Cubes), and follow Neloth up the elevator, riding it back to the Reading Room. If you've placed the Cubes incorrectly, Neloth will certainly tell you. If you've correctly placed the Cubes, Neloth tells you it worked and that steam is flowing to the room. He presses the button in the Reading Room, causing four shafts of light to illuminate the complex lock, and the contraption releases the tome! At last! Neloth deems you deserving of the first leaf through this book....

Into Apocrypha

NOTE This quest begins once you finish Dragonborn Main Quest: The Path of Knowledge, and you can complete most of it immediately. However, you must complete Dragonborn Main Quest: Cleansing the Stones in order to finish this quest.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Read the Black Book

◆ TARGET: Black Book, Nchardak Reading Room

Neloth urges you to read the Black Book that has risen from its seal. Approach and take the book from its stand. As you open the cover, a tendril grabs you by the throat, and you're transported into Hermaeus Mora's realm of Apocrypha. The dark Daedric Prince appears to you in this other-world, manifesting as black clouds of tentacles and eyes. This is Apocrypha, a realm where all knowledge is hoarded. After wondering whether you are clever or a coward, Hermaeus Mora disappears, leaving you to explore this plane of existence.

➤ Black Book: Epistolary Acumen

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn the hidden knowledge of "Epistolary Acumen"

◆ TARGET: Black Book: Epistolary Acumen, in Chapter IV

CHAPTER AND VERSE: BRAVING APOCRYPHA

Before braving the unspeakable horrors that lurk in this dim threshold, it is important to learn how to navigate the convoluted pathways and face dangers present here:

There are Scryes, which are small, plantlike tendrils with a floating ball-like seed. Activate these to further your progress; they open doors, elongate bridges, and reveal corridors. Search for these with thorough determination.

There are fonts, of both Magicka and Stamina. Activate these to quickly replenish either of these attributes, usually before or during combat. Learn to look for the blue (Magicka) and yellow (Stamina) orbs, and stand under or near a font to drain it. You can use each font only once during a given visit to Apocrypha.

The churning black tentacle sea extends to the horizon in Apocrypha. Sink into this swamp and you blink out of existence and find yourself back in Solstheim. Usually you don't want this to happen, as you can't die while in this realm, but it can be used to escape. However, you need to traipse back through the "chapters" of this realm to continue your progress. So watch your step! The tendrils that lurk near small ponds? They serve to whack and damage you. Avoid them.

The denizens of Apocrypha, Seekers and Lurkers, will fight to prevent your progress. Learn their weaknesses in the Bestiary (page 171). In addition, Wisp-Lanterns float through the fetid air, lighting pathways. They aren't usually necessary to locate or interact with (unless your path is in shadow and harmful, which occurs during some of the Black Book Side Quests. Find out more about those tasks on page 608.

Chapters: Most books have more than one chapter, and it is vital you find and "enter" each chapter to progress farther into this realm. There is usually no need to retreat to former chapters once you've explored them.

Also remember that normal rules may not apply here: Corridors may move and shrink or elongate. Platforms unfurl as if alive. Every black piece of furniture holds numerous books to add to your collection (occasionally including Skill Books), so be sure to search each one.

Chapter I: The Tunnel of Lore

Use either or both of the Magicka fonts, then activate the Scribe to lower the walkway ahead (west) of you. Time your approach so you can enter the moving tunnel of lore. Walk to the opposite end, through the flying pages, and wait for the tunnel to move right (north). Step off the tunnel and onto a promontory.

Once on the promontory, use the Stamina font, activate the Scribe, and watch a second walkway unfurl. Step back onto the moving tunnel, riding it along the edge (watching for tendrils) to the walkway. Step off, heading across (west) to an island, a Stamina font, and Chapter II.

Chapter II: Seeker and Destroy

Head north down the tunnel of pages to the Scribe. Activate it, which unfurls the tunnel walls, allowing you to step out into a medium-sized arena where you must fight a lurker and up to three Seekers. There are three Magicka fonts, which you can use during the battle to press your magical attacks; a Pod; and another Scribe.

TIP When fighting Seekers, remember to target the original Seeker first. Any additional Seekers he summons will disappear once you slay the original.

Activate the Scribe on the eastern wall below the third Magicka font, opening the gate to the west. Head up the stairs, claim the Stamina fonts, and then begin Chapter III.

Chapter III: Tunnels and Tendrils

You appear in a stepped chamber with columns of books arcing into the skies. Head across either of the small parallel bridges to the steps, where Seekers appear. There is a half-submerged Magicka font in the black ooze to the northwest. Climb the steps, slaying Seekers as you go (there are two or three to thwart).

At the top of the steps is a circular black pool and another Magicka font. Slay any remaining Seekers before venturing into the second circular platform, avoiding the mire and stepping onto the moving tunnel. Head along the tunnel to a Scribe to the south, which opens the adjacent door and elongates the tunnel ahead (south) of you.

Step past the piles of books, heading down the tunnel, turning left (east) and slaughtering Seekers as you go. At least two must be dispatched. Ignore Scribes and areas you can't access yet. As you continue east, the tunnel moves, allowing you to step north onto an unfurling platform and into another tunnel.

This tunnel has a Lurker to face (so you may wish to retreat a little as you battle it). Head north until the tunnel turns to the left, forcing you west to a Scribe you may have seen earlier. Activate it and a door opens, leading you through the tunnel you came from and to a Stamina font and a left (south) turn.

Avoid the tendril in the ruins of the reading room and continue south, passing a Magicka font and a host of Seekers. Concentrate on slaying the first ones you see to shorten the battle significantly. Pass by three more fonts—two Stamina (one above the book) and one Magicka—and open Chapter IV.

Chapter IV: Meeting Mora

Gather any Soul Gems from the nearby table and avoid the circular pool. Activate the Scribe, watching a giant cage in the center of this realm unfurl. Head across and approach Black Book: Epistolary Acumen. This summons the Keeper of Forbidden Knowledge! Listen to his introduction, answering him how you wish.

Although your answers can differ from respect to annoyance, this Hermaeus Mora knows why you have come. To this end, you are awarded with the second Word of Power.

► Word of Power: Mind, Bend Will

NOTE Have you met this prince during Daedric Quest: Discerning the Transmundane? Then he recognizes you, although this doesn't affect your tasks.

But this is not enough; you must seek the final Word of Power in order to face Miraak. Hermaeus Mora will help you, but he has a price. Answer however you wish, but your fate remains intractably linked to your new master.

Miraak has served him but grows restless under his guidance. In exchange for the final Word of Power, Mora demands the secrets of the Skaal. Answer however you wish, but the task is clear: the Skaal shaman must be sent to him.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Storn

◆ TARGET: Storn, Skaal Village

With that, Hermaeus Mora departs from your vision, and three glowing globes emanate from the open book. Each holds a special power for you to wield. Take the one you wish, then read the book (here or in your inventory) and head back to Solstheim. The powers are as follows:

- Dragonborn Force (your Unrelenting Force Shout does more damage and may disintegrate enemies)
- Dragonborn Flame (when your Fire Breath Shout kills an enemy, a fire wurm emerges from their corpse to fight for you for 60 seconds)
- Dragonborn Frost (your Frost Breath Shout encases foes in ice)

Secrets of the Skaal

Back in the Nchardak Reading Room, Neloth is most interested in what you've been up to. Answer however you wish, as the Dark Elf wonders how you managed to acquire such a bargain for the Daedric Prince's help. You can learn more lore from Neloth at this point, after which you should leave via the gold door to the northwest.

Once outside, your plans of traveling to Skaal Village are halted temporarily by the arrival of the monstrous dragon Krosulhah, sent by Miraak to devour you. With Neloth's help, and the wide platform for the beast to land on, it shouldn't present too much of a problem.

Make your way back to Skaal Village, where you find Storn Crag-Strider kneeling in front of his hut. Speak to him, and mention your conversation with Hermaeus Mora (or as the Skaal call him, "Herma-Mora"). You can:

Mention the deity told you he would teach you the final word of Miraak's Shout. This advances the quest.

Ask what the "secrets of the Skaal" are.

Ask why the Skaal refer to him as "Herma-Mora."

Storn Crag-Strider doesn't know whether he has the strength to face the Demon of Knowledge:

If you haven't completed Dragonborn Main Quest: Cleansing the Stones, he mentions that not all of the stones have been restored. You cannot continue until you finish that quest.

If you have completed Dragonborn Main Quest: Cleansing the Stones, he mentions that the Tree Stone (atop the Temple of Miraak) is still corrupted, but the other five Stones have been restored. He may have the strength and asks for the Black Book. Give him this book in dialogue.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Wait for Storn to read the book

Quest Conclusion

Freya calls on her father to reconsider, as she feels he isn't strong enough, but the old man tells her not to fear for him, as the All-Maker laid this path for him to follow. You aren't sure what to make of this, but once the book is opened, Storn is immobilized by piercing tentacles. Hermaeus Mora appears and thanks you for delivering the gift he requested. He fulfills his end of the bargain, and after tossing Storn's corpse onto the snow, he grants you the final Word of Power!

Storn's Sacrifice

NOTE This quest begins once you finish Dragonborn Main Quest: The Gardener of Men. Alas, there is no way to begin this quest without the sacrifice of Storn.

The Skaal aren't a happy bunch now that their elder shaman has been slain. They distrust you and won't offer you their quests or favors until you've finished this quest.

CAUTION

◆ OBJECTIVE: Unlock your "Bend Will" Shout

◆ OBJECTIVE: Read "Waking Dreams"

◆ TARGET: Your inventory

As the rest of the Skaal villagers look on incredulously, Freja kneels beside her father's corpse. It falls to you to prove his death was not in vain. First, unlock your "Bend Will" Shout by accessing the Magic > Shouts > Bend Will menu option. Spend a Dragon Soul (or two) to fully unlock this Shout. You need not equip the Shout yet, but you do need to expend a Dragon Soul. Ready yourself for a long and dangerous journey. And then, when you're ready to face Miraak in Hermaeus Mora's world, read Black Book: Waking Dreams from your inventory.

TIP No Dragon Souls? Then return to Skyrim, locate a dragon at one of the many dragon mounds or lairs, and slay it.

The same general advice on Apocrypha (located on page 598) is of value this time, too.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Reach Miraak's Temple

◆ TARGET: Chapter VI, Word Wall

TIP This world is full of forbidden knowledge; don't forget to search each of the black stone tables for interesting lore books (and occasionally skill book) as you go.

Chapter I: The Word of Lore

Waking Dreams returns you to an area of Apocrypha you visited once before, where you heard Miraak mock you while you knelt and could not move. Check the table to the south for a trio of books. There's also a pod to open along the left and right (east and west) walls. Scan a second table for a Soul Gem, and then stride north, passing two Magicka fonts, and open Chapter II.

Chapter II: Preferred Reading—Boneless Limbs

Climb the first set of stone steps, watching for a Seeker or two to materialize around or behind you. Check the nearby table for a book before ascending farther and heading left (north) around the edge of this large, cylindrical chamber—Miraak's Tower. Pass the table with the Heavy Armor Forging Skill Book and around to a small bridge to your left (south). There are also some steps not yet elongated into a staircase position. At this point you may wish to look up: You've got some climbing to do!

► Heavy Armor Forging (Smithing Skill Book)

Cross the bridge and climb the stairs to the plinth that holds a cracked and ancient book called Boneless Limbs. This is vital to your progress, so take it. Optionally read the short rhyme inside:

A writhing mass of heaped appendage
Slipping grasp the squirming slick
Extend the reach to touch the face
Burn the mind, reveal the quick

Taking this book extends the steps at the initial side of the bridge, so cross over, head up the steps to the north, and out the open archway doors to view a vast ocean of filth. Turn right (northeast) and begin Chapter III.

► On Apocrypha: Boneless Limbs

Chapter III: Preferred Reading— Delving Pincers and Prying Orbs

Enter the tunnel that leads roughly northeast, passing a door to your right that you can't open yet. The corridor splits to a left and right route with two or three Seekers that appear and a couple of pools with whipping tentacles to dodge. There are two Magicka fonts if you need them, and both corridors merge at some steps up to a platform and a table with Song of the Alchemists (Alchemy Skill Book). Turn around, and on a stone plinth lies another ancient book called Delving Pincers. Inspect this book for its strange poem:

Crushing razors, hollow shells
That snap, that twitch, that cinch and rend
To hold the subject, bodily,
'Til mind blows soft and life meets end

➤ Song of the Alchemists (Alchemy Skill Book)

➤ On Apocrypha: Delving Pincers

Retrace your steps along the corridor (southwest), to the book that leads back to Chapter II. Don't read it, but instead look left (southeast) as the previously closed door opened when you took the ancient book. Step inside and activate the Scrye. This stretches out the corridor ahead of you. Head past a Magicka font, then another, stopping at the junction to inspect a table containing Catalogue of Weapon Enchantments (Enchanting Skill Book) and other books. Pass a Stamina font, and head right (southwest), back into Miraak's tower chamber.

➤ Catalogue of Weapon Enchantments (Enchanting Skill Book)

You're a level above on a series of crisscrossing platforms. Head left (south), opening a pod and activating a nearby Scrye, which opens a door to the northwest (this leads to a small alcove with a vessel you can search for items).

Now head along the main bridge platform, moving south and then right, passing a pod to a plinth with a Magicka font and another ancient tome. Remove Prying Orbs from its plinth, reading its strange inscription:

What takes the world in lightened sense
Can also seek the outward gleam
They rob the all of essence to Report the nothing they have seen

Removing the book and pocketing it opens a gate in the western part of the chamber. After a Magicka and Stamina font, you reach Chapter IV.

➤ On Apocrypha: Prying Orbs

Chapter IV: Preferred Reading— Gnashing Blades

From your high position above a multitude of steps and shifting tunnel walls, turn right (west) and head down the steps, pausing to grab at the Stamina font above you. Directly in front of you is a low balcony fence, below which is a second Stamina font; access that from the top of the steps too. Then descend on either side, facing down two or three Seekers as you go. Don't forget a pod on a southwest platform.

Head past the black table and the selection of books, then to the lower ground and a tattered banner. Enter the tunnel to the south, moving around the long left curve to a junction with a black table and two very long passages ahead (east) and right (south). The tunnel ahead with the Magicka and Stamina fonts retracts as you move down it, forcing you right, where a similar retraction occurs. Backtrack to the initial tunnel; it has turned to the opposite (south) direction, allowing you to move into an open area to face two more Seekers and traverse a stepped area to the west.

Climb the steps, passing two tables (one houses some scrolls) and a Magicka font near your fourth and final ancient book, nestled on a plinth (access it from up here). Grabbing Gnashing Blades opens a new path. Before you head down it, partake in a swift reading:

Bone extrusions gash and grind
In moistened depths of smacking heat
While tearing flesh from averse bone
The body while prepares to eat

➤ On Apocrypha: Gnashing Blades

Move down the steps and head right (southeast) into a newly opened tunnel. This ends in a junction with an alcove to your right (south) with two black tables and a corridor that expands when you enter it, near two additional tables with more books to leaf through. Move ahead (east) down the long corridor to a pair of Stamina fonts and a pod. Continue down the left turn and into another chamber with a Stamina font under a walkway.

Avoid the black tentacles as you head northwest across the ground bridge, and engage two or three Seekers on the initial stepped balcony. Pass a black table, working your way along an upper bridge heading south and up more steps to a Scrye, which maneuvers a tunnel down below. Descend and enter the tunnel (heading east). Go down the long left curve past a small tentacle pool and up into a Lurker-summoning chamber. As the name suggests, one of these beasts is summoned as you near the circular black ooze in the middle.

Aside from the Lurker to slay, there's a Scrye in the northwest corner of the chamber that opens a cubbyhole with a vessel and black table in an adjacent corridor farther northwest (head around the corridor entrance to access it). Just before that cubbyhole is a second Scrye. Activate that and the chamber's main door to the north swings open. Flee if you're having trouble killing the Lurker, or slay the horror before proceeding. At the end of the corridor to the north is a Magicka font and access to Chapter V.

Chapter V: The Penultimate Chapter

You are farther up in Miraak's Tower. Begin by siphoning the Magicka font near the open book, before following the corridor up the steps, past a Stamina font, and out onto the upper walkways of the central tower chamber. Concern yourself with two immediate problems:

Slay the three or four Seekers.

Don't fall off the walkways around the edge or middle of this chamber!

Once you're successful with this plan, you can inspect the room at your leisure. The plinth in the central spine of the chamber houses access to Chapter VI. You need to access it by placing each of the four Apocrypha Books on their correct pedestals. Simply read the clues from the books and the books' names and lay the tome on the image best associated with each book.

The pedestal with the fishlike gaping maw is closest to you. Place "Gnashing Blades" here.

The pedestal with the two claws is nearby. Place "Delving Pincers" here. Expect Seekers to attack at this point.

The pedestal with the mass of writhing tentacles is opposite the entrance. Place "Boneless Limbs" here.

The pedestal with the strange evil fishlike eye is the last of the plinths to find. Place "Prying Orbs" here.

TIP If you've placed the books on the correct pedestals, the opening to Chapter VI glows green. If not, remove the books and try again. When you're ready for the final chapter, head to Chapter VI and open it.

NOTE It is possible to have opened Black Book: Waking Dreams during Dragonborn Main Quest: The Temple of Miraak and completed all the chapters up to this point as soon as you receive the book. If you did this, you resume your journey at Chapter VI.

Chapter VI: Bending the Will of Sahrotaar

Exit via a small double corridor leading to a single tunnel. Grab The Art of War Magic (Destruction Skill Book) from the black table as you go. You emerge onto a large exterior platform amid the unspeakable ocean, bereft of life until you pass two Stamina fonts. Investigate two more and the curved stone edifice at the opposite end. This is a Word Wall!

► The Art of War Magic (Destruction Skill Book)

Approach the Word Wall and defeat the two Seekers that are summoned to prevent your progress. Learn the powerful new Thu'um, part of the Dragon Aspect Shout, and your objective updates.

► Word of Power: Dragon Aspect

TIP This Shout is extremely powerful and well worth fully unlocking. Consult page 48 for the locations of the other Words to this Shout, if you wish.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Use the "Bend Will" Shout to tame Sahrotaar

◆ TARGET: Sahrotaar, Chapter VI

The moment you absorb this Shout, the mighty serpent dragon Sahrotaar swoops down to attack! Bellow the full Bend Will Shout (all three Words of Power) at the beast, and he lands, drops his head submissively, and offers to carry you to Miraak. Climb aboard and prepare to face your nemesis!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat Miraak

TIP This is it! It's worth being well prepared for the forthcoming battle. You can even remove yourself from this realm, then reread Waking Dreams and start back at Chapter VI if you're missing a key piece of killing equipment.

Chapter VI: First and Last and Always

NOTE When riding a dragon, you can lock on to a nearby target and attack it with magic. You can also command the dragon to attack your target. Fast-Travel while riding the dragon by using your world map (if in Solstheim or Skyrim). For more detailed information on maneuvering a dragon, please consult page 108 of this guide.

You have a brief flight to reach the pinnacle of Miraak's Tower. During this time, you are free to attack the various outcrops with Seekers and Lurkers within the unspeakable ocean. Remember you can:

Lock on to a target and fire at it using your dragon's ranged attack and your own ranged strikes.

Switch targets and command your dragon to swoop in and attack a target.

After some one-sided razing, your mount glides toward a deranged high tower of epic dimensions and lands at the summit.

Miraak spits furious verbal bile at his disloyal mount as you land on the platform, then turns his attention to you. Whether it is the First Dragonborn or the Last Dragonborn, only one shall survive the epic battle at the summit of Apocrypha!

After remarking that you are both here in your full power, he declares that he will be free of Hermaeus Mora once and for all. He calls the mighty dragons Kruziikrel and Relonikiv to his side, and the titanic struggle begins!

Initial Preparations

Prior to facing your nemesis, you must understand the magnitude of the foe you're about to face:

A Heavy Inventory: Miraak is formidable, so you should have stocked up on Health, Magicka, and Stamina potions before proceeding into this realm.

A Poisonous Preamble: Although powerful, Miraak is still human and can be harmed by poisons. Paralysis will not affect him, but damage-health poisons are an excellent way to increase your melee damage.

Roll Out With Your Scroll Out: The black tables throughout the previous chapters of Apocrypha included several Fast Healing scrolls that may come in handy during the fight.

Know Your Scroll: That collection of scrolls you probably aren't using or were saving for the perfect battle? Bring them along! Use any ritual or summoning scrolls (such as Scrolls of Fire Storm, Blizzard, or Dragonhide) you've been hoarding.

Secrets of the Skaal: Before entering Apocrypha for your final battle with Miraak, visit the All-Maker Stones you freed from his influence during Dragonborn Main Quest: Cleansing the Stones. Their powers are formidable and can give you an edge in the battle against him.

Long Flight to the Summit: There's no rush to reach the top of the tower and face Miraak. The Bend Will Shout you just used on Sahrotaar has a very long cooldown time, so letting your mount meander and take a longer path to the tower will give you some time to recover.

Battle Tactics: Drawing First Blood

Raising Your Defenses: Just prior to the battle commencing, Miraak takes a few moments to inflict a few verbal jabs. Use this chatter to your advantage by preparing your defenses; ideally strike with your most powerful spell, sneak attack, or power attack before he can react.

Dart in Before Dragon Aspect: One of Miraak's many powers is his Dragon Aspect Shout, which also raises his defenses. Striking with an excellent hit before he utilizes it is extremely beneficial.

Showdown on Sahrotaar: You may wish to ride your mount during this battle. If you primarily cast spells, this is an excellent way to avoid receiving damage for a while. Employ Chain Lightning or Fireball spells, and rain down destruction from the sky. Also remember to use Shouts while riding your dragon.

Battle Tactics: Miraak's Attacks

The First Dragonborn is a real fiend when it comes to battle and has several attacks at his disposal. Look for the following tactics and avoid them as the fight progresses:

Dragon Shouts: He can use several Shouts (1) during battle; expect to be struck by fire and avoid whirlwinds, and watch him speed away using quick Whirlwind Sprint bursts. He obviously has two tamed dragons to intermittently fight (and provide life force) for him.

Spellcasting: In addition to his powers as Dragonborn, Miraak is a former Dragon Priest, which makes him a mage of considerable power. Prepare yourself for his Lightning Bolts (2) and the tentacles (3) he summons from his staff. Both are highly damaging.

Dragon Soul Sucking:

Use all the different possible attacks listed on these pages as combat progresses. Once you've whittled his health down, he becomes ethereal, moves to the center of the summit, summons one of his dragons (4), and absorbs its soul, replenishing his health again! Relonikiv, Kruziikrel, and finally Sahrotaar are used for this purpose, effectively forcing you to fight him in four epic bouts.

Battle Tactics: General Combat Cunning

Dragon Soul Stealing: As Miraak is healing every time one of his dragons is sacrificed here, you can simply remove these health reserves by killing the dragons before focusing on him. This is advisable, as dragon-slaying is easier than facing Miraak (up to) four times! Note that Miraak kills the dragons himself when they have very little health left, so let him waste all three dragons first.

Distraction Action: Make sure Miraak is as distracted as possible. Dividing his attention by using one of the following techniques:

Summoned from Sovngarde: Complete Main Quest: Dragonslayer before this battle, then utilize your Call of Valor Shout, summoning one of the three ancient Nord heroes (Gormlaith Golden-Hilt, Felldir the Old, or Hakon One-Eye) for 60 seconds of brutal, ethereal help.

Atronach Attack: With the necessary spell or staff, call upon a Flame, Frost, or Storm Atronach or thrall to help take down your foe.

Land, Sea, and Skies: Deft movement across the entire summit is helpful. Use Waterwalking to avoid damage from the tentacle pools, allowing you to reach Miraak if he decides to retreat onto the ooze. You have this ability naturally in Vampire Lord form, but you can also drink the (rare) potions of Waterwalking or equip Ahzidal's Boots of Waterwalking (from Kolbjorn Barrow) to cross right over.

A Good Book: Between his spells and shouts, Miraak has several long-range attacks. Hide behind the statues or piles of books to avoid them, when you aren't attacking.

A Brief Respite: Miraak becomes ethereal when sprinting away during the fight. When he calls down a dragon to consume its soul, this is a great moment for you to heal up as well.

Battle Tactics: Use Your Thu'um, Dragonborn!

Relying on sword swipes, arrows, or magic isn't going to convincingly turn the tide of this battle. Why not rely on the great power you were bestowed with?

Dragon Aspect: This is a powerful Shout, and (at the highest level) the Ancient Dragonborn it summons is very effective at distracting Miraak.

Marked for Death: This is another excellent choice if you want to lower Miraak's defenses for a short time so you can wallop him with stronger hits from your other attacks.

Slow Time: This allows you to inflict some damage exceedingly fast and is helpful if you're engaging in precise shots from the air while mounted.

Become Ethereal: This can be useful when you're trying to charge in or retreat. If you simply speak the first of the Words, the lowest level of this Shout has a very short recharge time as well.

Dragonrend: When employing the "Dragon Soul Stealing" technique mentioned earlier, Dragonrend enables you to force one of Miraak's minions to land, making it much easier to focus your attacks and take it out quickly.

Quest Conclusion

After an incredibly difficult battle, when Miraak finally yields, the defeated Dragonborn is plucked from the central pool by one of Hermaeus Mora's black tentacles. Skewered and racked by the Daedric Prince's power, Miraak withers on this vine as he's told a new Dragonborn is in service of the dark master. Miraak's flailing corpse is desiccated, until only a broken husk lies on the ground. At this point, the quest ends and you can claim your just rewards:

- Dragon Souls
- Miraak's Sword
- Miraak
- Miraak's Boots
- Miraak's Gloves
- Miraak's Robes
- Miraak's Staff

Miraak is the mask the deceased Dragonborn was wearing. See Solstheim Side Quests: Masks of the Acolyte Priests* (on page 662) for more information on this and other masks.

Postquest Activities

After gathering Miraak's equipment, approach the Black Book: Waking Dreams in the center of the summit. Read this tome, and green light encircles you. Look around, and you'll see shimmering images of the Skill Constellations arrayed around you. You can approach any of these, activate them, and expend a Dragon Soul to clear all of the perks in a particular Skill Constellation. You can:

Recover all of the Perk Points you have spent in a single constellation, then spend them elsewhere.

Do this as many times as you wish, as long as you have enough Dragon Souls.

Note that you can only expend a Dragon Soul if the constellation actually has perks in it! Why would you want to do this? To rearrange your perks to best fit your play style so that you can spend perks in rarely used skills more wisely.

When you are ready, read the Black Book a second time to return to Solstheim. Provided you are on Solstheim, you can return here to rearrange your perks at any time, just by reading Waking Dreams from your inventory.

Back in Skald Village, meet with Freya and she tells you the Tree Stone is free again (it is located within the Temple of Miraak, where you first found her). The Oneness of the land is restored. Speak to Freya, being as kind or malicious as you like when speaking of her father. She has some prudent advice regarding your new master, too. The rest of the village, satisfied that you have honored Storn's memory, will offer you their quests and favors again.

SOLSTHEIM SIDE QUESTS

OVERVIEW

Optimal Quest Start

Most Side Quests are available from the moment you begin your adventure on Solstheim, although it is wise to learn if there are prerequisites to complete first. As Side Quests aren't usually linked to one another (with a couple of exceptions), you can start them at your leisure.

NOTE Cross-Referencing: Do you want to see maps and learn more about the traps, non-quest-related items, collectibles, crafting areas, and other important rooms of note in every location during these quests? Then cross-reference the location you travel to with the information on that location contained in this guide's Atlas.

Available Quests

There are 27 Solstheim Side Quests, which originate on the isle. There are also several Solstheim Regional Activities, which are detailed in the next chapter. Aside from the exceptions detailed below, most of these quests are independent of one another and can be completed whenever you encounter them.

NOTE Side Quest: The Ebony Warrior is part of the main Side Quest chapter, found on page 430.

◆ OBJECTIVES: Get the Staff, Talk to Neloth

MINOR SPOILERS

You Just Can't Get the Staff These Days

NOTE This is one of many quests you complete by visiting and speaking to Neloth in his Tel Mithryn tower. For a complete list, consult page 606.

When you speak to Neloth—the Dark Elf magic practitioner you partnered with during Dragonborn Main Quest: The Path of Knowledge—he may mention he's something of a collector of magical staffs. Especially the ones made by the legendary Azra Nightwielder. If you can retrieve one of these staffs, which Neloth's scrying has uncovered, he'll reward you with one of his own making.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Get the staff

◆ TARGET: Azra's Staff [random], from [a random dungeon]

Most Enchanting

Onward! Neloth pinpoints the location of the staff, and it's up to you to find it. Unlike many of the other quests that take place on Solstheim, Azra's Staff may be located in any dungeon, either here or in Skyrim. In this example, in order to find Azra's Staff of Turning, we traveled all the way from Tel Mithryn to the Reach and explored deep into the Falmer cave system known as Gloomreach. Once the (random) staff has been secured, your quest updates.

► Azra's Staff [random]

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Neloth

◆ TARGET: Neloth, Tel Mithryn

Quest Conclusion

Journey back to Tel Mithryn and find Neloth in his epic fungal growth. Present the staff to him and he's most enchanted with it. To show his appreciation, he requests you take one of his staffs from his personal collection, and the quest concludes.

► Staff [random]

Postquest Activities

You can repeat this quest numerous times, assuming Neloth requests your help. Remember that Neloth is particularly taken with staffs and has constructed a Staff Enchanter to further augment these items. For information on creating your own staffs, refer to page 75.

Terrible Secrets

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn the Black Book's hidden knowledge

You are transported into a partial void, where the floating living lanterns hover and cast their light. They are important here, as the shadows are harmful to you. So head toward the steps and Magicka font when the light shines on your path. Climb the steps, search the pod, and activate the Scrye to open the door south.

◀ TIP Of course, you can simply use a torch, or the Candlelight or Magelight spells, to negate the effects of the darkness!

The route ahead features a sheer drop on both sides, limited movement, and harmful shadows. Run across as the light shines, pausing to slay two Seekers and a Lurker. Watch for tentacle ponds along the way. Some may wish to stand and fight. Others find it more prudent to run!

Quest Conclusion

Dash up the steps to a larger black pool, out of which a Lurker strides. Slay it if you wish, or dodge past, racing up to the pedestal containing the tome. There's also an adjacent vessel to ransack. Open the book, and you can select from among the following powers:

- Secret of Strength (Power attacks cost no stamina for 30 seconds)
- Secret of Arcana (Spells cost no Magicka for 30 seconds)
- Secret of Protection (You take half damage for 30 seconds)

Postquest Activities

Choose your power, then access the book to transport back to Solstheim.

The Big Dig

In the five Black Book quests, you must locate and read one of five archaic tomes that transport you to Hermaeus Mora's realm of Apocrypha. This particular book is hidden deep within Kolbjorn Barrow.

To reach this Black Book chamber, you must complete Solstheim Side Quest: Unearthed (see page 645 for the walkthrough for this quest). This involves the following tasks:

Fund all the phases of Ralis Sedarys's excavation (at a cost of 11,000 gold).

Slay all of the Draugr and uncover all the main chambers within Kolbjorn Barrow.

Face off against and defeat the Dragon Acolyte Priest Ahzidal.

Exit the chamber where you fought Ahzidal via the open sarcophagus in the southwest wall.

The chamber you must reach is a circular room with an effigy of Hermaeus Mora.

Reach the pedestal containing the Black Book, and read it. You are transported to Apocrypha.

➤ Black Book: Filament and Filigree

◆ OBJECTIVES: Learn the Black Book's hidden knowledge

MINOR SPOILERS

◆ Twilight at Tel Mithryn

In the five Black Book quests, you must locate and read one of five archaic tomes that propel you into Hermaeus Mora's realm of Apocrypha. This Black Book is part of Neloth's collection within his fungal tower at Tel Mithryn.

This Black Book is located within the Staff Enchanter room in the central tower. Neloth gives you the key to this room as your reward for completing Side Quest: Reluctant Steward (see page 637).

Unlock the room, reach for the Black Book on the Arcane Enchanter, and read it. You are transported to Apocrypha.

► Black Book: The Hidden Twilight

NOTE This is an area of Apocrypha that does not overlap with the part of the realm you visit during the Dragonborn Main Quests.

◆ In the Name of Mora

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn the Black Book's hidden knowledge

You begin near a raised stepped platform with two Magicka fountains. Head across to the north gate with another Magicka fountain and activate the Scribe. The gate swings open, enabling you to reach a second chamber with two Stamina fountains and a book to open Chapter II.

Enter the short corridor with a Magicka fountain at both ends, turn left (east) and then right (south). Pass another Magicka fountain, then turn left again to a wall. Follow the corridor around, passing another Magicka fountain, until you reach the large chamber of arches between book stacks, dimly illuminated by curled lights and a Stamina fountain.

Behind (southeast) the arches is a platform with liquid frothing underneath. However, it is safe to move across as you battle two or three Seekers. Eventually you reach a black table, a Magicka fountain, and a stepped platform with a

Stamina fountain and a ramped tunnel that leads up (north) to a Magicka fountain.

Turn right (east) at the fountain, peering across a sea of black ooze, and activate the Scribe. This moves two flapping bridge platforms up and down. Time your run so you leap and land on the platform when the ramp is up so you don't fall short. Jump across to the second ramp as it rises, and exit to a junction tunnel.

Head left (north) to reach a Magicka fountain, pod, black table, and dead end. Head right (south) to reach a Magicka fountain and open Chapter III. You appear in a confined book-clad area with Magicka and Stamina fountains. Head south into the large open area and take the ramp right (northwest) to the roof and a Scribe.

This elongates the steps back on the ground, allowing you to cross to the island, a Magicka font, and a battle with one or two Seekers. Go by the black tables and continue toward the opposite entrance, passing two Magicka fonts. Head into a courtyard with a central gated area and a lumbering Lurker to deal with.

Tackle the foe, grabbing Stamina from the nearby font if necessary. Back up into the previous chamber if you need to; then search the mazelike ground area. To the south through some narrow, book-stacked areas is a Stamina font and the book to open Chapter IV. This is optional but well worth exploring.

(Optional) Chapter IV is a simple cell-like chamber with one or two Seekers and a Magicka font. There is also a Scribe to activate, which opens a gate beyond the cell, in a corridor to the west. This corridor is accessible only if you reach Chapter V (below). Return to Chapter III.

Move up the ramped area, passing a Magicka font to an upper balcony with a Scribe that unlocks the gate room below. Head through to a Stamina font and steps up to a secondary platform ramp and second Scribe; this opens the main gate with the Magicka font just below you. Head past a Stamina font.

You enter a square-shaped tunnel area with a Seeker to slay. Simply continue east to a pod and the corridor elongates considerably, offering you Chapters V and VI to read. Head into Chapter V only if you've investigated

Chapter IV. Otherwise, read Chapter VI and you're poised to finish this quest.

(Optional) Chapter V is a single-cell room across from the one in Chapter IV. Pass the Magicka font, use the Scribe to open the door, and head left (west). There should be an open gate and Seeker here (if the gate is shut, backtrack to Chapter IV to open it). Slay the foe and inspect the pod and black table, which holds one of the best collections of Skill Books in the game. Then head back to Chapter III and open Chapter VI.

- Before the Ages of Man (Illusion Skill Book)
- 2920, Hearth Fire, v9 (Conjuration Skill Book)
- Breathing Water (Alteration Skill Book)
- Racial Phylogeny (Restoration Skill Book)
- A Hypothetical Treachery (Destruction Skill Book)

Aside from the Magicka font under the book, this is a straightforward path west to two more books marked Chapter VII and Chapter VIII. The former leads you to a sloping island with a couple of Seekers to finish, a Magicka font, and a Scribe to activate. This opens a gate platform in Chapter VIII. Head back to the book and open Chapter VIII.

A Seeker meets you in a cramped corridor. There's a Stamina font above the book and black table. Next, head out to a ramped platform and a large platform area with two Stamina fonts and two Lurkers to face. A Scribe opens the gate ahead (west) of you, and the bridge extends to the pedestal containing the Black Book and an adjacent vessel to ransack. Open the book, and you can select from among the following powers:

- Mora's Agony (Summons a field of writhing tentacles that poison foes)
- Mora's Grasp (Freezes the target between Oblivion and Tamriel for 30 seconds, making them immune to all damage)
- Mora's Boon (Fully restores your Health, Magicka, and Stamina)

Seeker of Knowledge

◇ OBJECTIVE: Learn the Black Book's hidden knowledge

You are transported into the partial void, where strange hovering lanterns flit across a long and dark corridor. They are important, as they provide light in this forsaken place, and the darkness harms you. Watch out for the tentacles in the small pond near the pod, then set off down the dark and blackened path heading roughly south.

TIP You can also use a torch, or the Candlelight spell, to negate the effects of the darkness!

Dukaan's Dark Secret

In the five Black Book quests, you must check out one of five ancient books that teleport you to Hermaeus Mora's realm of Apocrypha. This specific book is hidden deep within White Ridge Barrow.

Reach the Black Book chamber by navigating through White Ridge Barrow. If you require a walkthrough, consult Solstheim Side Quest: Spider Crafting*. You do not need to finish that quest, but you must complete the following tasks:

Enter the spider-filled entrance passage, and descend the spiral steps. Move through the grand hall and defeat more spiders and parasitical arachnids with their Bandit victims.

Head roughly south, maneuvering toward the White Ridge Sanctum entrance. Activate the door bar, enter another huge hall, and engage (or avoid) Merilar Rendas and his spider friends.

Continue south to an iron door, which leads to a grand crypt with a Word Wall and a Dragon Acolyte Priest named Dukaan. Defeat or avoid this foe, then claim the Word of Power for the Cyclone Shout.

The Black Book is on a pedestal on the chamber's opposite side (below where you entered).

Reach the pedestal containing the Black Book, and read it. You are transported to Apocrypha.

➤ Word of Power: Cyclone ➤ Black Book: The Sallow Regent

NOTE This is an area of Apocrypha that does not overlap with the part of the realm you visit during the Dragonborn Main Quests.

TIP Neloth, a powerful Dunmeri mage in the settlement of Tel Mithryn, may request you locate and return this book so he can make a copy. This is Solstheim Side Quest: Lost Knowledge. Although you miss out on a monetary reward, you can obtain this book without seeking Neloth out first.

Continue south to a second tentacle pond, and a pod, then turn west and walk up the sloping tunnel to a larger, partially lit chamber with stacks of books and a possible Spell Tome. There are also a few gems and scrolls to search for. A Seeker appears to block your path, after which you must move to a second tunnel (south) and ascend it.

This seems to lead to a dead end, but continue south and a platform uncurls, linking to a well-lit area with a black table and a possible Spell Tome. When the lights go out, head up the steps to the south, attacking (or running past) a Lurker and winding your way up to the highest platform.

Quest Conclusion

This splits into two platforms before merging again. These narrow bridges have Lurkers to attack or avoid (there are a total of three), before you head south and up to the final platform. Here you find a vessel and two black tables with assorted items (including another possible Spell Tome). But you're here for this Black Book: open it, and you can select from among the following powers:

- Seeker of Might (Combat skills are all 10% more effective)
- Seeker of Sorcery (All spells cost 10% less Magicka)
- Seeker of Shadows (Stealth skills are all 10% more effective)

Buried Beneath Bloodskal Barrow

In the five Black Book quests, you must find and leaf through one of five archaic tomes that transport you to Hermaeus Mora's realm of Apocrypha. This particular book is nestled deep within Bloodskal Barrow, which you access from Raven Rock Mine.

Reach the Black Book chamber by completing Solstheim Side Quest: The Final Descent (see page 622 for the walkthrough for this quest). You need to finish some of this quest by completing the following tasks:

Locate Raven Rock Mine and agree to help Crescius search for the secrets of his ancestors.

Descend to the bottom of the mine, and make your way through the long Draugr crypt.

This is Bloodskal Barrow; the Draugr-killing continues until you reach a grand basalt chasm.

Approach the sealed door, and use the power attacks of the Bloodskal Blade to open it.

Avoid the blade traps, then face off against and defeat the Dragon Acolyte Priest Zahkrisos.

Learn the Word of Power from the Dragon Aspect Shout at the Word Wall before leaving.

The chamber you must reach is a circular spiral stepped area with a small waterfall.

Reach the pedestal containing the Black Book and read it. You are transported to Apocrypha.

- Word of Power: Dragon Aspect
- Black Book: The Winds of Change

NOTE This is an area of Apocrypha that does not overlap with the part of the realm you visit during the Dragonborn Main Quests.

The great fetid seas of Apocrypha greet you. Focus on the path and head southeast, climbing the stepped platforms to your left as you turn east. Fight two or three Seekers as you go. Avoid the tentacle from the black pond as you reach a Scribe that opens a gate ahead (northeast) of you.

Head past a black table and a Magicka font, moving to a Stamina font, a black table, and a Scribe crammed together. The Scribe opens a second gate. Head southwest, engaging two more Seekers in the corridor beyond. Gather Magicka from a font as you continue south to a Scribe.

This opens a gate to the south, leading to a larger, open chamber with a ramp and a forming Lurker. Slay this atrocity, before or after you activate the Scribe to the west. There are two Magicka fonts to siphon here too. The Scribe on the ground elongates the steps. The Scribe atop the ramp opens the gate atop these steps.

Quest Conclusion

The gate allows access to the pedestal containing the tome and an adjacent vessel to ransack. Open the book and you can select from among the following powers:

- Scholar's Insight (Reading Skill Books gives you an extra Skill Point)
- Companion's Insight (Your attacks, Shouts, and destruction spells do no damage to your Followers)

Neloth, a powerful Dunmeri mage in the settlement of Tel Mithryn, may request you locate and return this book so he can make a copy. This is Solstheim Side Quest: Lost Knowledge. Although you miss out on a monetary reward, you can obtain this book without seeking Neloth out first.

Buried in Benkongerike

In the five Black Book quests, you must locate and pore over one of the strange books that whisk you into Hermaeus Mora's realm of Apocrypha. This specific book is hidden deep within Benkongerike.

Reach the Black Book chamber by weaving your way through Benkongerike. If you require a walkthrough, consult the Atlas entry for this cave complex and Draugr dungeon on page 1021. Here is a brief summary:

Enter the large snowbound cave chamber and slay Rieklings that await you. Then head west and north through the icy passages, avoiding Riekling traps and foes leaping out from their strewn items.

Maneuver east into the large cavern of rickety bridges, tearing through more Rieklings and leaving by the exit to the east. Watch for a final Riekling ambush before heading into Benkongerike Great Hall.

Move through the connecting passages and into the great hall, where a Bristleback-mounted Riekling Charger and a half-dozen infantry foes present a temporary problem. After you slay anything blue-skinned, head south to inspect the Nordic Puzzle.

Puzzle Solution: Ignore the pedestal with the handle (as you don't want to be struck by darts), and instead search the walls for petroglyphs corresponding to the pedestals below. The correct order, from left to right, is Hawk, Whale, Whale, and Serpent. The second petroglyph clue is missing; find it in a tent on the eastern upper ledge of this chamber.

Check the chest by the Word Wall, absorb the Cyclone Word of Power, then head east down a narrow tunnel and into a circular chamber where the Black Book awaits.

Reach the pedestal containing the Black Book, and read it. You are transported to Apocrypha.

Chapter and Perverse

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn the Black Book's hidden knowledge

Pass the two Magicka fonts, heading north to a Stamina font, east to another Magicka font and black table, and north to Chapter II. You appear facing a stepped platform. Head onto it, turn left (west), cross the bridge, and face off against a Lurker just beyond two more Magicka fonts, on the far part of the bridge.

Continue west to the double exit; there is a ramp on either side. Head north, passing two Magicka fonts, and open Chapter III first. You appear in a cagelike chamber. Slay the Seeker, inspect the pod on the black table and a possible Spell Tome before opening Chapter II again. Head south, to the Magicka font and Chapter IV.

Head north, through a stepped tunnel with a Magicka font, and pass two Stamina fonts as the tunnel opens to a stepped cathedral chamber without a roof. Beware of two Seekers as you solve the way to open the exit.

Puzzle Solution:

In the center is a locked area with a Scrye. Surrounding this are six raised antechambers and the exit:

Antechamber 1 (northeast): Stamina font and a Skill Book, Beggar (Pickpocket Skill Book).

Antechamber 2 (east): Locked gate and Scrye, accessed from Antechamber 5.

Antechamber 3 (southeast): Stamina font.

Antechamber 4 (southwest): Magicka font.

Antechamber 5 (west): Scribe outside, which opens the gate leading to a Magicka font and Scribe inside, which opens the gate to Antechamber 2.

Antechamber 6 (northwest): Magicka font.

Simply head to Antechamber 5, activate the outside Scribe to open the adjacent door, and go inside this antechamber to a second Scribe; this opens Antechamber 2. Head there to the next Scribe and activate that. The north gate of the central locked area opens. Enter here, with its four Magicka fonts, and activate the final Scribe. The steps to the south extend, allowing access past two more Magicka fonts to a vessel and Chapter V.

Enter Chapter V, and head down the main corridor, peering ahead at what seems to be the Black Book at the end of this long tunnel. However, when you reach the middle, near the two Stamina fonts, the tunnel ahead grinds to the left, forcing you east to a black pond and a Lurker fight!

After the battle, follow the exit corridor north and west, activating a Scribe and opening a gate that leads back into the main tunnel. Dash south again, and the same trick is performed; the tunnel grinds right this time, forcing you west to a chamber with a Stamina font and a second Lurker to battle.

Quest Conclusion

Follow the exit corridor north (passing a Stamina font) and east, back once more into the main tunnel. Trek south one last time, and the corridor allows you access to two Stamina fonts and the Black Book. Open the book, and you can select from among the following powers:

- Black Market (Summons a Dremora merchant to trade with you)
- Secret Servant (Summons a Dremora butler to carry your excess items)
- Bardic Knowledge (Summons a spectral drum that plays for you, increasing Stamina Regeneration for you and nearby allies)

MINOR SPOILERS

That Dunmeri wizard all the folks in Raven Rock think of as an uptight loony has a problem. You'll know this if you visit him once you finish Dragonborn Main Quest: The Path of Knowledge. Return to his tower in Tel Mithryn, and he exclaims, "Curse these heart stones!" Ask if there's a problem, and he asks if you're familiar with the Briarhearts. Neloth seems keen on furthering his knowledge regarding the briar seeds they use in place of their hearts. You're to examine one of these fierce warriors of the Forsworn. Neloth casts a memory trace spell on you so he doesn't have to rely on your puny descriptive verbiage; therefore, there's no need to take notes. You can:

Set off immediately.

Or ask where Briarhearts can be found. His description points you in the direction of the Reach.

Or ask what Briarhearts have to do with Heart Stones. His explanations don't help this quest.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Examine a Briarheart warrior

◆ TARGET: Briarheart, [any Forsworn redoubt], the Reach

A Briarheart out of Reach

NOTE This is one of many quests you complete by visiting and speaking to Neloth in his Tel Mithryn tower. For a complete list, consult page 606. Although randomly occurring, this quest usually becomes available once you complete Solstheim Side Quest: Heart Stones a couple of times.

Harvesting the Heart

There are no Forsworn on the isle of Solstheim. This means you need to travel back to Skyrim and trek west to the mountainous Hold known as the Reach (Markarth is the capital). At this point, you need to find a Primary Location where Forsworn are active. The easiest way to do this is:

Locate the Reach section of the Atlas in this guide, on page 802. Then scour each of the Primary Locations, noting the dungeon type in the statistics: You're looking for areas that are referred to as "Forsworn Redoubts" or those with "Forsworn" listed as enemies. These are known locations where Forsworn are active. There are well over a dozen such settlements.

Or, you can simply travel to Bard's Leap Summit, Drudach Redoubt, Lost Valley Redoubt, or Red Eagle Redoubt. Any of those locations should have a Briarheart (and many other troublesome foes) ready to face you in combat. Kill one of these primitive abominations and examine the corpse. Choose to Harvest Briarheart, optionally picking up the Briar Heart.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Neloth

◆ TARGET: Neloth, Tel Mithryn

Quest Conclusion

Return to Neloth and tell him you've examined the Briarheart warrior. He extracts the memories from your mind and offers up a coin reward for your lengthy trek.

THE CHIEF OF THIRSK HALL

PREREQUISITES: None

RELATED QUESTS: Solstheim Side

Quest: Retaking Thirsk

LOCATIONS: Bujold's Retreat, Thirsk Mead Hall

CHARACTERS: Bilgemuck, Riekling, Riekling Chief

ENEMIES: Nord

◆ OBJECTIVES: Give Bilgemuck some meat, Return Bilgemuck to Thirsk, Talk to the Chief, Bring 10 Scathecrow to the Chief, Kill the Nords (7), Speak to the Chief, Defeat the Chief

The Mead Hall is overrun by Rieklings. However, unlike the more feral foes you may have encountered elsewhere on this island, they aren't immediately hostile. Don't attack; instead, follow the scout to the opposite (north) end of the hall. The Rieklings seem to have appropriated much of their basic, primitive lanterns and furniture, and on a makeshift throne sits a Riekling Chief. It is impressive that he's learned the common tongue of this province. He asks for your help. You can:

Ask who he is.

Inquire where they lived before moving here.

And wonder why they took over Thirsk.

You get mostly nonsense, but keep asking about the chief's talking habits, and the "conversation" meanders to the topic of "Bilgemuck." You figure out he's talking about an animal of his you need to coax back with some kind of meat. The quest and your first objective now begin.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Give Bilgemuck some meat

◆ TARGET: Bilgemuck

You. Fol. Low. Me.

NOTE Solstheim Side Quests: Retaking Thirsk and The Chief of Thirsk Hall are mutually exclusive — you cannot complete both. The last opportunity to change your mind is flagged in the following text.

Thirsk Mead Hall is an ancient and venerable structure built by the Nords and nestled in the snowy foothills to the east of the Temple of Miraak and the Beast Stone. Even if you've had previous (violent) dealings with Rieklings, providing you don't storm in with your weapons flailing, the scout on guard duty stops to beckon you inside. Converse with it (receiving the same message again). Open the door to Thirsk Mead Hall and enter.

Bilgemuck Prize Beast: Belifakathooooookawa

Exit the Mead Hall and turn left (north), wandering around the icy lake. On the edge of the snowy foothills, you'll encounter a bristleback named Bilgemuck. It's important not to launch an attack on this beast! Instead, speak to the animal and coax it to follow you with a piece of meat.

This can be any type of meat in the "Food" category of the inventory that begins on page 165. For example, chicken breast, mammoth meat, or raw beef are all fine to give Bilgemuck. If you're without meat, simply head to the northeastern shores of Solstheim, slay a Horker or two, and use Horker meat.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return Bilgemuck to Thirsk

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to the Chief

◆ TARGET: Thirsk Mead Hall

It takes only a single helping of meat to get Bilgemuck interested in you. He follows you back across the edge of the icy lake, to Thirsk Mead Hall. Ignore the congregation of Rieklings at the front door, and move around to the left (west) side of the structure and the remains of a forge that the Rieklings have reclaimed as an animal pen. Walk Bilgemuck into the pen and then head back inside the hall to chat to the chief again.

Tell the chief you brought back his animal, and he's pleased. Probably. It's difficult to decipher his words, although he does immediately request you bring him "two hands of redgrass" for a "dance" they have planned. He hands over a sample to encourage you (and so you know what you're looking for).

➤ Scathecrow

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring 10 Scathecrow to the Chief

◆ TARGET: Scathecrow, along the eastern coast

◆ Karoo Taray Pelfrik?

Your hunt for Scathecrow is relatively straightforward: Head east toward the coast, moving to Bujold's Retreat. There are a couple of plants at the base of the rocky path. Turn south (as the northern coast is bereft of these plants), and wander into the Retreat. Ignore the moaning Nords and harvest any Scathecrow you see, slowly scanning the coastal path from here, toward the half-sunken ruins of Nchardak. There are more than ten plants to find in this particular stretch of coastline.

NOTE Or, you can Fast-Travel to Raven Rock and do some weeding in the vicinity of Garyn and Milore Ienth's farm grounds; there are eight plants here and more along the main thoroughfare. You can also buy them from alchemists.

Check your Items > Ingredients menu to keep count of the Scathecrow plants you've gathered, as the quest doesn't update when ten are found. However, once you've plucked enough, return to Thirsk Mead Hall, passing the gathering of Rieklings ranting in their own strange tongue, and revisit the chief once more. Inform him that you've been successful, and he animatedly claims you will soon be "tribe-kin." But there's one more task to complete first: the killing of "bad Nords."

The "bad Nords" in question are the moping folk down at Bujold's Retreat, who were unceremoniously kicked out of this very hall by the Rieklings you serve. It is time to add injury to insult and wipe them off the face of Solstheim. Are you game? You simply need to answer "Let's go!" to begin.

Wait! If you agree to side with the Rieklings, you have chosen to forgo Solstheim Side Quest: Retaking Thirsk and the Regional Activities: Thirsk Mead Hall (see page 672). Pick a side, as there's no turning back after beginning your attack.

CAUTION

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the Nords (7)

◆ TARGET: All Nords in Bujold's Retreat

◆ No More Bad Nords. Then Tribe-Kin.

The chief waddles out of the hall with purpose. Follow him and watch as he riles up his tiny troops for the forthcoming massacre. After his battle planning, your objective updates, and you're free to join in the mayhem. Follow the Rieklings as they trot east down the rough path to the water, and turn right (south).

Attack! Or, if you wish, stay away! You can view the battle and get your hands as bloody as you wish, although every Nord in the camp is hostile. Their leader is Bujold, but anyone bearded or carrying rudimentary armor is fair game. Obviously, you can tackle each Nord in any way you wish, but defeating them when they're already engaged with a Rieklings friend keeps you from harm. The fight shouldn't be too demanding, and any Nords the Rieklings slay are also added to your death total.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to the Chief

◆ TARGET: Thirsk Mead Hall

Quest Conclusion: Ah baa faroo!

Run back to Thirsk Mead Hall where the chief remains on his makeshift throne. As you approach, you can see he's worried. After explaining your victory, the chief seems even more agitated, and paranoia sets in. He reckons you want to be chief, and no matter what your response, he stands up to fight you.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat the Chief

After a reasonably one-sided slaughter, you should emerge victorious. Whether you wanted this title or not, you're now the new chief of Thirsk Mead Hall and this particular band of Rieklings!

Postquest Activities: Muwafathoo

Leadership of this motley band of degenerates has its privileges. You can speak with any of the remaining Rieklings and request they act as a Follower. Also, during combat when you're on Solstheim, up to three Rieklings may appear to assist you. These blue homunculi are brave but weak and stupid, so don't expect them to stand up to a difficult foe.

➤ Follower: Rieklings

NOTE Note there is a small (random) chance Rieklings may show up whenever you enter combat while outdoors; see World Interaction. Rieklings Rescue (page 683). In addition, Rieklings Followers use up the place in your "Animal Followers," so you can have one Rieklings and one "human-sized" Follower, but not a Rieklings and a dog, for example.

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Search for the treasure of Haknir Death-Brand, Learn more about the buried treasure, Use the Deathbrand Treasure Map to find the treasure, Explore Gyldenhul Barrow, Defeat Haknir Death-Brand

MINOR SPOILERS

Before the Hunt

On your hikes across Solstheim, you may hear about a fanciful treasure thought to be buried by pirates. There are several ways to begin this quest:

Read the book Deathbrand. There are many copies scattered around Solstheim: For example, in Tel Mithryn, there are two copies on shelves in Neloth's tower quarters; in Raven Rock, in The Retching Netch, there is a copy on a shelf in one of the north bedrooms.

Visit The Retching Netch in Raven Rock, and speak to Geldis the innkeeper about rumors. He mentions the coast is especially dangerous—there are a lot of Reavers about. He's heard they're searching for the treasure of Haknir Death-Brand, the pirate king.

Or, you can simply stumble upon Haknir's Shoal directly, just north of the Wind Stone, on the island's northeast shore.

➤ Book: Deathbrand

◆ OBJECTIVE: Search for the treasure of Haknir Death-Brand

NOTE Note that you can find the book if you're lower than Level 36, but this Miscellaneous Objective begins, and the following pirate encounters occur, only after you've reached this level.

"X" Marks the Spots

The first inkling that you've accidentally wandered into a Reaver treasure hunt occurs when you reach Haknir's Shoal. If you're quiet, you may hear a small group of Reaver Pirates speaking about the loot they've uncovered. They aren't willing to share it, though. Begin by engaging these four foes, ideally removing any long-range bowman threats first. Your main target is the Pirate Captain. Once the pirates are bleeding into the snow, you can claim their treasure chest. This prompts the following objective:

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn more about the buried treasure

◆ TARGET: Pirate Captain, Haknir's Shoal

To really begin the quest, you need to inspect the captain's corpse and retrieve the Deathbrand Treasure Map, which you can view in the Items > Misc Menu. Now the search for valuables can really begin. Inspect the map and you'll notice four "X" markings indicating possible locations for treasure chests. Fortunately, one is right where you are (and you may have already found it).

➤ Deathbrand Treasure Map

◆ OBJECTIVE: Use the Deathbrand Treasure Map to find the treasure

◆ TARGET: Haknir's Shoal and three Ancient Chest Secondary Locations

NOTE You can uncover the four chests in any order. They are presented in this guide as if you were taking a counterclockwise trek around the perimeter of Solstheim.

Treasure Chest: Haknir's Shoal

The first treasure chest has been dug out of the snow of Haknir's Shoal, not far from where you're currently standing. Locate the Ancient Chest [Expert], and pick the lock. Inside is a particularly fine helm:

➤ Deathbrand Helm

Treasure Chest: Mudcrab Tidal Pools

North of the Water Stone and south of Bristleback Cave is a windswept stretch of the coast. Among the tidal pools and Mudcrabs is a half-submerged ancient chest ([S.ND] Mudcrab Tidal Pools). Expect Riekings to swarm the Mudcrabs as you reach this frigid shoreline. Kill them all, join either side, and mop up survivors, or watch and slay the stragglers. Inside the chest are some gauntlets.

➤ Deathbrand Gauntlets

Treasure Chest: Bloodskal Copse

This is in a small natural harbor southwest of Bloodskal Barrow, northwest of Raven Rock. A small Reaver rowboat is moored near this copse of trees ([S.D] Bloodskal Copse). Defeat the three Reaver foes before prying the ancient chest [Adept] open with your lockpicks.

➤ Deathbrand Armor

Treasure Chest: Basalt Causeway

This is a tiny outcrop of basalt columns due west of Tel Mithryn, east of the mouth of the Harstrad River ([S.W] Basalt Causeway). Four or five Ash Spawn have already slain the two treasure hunters who uncovered the haul, and you may be joined in combat by a Burnt Spriggan or other wandering creatures. Fiddle with the lock of the ancient chest [Expert] and claim the boots inside.

➤ Deathbrand Boots

When you reach and open the fourth ancient chest, it also contains a key to open a remote barrow on the northeastern coast of Solstheim. Be sure to take the Gyldenhul Barrow Key to update the objective.

➤ Gyldenhul Barrow Key

◆ OBJECTIVE: Explore Gyldenhul Barrow

◆ TARGET: Bloodscythe, in Gyldenhul Barrow

◆ Haknir's Hideaway

The barrow in question is on a small island just east of Skaal Village. Wade or swim across to the barrow entrance, where two Reavers are waiting for you. Show them the error of their ways, and then approach the Gyldenhul Barrow door [Master]. This is a tough lock to crack without the key you just obtained!

While you can pick this lock before starting the quest, you won't get very far. You need the key to open the treasure room door inside.

This is either the smallest tomb in Solstheim, or a secret entrance requires your attention! Fortunately, it is the latter; check the corpse of the adventurer in front of you, and obtain the Torn Note. Read the note, which hints at a secret passage. The adventurer was correct; the tomb continues past the sarcophagus to the southwest, which is covered in Stalhrim deposits. Produce your Ancient Nordic Pickaxe, and chip away until you make a hole big enough to squeeze through.

➤ Torn Note

TIP No Ancient Nordic Pickaxe? Then temporarily halt this quest and obtain one. There are several to choose from:

Complete Solstheim Side Quest: A New Source of Stalhrim (see page 633), and free Baldor Iron-Shaper of the Skaal Village. He occasionally has one for sale.

Complete Solstheim Side Quest: Unearthed (see page 645), and take the unique Ancient Nordic Pickaxe called "Hoarfrost" from Ralis Sedarys.

Complete Solstheim Regional Activity: Favor for Glover Mallory (see page 669), and retrieve his Ancient Nordic Pickaxe from Crescius at the entrance to Raven Rock Mine.

Did you feel a stale breeze wafting? Head southeast toward the door, and open the double doors, entering the barrow treasure room. What a haul! Aside from armor, two chests, potions, precious stones, and weapons, there are numerous piles of Septims that total approximately 10,000 gold!

But be warned: the moment you touch the treasure, the portcullis behind you slams shut. It appears that Haknir's curse was no mere legend...

Open the second pair of iron doors and continue down a damp tunnel. What awaits you in the depths of this barrow?

➤ Gold (approx. 10,000)

Haknir Death-Brand: Leaving a Mark

The tunnel ends in a grand and eerie tomb chamber. As you edge toward the steps, and the ceremonial bier with the skeleton lying on it, a sword should catch your eye. Steel yourself, then take Bloodscythe from the altar. The moment you do, the doors to the chamber slam shut, and Haknir Death-Brand's ghost appears, urging you to join the dead!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat Haknir Death-Brand

➤ Bloodscythe

As the Battle Begins

Haknir Death-Brand is a considerable force of fury and anger. You must meet his prowess with cunning and weather this storm. His attacks come in five waves:

Wave 1: Haknir Attacks! First, you confront Haknir. He is tough, fast, well armed, and well armored. He wears the complete set of Deathbrand Armor and wields both Bloodscythe (which saps your health and armor) and Soulrender (which siphons your Magicka and destroys magical defenses). You do have one advantage, though—Haknir is at the opposite end of the room. Use the time it takes for him to reach you to hit with your most powerful attacks, and try to cut him down as quickly as possible.

Wave 2: A Ghostly

Crew. When Haknir's health falls below 70%, he disappears, and you face a swarm of weaker ghosts. Individually, the members of Haknir's crew are not difficult, but their sheer number can be a little overwhelming—two are generally in combat with you at all times, with a new one arising each time you cut down one of their companions.

Wave 3: Lieutenants

Unleashed. After you fend off his crew, Haknir reappears by the altar, accompanied by his two lieutenants, Garuk Windrime and Thalin Ebonhand. Focus your attacks on Haknir, as he warps out as soon as his health falls below 40%. Eliminate one of the lieutenants, then stop to heal and recover if you need to—this is your best opportunity to do so during the battle. Then finish off the other to continue.

Wave 4: A Motley Crew.

You then face a second wave of Haknir's crew. They're no more difficult than before, but you now fight three at a time instead of two. Followers or summoned allies are especially useful here to keep yourself from becoming surrounded and overwhelmed.

Wave 5: Haknir's Last

Stand. Finally, you face Haknir again in a fight to the death. Finish him off and claim both Soulrender and his immense hoard of treasure.

PREREQUISITES: Complete Dragonborn Main Quest: The Fate of the Skaal

MINOR SPOILERS

LOCATIONS: Skaal Village

CHARACTERS: Torkild Wild-Blood, Wulf Wild-Blood

◆ OBJECTIVES: Look for Wulf's brother Torkild, Examine Torkild, Return to Wulf

Blood Brother

After cleansing the Wind Stone during Dragonborn Main Quest: The Fate of the Skaal, return to the Skaal Village and locate Wulf Wild-Blood. He's usually stirring a cooking pot as the Horker meat dries on hooks around his stall, near the central well in the settlement. Oh, and he has only one eye. Wulf is First Hunter of the Skaal. You can:

Ask if he's able to train you to better use two-handed weapons, as he's an impressive Trainer.

Ask what else a First Hunter does or how long he's been First Hunter.

Inquire about any wisdom he can share about hunting or the type of game he hunts.

The conversation meanders to the topic of his brother Torkild, with whom Wulf used to share the hunt. But long ago, Torkild was lost, and Wulf fears he fell in among the werewolves. But he doesn't know where his brother is. If you happen to cross his path, you must be wary: He was a fierce warrior as a man; as a beast, he could be deadly! Your quest begins now.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Look for Wulf's brother Torkild

◆ TARGET: Torkild Wild-Blood, somewhere in Solstheim

Bear Brother

There are no compass directions to hint of Torkild's location. The werewolves of Frostmoon Crag do not know who this fellow is. So it falls to you to scour Solstheim and seek him out. Begin by trekking down to the coast, stopping at the eastern shores and turning north. Work your way along the shoreline, facing down possible Raider and Horker threats as you go. Torkild is often found somewhere along this stretch of rugged shore. However, he could be along the north or western shores and is occasionally found dead!

TIP To find Torkild, you must inspect the Solstheim World Map (pages 1008 and 1036) and find the markers that look like this: ●. These are Random Encounter locations, and Torkild can appear in any of them, except for the four most southerly markers. Essentially, make a counterclockwise tour of the coast until you find him.

When you eventually find Torkild, he's usually shirtless and ranting something about the All-Maker craving the night of the sun. You can:

Attempt to start a conversation. You don't get far, as Torkild turns large and hairy.

Or simply start to attack Torkild the moment you spot him. It allows you to land some strikes before he can retaliate.

Either way, you're in for a fight with a werewolf. Batter the beast until it lies sprawling at your feet.

➤ Letter to Wulf

◆ OBJECTIVE: Examine Torkild

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Wulf

Quest Conclusion

On the corpse, you'll find a folded letter. Take it, and then examine it in the Item > Books menu. It is a sorrowful farewell to his brother, while Torkild was still mentally competent enough to write. Your objective updates, and you should return to Skaal Village and speak with Wulf again. Give him the letter from his brother, and Wulf recognizes the handwriting. He asks how Torkild died. Answer how you wish. Finally, Wulf imparts some of the wisdom of the Skaal (some skill increases), as you've done him a service, and the quest concludes.

The Caerellius Conspiracy

NOTE This is one of a few quests you can complete in Raven Rock. For a complete list, consult pages 606 and 668.

To the northwest of town, at the foot of the giant rock column formations, is the old Raven Rock Mine. Visit at any time, and once you pass the East Empire crates and boxes, there's a makeshift balcony under which Crescius Caerellius, an elderly Imperial, is arguing with his seemingly younger wife, Aphia Velothi. After their outbursts, you can speak to Crescius and he tells you he's busy. Inquire why, and after some suspicious verbal sparring, he tells you the mines below hold a secret that could put Raven Rock back on the map. The quest begins!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Crescius Caerellius

◆ TARGET: Crescius Caerellius, Raven Rock Mine

Continue your questioning: It seems that his great-grandfather, Gratian Caerellius, spent his entire life exploring ruins across Tamriel and met his end here almost 200 years ago. The East Empire Company explained it away as a rockfall, but Crescius reckons there was more to it. After a tidying up in their home, an unsent letter of Gratian's was discovered, as well as a key. Apparently, there was a great discovery—great enough for the East Empire to seal up the entrance. Unfortunately, Crescius hasn't been able to find it.

Answer how you wish; the old coot continues, adamant that there's something big down there that the East Empire Company doesn't want anyone to know about. He's telling you this because Aphia thinks him too old for such a dangerous exploration. He wants someone to find out what happened to Gratian and learn the East Empire Company's big secret. He hands over everything he has and asks you to emerge triumphantly so he can regain the respect he's lost.

➤ Gratian's Letter ➤ Raven Rock Mine Key

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve Gratian Caerellius's Journal

◆ TARGET: Bloodskal chasm chamber, Raven Rock Mine

The Search for Gratian Caerellius

Follow the precarious floating balconies down to the opening in the south wall of this epic hole, watching for Skeeever here. Continue past a Frostbite Spider and another alcove to the east, with a spider and some rickety platforms. Back in the central pit, continue north to a third alcove leading down a stepped tunnel to the west, then the south and east, with more spiders and planks and a web to cut through as you burst into a locked gate next to an East Empire strongbox. Open the gate using the key you received from Crescius.

Cross into a roughly mined area, which breaks through into a Draugr tomb that is ankle-deep in water. There's movement here. Draugr rise from their walled resting places to delay you. Fight four or five as you head through the crypt. Check the left area for a chest, then go east; avoid the floor plate and swinging gate trap. Head up the steps and around to the west.

Here, four thrones are occupied by two slumbering dead (one on each side), who awaken to attack, along with a third foe farther along the hall and a locked chest [Master]. Defeat these enemies, as the circular chamber ahead features at least six Draugr of varying degrees of toughness. When the brutality is over, open the door to the west, wind your way through a narrow crypt corridor, and pass a tomb with a Stalhrim deposit embedded into it (which can only be mined if you have the Ancient Nordic Pickaxe).

Pass the Alchemy Lab and shelves of ingredients (snag the Netch Jelly here if you're completing the Solstheim Regional Activity for Milore lenth; see page 668), then move north along a stepped passage, watching for lightning traps in the shallow alcoves (race through or pry the Soul Gems off their pedestals). Back in the water, open the iron doors and ready yourself for combat with some particularly hardy Draugr.

► Netch Jelly (2)

Battle the Draugr around this interior canal and on the precarious wooden bridge. Behind the waterfall is a door that leads to a small alcove with a few scattered items and another Stalhrim deposit. Return and climb up to the alcoves and cross the wooden bridge to a high alcove with a chest [Expert] and an Arcane Enchanter. Yank the handle on the nearby pedestal, which opens a door on the chamber's eastern upper side. Move back across the bridge to reach it. Head south to a corridor junction. Left (east) is a pedestal surrounded by candles, where you find a Spell Tome for Ice Spike.

► Spell Tome: Ice Spike

Head right (west), up the spiral steps to the balconies overlooking the Spell Tome pedestal. Dodge or remove the Soul Gem from the lightning trap, and work your way around to an open wooden door and a narrow cage bridge to the north. Carefully tread on the ground near the torch and steps, as a dart trap is easily activated. Rush through or avoid it before opening the wooden door, securing goods from a locked chest [Adept], heading back down the steps, and checking the low tunnel to the west. This brings you out onto a high chasm.

► Breaking the Seal of the Bloodskal Clan

Two cave streams and numerous interlocking basalt columns offer a tremendous view of a strange and dimly lit wall of odd carvings. Could these be what Crescius was warbling about? Carefully descend to the ground and inspect the old bones of Gratian Caerellius, near the runic door. Aha! Gratian's Journal is on the corpse, along with a strange and wondrous blade. Grab both!

► Gratian's Journal

► Bloodskal Blade

◆ OBJECTIVE: Escape Bloodskal Barrow

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Read Gratian Caerellius's Journal

◆ TARGET: Bloodskal Barrow (exterior)

It is well worth your time to read Gratian's Journal. It mentions that miners broke through into a barrow belonging to the "Bloodskal Clan," the discovery of the sword, and their battles against Draugr where Gratian and his friend Millius were wounded terribly. The only survivor, Gratian became trapped and reached a strange door. In his malaise, he sketched the door and postulated that the use of the Bloodskal Blade (which emits a ribbon of mystical energy) may solve the puzzle.

Puzzle Solution: Gratian was correct that the Bloodskal Blade is the key. Equip this two-handed weapon, stand so you're targeting the red slit in the outer arch, and make either a horizontal power attack with the blade (sidestep, hold down your Attack button, release), or a power attack while moving backward (which makes it easier to aim, as you aren't strafing). If you're successful, part of the arch will move up to connect with other moving sections, and a vertical glow appears.

Puzzle Solution (continued): Make a vertical power attack (while holding still, hold down your Attack button, release), and be sure the ribbon of red hits close to the glow in the arch. A section indents, clicks, and the outer piece slides farther toward the apex of the arch. This time a horizontal glowing slit forms. Execute a horizontal power attack, and the entire left side of the outer arch slots into place!

Now move to view the right side of the outer arch. Perform exactly the same power attacks, and watch the sections of archway maneuver into new and unlocked positions. If you've correctly slashed, the entire arch glows red, and a massive vertical slit appears through the circular door. Launch a final, vertical power attack from your Bloodskal Blade, and the door opens!

▶ Zahkriisos Rising

Head through the long Nord hall with the swinging blade traps and activate the lever at the far end to open the heavy gate. This grants you access into the lair of Zahkriisos, one of Miraak's Acolyte Priests. Check the large chest for him to appear. This fiend is able to summon Seekers and damage you with a powerful blast of lightning. Swap to your preferred weapons and engage this troublesome foe. If you're currently completing Solstheim Side Quest: Masks of the Acolyte Priests* (see page 662), he holds one of the masks you're looking for. Grab it from the ash pile you've reduced Zahkriisos to, and learn a Word of the powerful Dragon Aspect Shout.

TIP Is this battle becoming too difficult? Then feel free to pull the lever next to the portcullis on the way to the chamber's exit, allowing you to leave early and return to fight this foe at your convenience.

▶ Zahkriisos

Move west, through the arch you didn't come in from, and you'll notice a pedestal at the bottom of some spiral steps and small waterfall. Check the alcoves for a chest and Arcane Enchanter. On this plinth is a legendary Black Book!

Pick this up, and you're transported into Apocrypha. You can:

Reread the book in your inventory to return to Tamriel.

Or complete your trek into this part of Apocrypha. This means finishing Solstheim Side Quest: Black Book: The Winds of Change (page 612). Consult that quest for the walkthrough of this realm.

▶ Black Book: The Winds of Change

▶ Word of Power: Dragon Aspect

▶ Vindication and Celebration

Back in Raven Rock Mine, ascend the spiral steps to the door and enter Bloodskal Barrow. Move along the rough tunnel to the handle that reveals a secret rock door. Enter the subsequent Draugr tomb and engage a motley collection of Reavers. Slay them and pass an Alchemy Lab as you ascend past more plunderers and a couple of Altmer corpses. Exit through the door back into Solstheim, and the Bloodskal Barrow exterior.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Crescius Caerellius

◆ TARGET: Caerellius House, Raven Rock

Quest Conclusion

Descend the two towers of Bloodskal, facing off against Reaver foes as you go and rummaging around for a chest [Adept] atop the second tower you reach. Once at the base of the towers, make a quick trip back to Raven Rock and search for the Caerellius House, close to the docks. Find Crescius and hand over the journal, vindicating his stories. He offers you a small gold reward for your troubles and can speak about the few Imperials in this town and his family.

▶ [Leveled] Gold

Postquest Activities

If you leave Raven Rock for a few days and then return to Crescius and Raven Rock Mine, the old man has convinced other miners that the area is safe to return, and the mine reopens. You can gather ebony ore from up to nine veins that are newly excavated.

▶ A Pain in the Ash

NOTE This is one of many quests you can complete by visiting Tel Mithryn. For a complete list, consult pages 606 and 672.

Usually on your third or fourth trip into Tel Mithryn, you may see Neloth's apprentice, Talvas Fathryon, approach you. He's more than a little flustered, telling you that he conjured an Ash Guardian, and now it's running amok. You can:

Ignore him, which doesn't go down well.

Offer to destroy it for him.

Ask how this occurred.

Or tell him this is his mess to clean up.

Any of those responses is fine, as you're able to complete this quest with or without Talvas's approval. You can also report the matter to Neloeth. He isn't happy about his foolish pupil's lack of conjuring skill but leaves the combat options up to you.

Quest Conclusion

Return to Talvas, who is usually in Neloeth's tower, worrying about his master's wrath. Tell him of your success, and he rewards you with the Ash Guardian spell, if you have the skill to cast it, or a staff if you don't. He also realizes his summoning spell went awry because he cast it without a heart stone; to conjure an Ash Guardian and bind it to fight for you, a heart stone must be present or the creature runs amok.

ENEMIES: Spriggan

◆ OBJECTIVES: Get three taproots (3), Soak the taproots, Talk to Elynea, Plant the taproot, Talk to Elynea

MINOR SPOILERS

You can complete this objective in several ways:

Locate any apothecary merchant and hope they have taproot to sell.

Scavenge in town or in a dungeon on the off-chance you find some. For example, your home in Riften, Honeyside, contains two specimens.

But by far the best plan is to hunt down Spriggan, slay them, and then search them for taproot. You'll usually find one on each corpse. That means facing three of them. In this example, we journeyed back to Skyrim, trekked to Haafingar Hold, and entered Shadowgreen Cavern, where a trio of Spriggan are known to reside. After slaying them, we Fast-Traveled back to Solstheim.

Or, if you wish to stay in Solstheim, you can wander the northern parts of the area, searching for Spriggan on a small island (Secondary Location: [S.NO] Giant Nirnroot Island) to the north and slightly northwest of Frossel. There are Spriggans there as well.

Burnt Spriggans only offer Burnt Spriggan Wood on their charred corpses, so battling them isn't productive. CAUTION

Once you've secured three taproot, your objective updates:

While you're visiting the Telvanni settlement of Tel Mithryn, you might wish to investigate the outbuildings in addition to Neloeth's tower. Head up to the Tel Mithryn Apothecary, and you'll meet Elynea Mothren, the caretaker of the

◆ OBJECTIVE: Get three taproots (3)

◆ TARGET: Taproots, from fallen Spriggan

TIP You need only two taproot before heading to the Headwaters of Harstrad, as there's a third Spriggan at the source where you soak your taproots.

The Headwaters of Harstrad is in the northern climbs of Solstheim, north of the Temple of Miraak and west of the Wind Stone. Locate this body of water and head west toward the waterfall and into Harstrad Cave through the cascading ice water. Once inside this grotto, prepare for another Spriggan attack. Slay it, optionally checking the crumpled skeleton and large chest it was guarding; then stand in the middle of the water and activate the headwaters. The taproots should now be soaked to Elynea's satisfaction.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Elynea
◆ TARGET: Elynea, Tel Mithryn Apothecary

Quest Conclusion

Back in Tel Mithryn, visit Elynea's Apothecary once more, and inform her of your soggy taproot status. She'll take two, but you must take the third taproot and plant it into the wall of the withered house.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Plant the taproot
◆ TARGET: Withered wall, Tel Mithryn tower

Traipse over to the Tel Mithryn tower, float up to Nelo's quarters, and survey the chamber. A bulbous and shiny protuberance on a wall to the northwest requires your taproot-planting skills. Once the taproot is inserted, your objective updates.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Elynea
◆ TARGET: Elynea, Tel Mithryn Apothecary

Back at the apothecary, tell Elynea her soaked taproot is planted, and you receive a cur thanks and a couple of potions for your troubles. The quest concludes.

➤ [Leveled] Potion of Well-Being (2)

Postquest Activities

If you return after a few days, Elynea is happy to sell you more potions of Well-Being, in addition to the usual alchemy supplies. If you look closely, you will see that the exterior of Nelo's home is looking better. Inside, Nelo has a new chamber and a few new test subjects.

NOTE This is one of many quests you complete by visiting and speaking to Nelo in his Tel Mithryn tower. For a complete list, consult page 606.

The aloof Dunmer mage has another task for you to complete. Float up to his tower lair in Tel Mithryn and ask him, "Can I help with your research?" One (random) request Nelo has for you involves heart stones. He is running low on this precious resource and tells you:

If you have one on your person, he'll purchase it from you.

Otherwise, he can tell you where you might find one. Ask where, and he explains that every time Red Mountain belches, more land in the vicinity of Tel Mithryn. You should look for impact craters or exposed rock.

There are a few other places on the surface of Solstheim to find these deposits, but mainly look within the fallen ash of Red Mountain, in the southeastern part of the island. When you find a deposit, use a pickaxe to mine it until the vein is depleted.

You must be on Solstheim Side Quest: The Final Descent to explore most of this area. A long descent down a treacherous mine shaft leads to spiders, Draugr, and a conspiracy to solve. You must then wade through a waterlogged crypt, enter a grand basalt chasm, use the Bloodskal Blade to open a sealed door, slay the terrifying Acolyte Priest Zakhriis, and finally enter a small chamber with a tumbling waterfall and spiral staircase, where the book is located.

Benkongerike begins as a glacial cave system filled with multiple Riekling camps and traps and intermittent Riekling ambushes from their clusters of collected detritus. This changes to a Draugr dungeon as you reach the Great Hall. The place is teeming with Rieklings. Solve the Nordic puzzle, claim a Word of Power, and then read the Black Book in an adjacent chamber.

PREREQUISITES: Complete Solstheim Side Quest: A New Source of Stalhrim

MINOR SPOILERS

LOCATIONS: Skaal Village, Vahlok's Tomb

CHARACTERS: Tharstan

ENEMIES: Corrupted Shade, Draugr, Vahlok

◆ OBJECTIVES: Travel to Vahlok's Tomb, Talk to Tharstan, Explore Vahlok's Tomb, Find the main burial chamber, Talk to Tharstan

A Sacrifice Will Bring You Closer to That Which You Seek

NOTE This is one of a few quests that begin when you discover and befriend the Skaal people of northeast Solstheim. This particular quest can start only after Solstheim Side Quest: A New Source of Stalhrim is over and Baldor is back at his anvil and forge.

A historian named Tharstan stops to speak with you, noting your bravery when you looked for Baldor. It is this very courage he seeks in a partner to aid his forays into the many ancient ruins that cover the island. Tharstan has recently discovered a new passage, opened by an earthquake after one of Red Mountain's eruptions. But the place may be dangerous, so he'll pay you to watch his back down there. The quest starts and continues when you decide to meet Tharstan at the ruins. Before then, you can question him about his background and his studies.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Travel to Vahlok's Tomb

◆ TARGET: Tharstan, Vahlok's Tomb (exterior)

NOTE A wily adventurer such as yourself may recognize the name "Vahlok." Could this be one of Miraak's Acolytes, a Dragon Priest with a mask of power to pry from its ashes? No, Vahlok was vehemently opposed to Miraak and challenged him in ancient battle. But he's no friend of yours, either!

Vahlok's Tomb is southeast of Thirk Mead Hall and is reasonably difficult to spot; it's a crack in the earth that's wide enough to slip into and reach a previously hidden door to Vahlok's Tomb. Open it, and head down the initial (south) tunnel to reach your new historian friend.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Tharstan

◆ OBJECTIVE: Explore Vahlok's Tomb

◆ TARGET: Amethyst Claw, Vahlok's Tomb

Tharstan is positively giddy about this newly uncovered crypt, and he's already had a look around. Up until your arrival, the only area of interest is an inscription and a switch in the grand main chamber. Move to the pedestal (pictured), where Tharstan reads off a cryptic riddle written in the dragon language. It translates as, "A sacrifice will bring you closer to that which you seek." Curious.

Tharstan descends to a glowing grate on the lower stone plateau, telling you to watch your step, as there are corpses strewn about the floor here. Tharstan wonders whether the fire beneath the grating has something to do with the inscription. Indeed it does:

Puzzle Solution: Locate one of the dead Draugr and pick it up (press and hold down the appropriate button or key), and drag it onto the glowing grating. Then move to the pedestal with the inscription and pull the switch. The grating opens, and the corpse tumbles into the fire below. Well done! Ceremonial torches flicker into life on either side of the stone plateau, and portcullises to the left (south) and right (north) open. You're able to head in either direction. Which way you go is up to you. Head left or right; you must solve puzzles on either side eventually.

All Men Must Die, Often by Their Own Means

Head up the steps, passing the torches and under the open portcullis into a tunnel heading south. Turn left (east), opening the iron door and moving down into a Draugr crypt. As expected, you have company. Tharstan is a historian, not a fighter, so tackle the four or five Draugr by yourself; then climb the steps to the east, encountering one or two more Draugr before reaching a pull chain and barred archway. Pull the chain and enter a rather puzzling chamber.

The exit arch opposite is currently sealed with a portcullis. Inside the chamber are three pillars around a central cylinder with odd, colored runes that glow with unnatural light. Tharstan inspects the pedestal plaque: "All men must die, often by their own means." Sounds rather grim to him.

Puzzle Solution: The central pillar has three sides, all differently colored and each with a different weapon resting on or nearby their own pedestal:

There is a green side with an Ancient Nord Bow.

There is a blue side with a Staff of Flames.

There is a red side with an Ancient Nord Sword.

The three smaller pillars have "impact stones" encased into them. These activate (glowing and changing color to match the part of the central pillar opposite) when a particular weapon is used to strike any part of the smaller pillar. However, the type of weapon is important:

Use the Ancient Nord Bow (or any other bow) and fire an arrow at the small pillar opposite the green side, so it lights up green.

Use the Staff of Flames (or any other staff) and unleash it at the small pillar opposite the blue side, so it lights up blue.

Use the Ancient Nord Sword (or any other blade) and slash at the small pillar opposite the red side, so it lights up red.

The portcullis rises, and Tharstan is ecstatic. What lies beyond in the next chamber?

A particularly nasty Draugr rises from his central coffin, flanked by two lesser Draugr who break free of their nearer tombs. After a protracted fight (on your own, as Tharstan isn't getting involved in this battle), inspect the Draugr corpses, the most troublesome of which is carrying the left half of an Amethyst Claw. Pry open two chests and gain a Word of Power. Meanwhile, Tharstan translates the runes on the wall, which describe a guardian who defeated someone named Miraak. Apparently this "Miraak" was a traitor. When you're ready to go, leave through the gap in one of the southern sarcophagi. Pull the chain at the tunnel's end and step back into the initial grand chamber.

Continue Along the Path, Don't Tread Where You've Been

Head up the steps, passing the torches and through the open portcullis into a short tunnel heading north. Turn left (west) as the tunnel winds down, past a chest and into a rather puzzling chamber. Ahead are three archways, each with spears preventing your progress. Tharstan inspects the description on the raised pedestal near a group of nine pressure plates: "Continue along the path, don't tread where you've been." Interesting.

Puzzle Solution: Simply step onto the first plate in the near-right corner and sidestep left, zigzagging so you tread on each of the nine pressure plates only once. This is deceptively simple; as long as you don't step on any plate more than once, and you don't miss any plates, once you step on the ninth and last plate, the spears retract and progress is possible. Tharstan is excited. What lies beyond in the next chamber?

A powerful and troublesome Draugr clambers from his central coffin, and two lesser Draugr smash out of their nearer tombs. After a lengthy battle (by yourself, as Tharstan is paying you to remove all threats on his behalf), inspect the Draugr corpses, the most dangerous of which is holding the right half of an Amethyst Claw. Wrench open the chest and obtain a Word of Power. In the meantime, Tharstan ruminates on the wall runes, which refer to a guardian who inspired both men and dragons. He wonders if the guardian was himself a man or a dragon? When you're ready to proceed, leave through the gap in one of the southern sarcophagi. Pull the chain at the tunnel's end and step back into the initial grand chamber.

➤ Amethyst Claw (right half) ➤ Word of Power: Battle Fury

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the main burial chamber

◆ TARGET: Vahlok's Tomb

Ethereal Above, Corruption Below

Move to the cage on the western side of the fiery stone plateau and inspect the indentations. These circular keyholes require you to place each of the Amethyst Claws into them, unlocking the cage in front of you. Pull the handle on the cage's pedestal, and a series of ethereal blue platforms appears, linking a path to the ledge and door on the opposite wall. Tharstan is suitably impressed.

TIP These ethereal platforms of magic appear for a few seconds and then vanish, so you need to step on each of them quickly, moving to the next as it appears and stepping off before the platform disappears. If you fall, simply wade back and try again.

You may wish to trigger the platforms and watch how they appear (and disappear), and then activate the pedestal handle again. Follow the snaking path to the far ledge, drop down onto the dungeon passage heading west, and pass a barred door.

NOTE

These barred doors are simply the exits from stairs you climb up if you fall during any of the subsequent platform-walking. If you fall into the water below, you face combat with Corrupted Shades; expect at least a dozen of these foes to cause you minimal threats. Then search any ground-level entrances for minor items, climb the steps and unlock the bar on the door, and return to the upper ledges to try again.

At the far end of the short tunnel is another pedestal and a handle. As expected, this releases another set of platforms, so quickly stand and follow each of them across the large waterlogged chamber to the upper tunnel across from you. This leads to another set of platforms, each time moving a little faster than before. Next comes a final set, moving so quickly you really need to run most of the time to reach the final ledge and double wooden doors.

TIP Once you successfully navigate an ethereal bridge, it remains in place.

Through the doors is a Hall of Stories and a Nordic Puzzle Door at the far end.

Puzzle Solution: Those adventurers familiar with such a puzzle will know that the rings on this door correspond to a key on the palm of the claw the door opens. Not so this time! The palm of the Amethyst Claw is blank! While you're scratching your head, Tharstan arrives and studies the door, then heads to the wall carvings to ascertain a combination. Among the etchings are the following clues:

"A breeze, or maybe it's wind." This refers to the hawk, to be moved on the outer ring.

"The night sky, and the moon." This refers to the wolf, to be moved on the middle ring.

"Something to do with fire, and scales." This refers to the dragon, to be moved on the inner ring.

Vahlok Awakens

The door rumbles open. Pull the chain at the top of the steps to open a portcullis; this leads you out and into a high-status ceremonial tomb. As you edge forward, the stone sarcophagus ahead of you, near a large chest and Word Wall, cracks open as the Dragon Priest Vahlok the Jailor frees himself to face you!

The battle is frantic, and all the more tricky if you don't combat Vahlok's mainly fire-based attacks. Expect him to use Firebolt, Flame Cloak, Flames, and Incinerate, and he summons a Flame Atronach. Also watch for fire damage from the pressure plates dotted around the tomb; stay on the edges of the walkways or in the water, moving to the Word Wall to keep them from triggering.

OBJECTIVE: Talk to Tharstan

Quest Conclusion

Tharstan is incredulous at seeing an actual Dragon Priest and believes there are numerous volumes to write based on this discovery alone! You're paid for your help and can additionally learn the final Word of the Battle Fury Shout before leaving the way you came.

LOCATIONS: Fort Frostmoth, Old Attius Farm, Raven Rock

CHARACTERS: Captain Modyn Veleth

ENEMIES: Ash Spawn, General Falx Carius

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Kill the ash spawn attacking Captain Veleth, Speak to Captain Veleth, Search the Attius Farm for clues, Kill General Falx Carius, Return to Captain Veleth

MINOR SPOILERS

One of the Ash Spawn that you or Veleth reduced to a pile of sand-colored ash is carrying something of interest: a Declaration of War! This couldn't have been written by these golems. Read the letter, which demands the unconditional surrender of Raven Rock! The writer is General Falx Carius, an Imperial who may have lost his mind. Veleth only confuses matters when you show him the letter; Carius was the garrison commander at Fort Frostmoth, but he died over 200 years ago during the eruption of Red Mountain.

► Declaration of War

Ask Veleth for further instructions, and he recommends you visit the fortress to see if Falx Carius is really dead, while Veleth returns to Raven Rock to prepare his men for more assaults.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill General Falx Carius

- ◆ TARGET: General Falx Carius, Fort Frostmoth interior

► Fortress of the Mad General

Climb up the sandy promontory heading roughly east. You soon reach the perimeter of the fortress, now in a terrible state of disrepair. However, this hasn't fazed the current occupant, as you can hear General Falx Carius yell that an intruder has entered the fort, alerting the Ash Spawn guarding the battlements. Your fight into the fortress begins now!

Scrambling over the broken corner section in the fort's northwestern part is a good way to enter the area, as you have a height advantage and an easy way to escape. Use this route if you're focusing on long-range magic or arrow attacks.

Heading up the hill from the south isn't wise, as there are Ash Spawn with swords and ranged fireballs across the crenellations forcing you to hide or battle and shrug off numerous attacks.

Sneaking around to the lone southeast tower and slaying the Ash Spawn there is a possible plan. Then maneuver up onto the southern battlements or into the main ash-filled central area.

Deal with the Ash Spawn outside so they don't

► Spawn on the Farm

The first time you leave Raven Rock through the southeastern gate under the Bulwark, be on the lookout for a group of lumpy, grotesque, human-sized monsters attacking a Dark Elf soldier outside of an abandoned farmhouse (Old Attius Farm). As you close, you'll discover Captain Veleth is valiantly defending himself against a trio of these misshapen Ash Spawn. The quest automatically starts now.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the Ash Spawn attacking Captain Veleth

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Captain Veleth

- ◆ TARGET: Ash Spawn outside Old Attius Farm

Charge in or attack from range, keep your strikes focused on the Ash Spawn, and try to avoid hitting Captain Veleth. Once all the foes lie in piles at your feet, head on over for a chat with the veteran guard. He laments his dead colleague and knows these Ash Spawn need to be stopped. You can:

Tell him you'd be glad to lend him a hand.

Tell him you'd be glad to accept payment for lending him a hand.

Or ignore him and the quest stalls. Either of the previous conversations allows you to progress.

Veleth tells you to look around and see if you can spot anything useful in the vicinity of the farm. The objective updates, and you can quiz Veleth further regarding these foul creatures.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Search the Attius Farm for clues

- ◆ TARGET: Old Attius Farm

rush in behind you as you enter the fortress. There is a single access point—the door near the tattered banner along the western wall. Expect to fight around five or six Ash Spawn before you reach it.

The initial passageway heads north-south with three Ash Spawn to battle as you head east to join the passage. Remove all the threats, optionally checking the side chamber and ladder up to an exterior tower before turning and moving down the steps along the north tunnel.

Another two tough Ash Spawn appear in this lower training area. To the east is a sealed wooden door requiring a key, so locate the opening in the north wall and head down into the main crypt area. Expect another two Ash Spawn to waylay you before your exploration takes you west to a central tomb surrounded by coffin ledges. Atop and at the foot of the coffin are two items of great interest: Ildari's Journal (which details a sorcerer's ill-fated attempts to resurrect and control Falx) and a knapsack containing the Fort Frostmoth Key.

- Ildari's Journal
- Fort Frostmoth Key

TIP Does that name sound familiar? You can learn more about Ildari in Solstheim Side Quest: Old Friends.

While you're in Fort Frostmoth, it is worth exploring these catacombs a little more closely for some high-value items, especially in a spider-filled quarry area and the mead cellar (check page 1054 for the details).

Reduced to Ash

This key allows you to open the wooden door upstairs that you couldn't breach a moment ago. Ascend the steps heading east into an ash-filled hall where the resurrected but uncontrollable remains of General Falx Carius are waiting for you. Armed with a crushing Champion's Cudgel, Carius attacks immediately, prompting you into a fight with him and the four or five Ash Spawn that soon arrive to hamper your progress.

- Fort Frostmoth Key
- Champion's Cudgel

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Captain Velesh

◆ TARGET: Captain Velesh, Raven Rock

Quest Conclusion

With Carius dead (again), search his remains, loot the large treasure chest, and grab any other items you wish before leaving via the door in the south wall (unlocked using either of the Fort Frostmoth keys) and returning to Raven Rock. Captain Velesh is usually patrolling the battlements or central market area. Let him know you've dispatched General Carius, and he expresses regret, as the general helped found Raven Rock...before he was raised from the dead and went mad, obviously. Velesh mentions Councilor Morvayn has offered a gold reward for your help, and the quest concludes.

- Gold [leveled]

Postquest Activities

Captain Velesh has a Favor to offer now that you've finished this quest, as do many of Raven Rock's inhabitants. Find out about these tasks on page 668.

Dragonborn Main Quest: The Fate of the Skaal

MINOR SPOILERS

LOCATIONS: Abandoned Lodge, Northshore Landing, Skaal Village, Stalhrim Source

CHARACTERS: Ancarion, Baldor Iron-Shaper, Deor Woodcutter, Fanari Strong-Voice

ENEMIES: Mudcrab, Thalmor

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Ask Deor about Baldor's disappearance, Search for Baldor Iron-Shaper, Retrieve the Stalhrim Source Map, Talk to Baldor Iron-Shaper

Hard as Iron and Cold as Death

This quest is accessible only after you complete Dragonborn Main Quest: The Fate of the Skaal and you've visited the Skaal Village. When you're there (or you leave and return one or two times), you'll overhear the village chief Fanari Strong-Voice discussing the disappearance of the village's blacksmith, Baldor Iron-Shaper. Deor is certain he saw two elves maneuvering something suspicious in the nearby woods. The following Miscellaneous Objective is now active:

◆ OBJECTIVE: Ask Deor about Baldor's disappearance

◆ TARGET: Deor Woodcutter, Skaal Village

You can now stop and speak with the gruff and curt Deor Woodcutter. He tells you Baldor forges Stalhrim, an art sacred to the Skaal. To make such weapons, others would need to learn that knowledge from Baldor. He reiterates the story of the two elves dragging something behind them in the forest. They were headed south and west. You're to search for any sign of Baldor; the Skaal would be grateful.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Search for Baldor Iron-Shaper

◆ TARGET: Baldor Iron-Shaper, Abandoned Lodge

Baldor's last known whereabouts were centered around an abandoned lodge to the southwest, close to Frostmoon Crag. When you finally reach this lodge, a group of four Thalmor impolitely dissuade you from any further progress. Engage them in combat, and loot each corpse after you defeat them. One of them is carrying the key to the lodge and a handwritten note. Curious...

► Key to Abandoned Lodge

► Handwritten Note

The note is a stern message from "A," regarding a severe displeasure at the lack of successful interrogation. The key opens up the lodge, which is otherwise sealed. Head inside, surveying an untidy huntsman's refuge, but don't forget to head down into the cellar; the missing smithy is trussed up in a corner yelling for help! Baldor remembers you and your help to the Skaal. Now these elves have taken him from his home and are interrogating him. Their leader Ancarion has a map, supposedly showing a hidden source of Stalhrim. The map belongs to the Skaal; Ancarion's fate is in your hands!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Stalhrim Source Map

◆ TARGET: Ancarion, Northshore Landing

◆ Ancarion's Actions—Threatening the Thalmor

Along the rugged northwestern coast near the glacial caves and snowy mountains is a little-known windswept pier. Head to Northshore Landing, sheathing your weapons as you close in on an Altmer boat with three Thalmor soldiers guarding it. You're told to move along, as you're apparently trespassing. You can:

Tell the upstart that you have business to discuss with his leader. This affords you a conversation with Ancarion.

Tell the soon-dead High Elf to taste your blades and begin combat. End it after all three soldiers and Ancarion are bleeding into the water.

Assuming you didn't wade in thirsting for blood, board the vessel and speak with Ancarion. As expected, he is a haughty and objectionable High Elf. He doesn't seem interested in your request for the map and asks why he shouldn't kill you where you stand. You can:

Tell him the blacksmith won't talk. If successful, the Thalmor depart after handing you the map.

(Intimidate) Tell him his life is forfeit and to leave the island. If you're successful, the Thalmor give you the map and make preparations to flee.

(Persuade) Tell him that he wants Stalhrim weapons, and you can help him obtain some. You let him know Baldor told you he'd help teach you to make the weapons, which you can sell on to Ancarion. (Persuade) However, he'll need the map; otherwise Baldor won't divulge anything.

Or you can pickpocket the map if you're suitably and sneakily inclined.

Or you can stop this conversation and lay waste to these High Elves, positioning yourself a little better to land the first blow into Ancarion before combat becomes too messy.

There are three possible outcomes to this confrontation:

◆ Ancarion and his men give the map over to you and flee.

◆ Ancarion believes you'll sell him Stalhrim equipment, starting the Miscellaneous Objective: Sell Stalhrim Armor and Weapons to Ancarion. He buys only Stalhrim-based items, paying you for them (whether you've made them or not).

◆ You slay Ancarion and his men and take the map. He has it on his person.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Baldor Iron-Shaper

◆ TARGET: Baldor Iron-Shaper, Skaal Village

Quest Conclusion

Return to Skaal Village and locate the forge, which is working again now that Baldor is back in the village. Hand him the map (making sure you look at it first to see the location of the deposit). He's extremely grateful and tells you that if you bring Stalhrim to this forge (and only this forge), you can use his tools to craft any armor or weapons you wish—that is, providing you have the Ebony Smithing perk. For a list of items to craft, consult page 82.

➤ Stalhrim Source Map

As you can see from the map, the source isn't that far away from Northshore Landing, and once you read it, the marker for the Stalhrim Source appears on your world map. Visit this Draugr barrow entrance (before or after finishing the quest), which is filled with deposits to chip away at, provided you have the Ancient Nordic Pickaxe. There is a considerable haul here, as well as smaller deposits all over Solstheim (including Secondary Location: Horker Iceberg, northeast of Northshore Landing).

❖ OBJECTIVE: Find the source of the attacks

❖ TARGET: Ildari's Sarcophagus, Tel Mithryn graveyard

Place Neloth's Ring of Tracking on your finger, step outside, head down to the ash grounds at the foot of the fungal root structures, and then look to your right (northeast). Head through the gaps in the rocky outcrops, and peer down toward the coast, with Nchardak in the distance. Something odd catches your eye in the small walled graveyard with the single pine tree. A strange purple glow emanates from one of the grave sites. Head closer and activate Ildari's Sarcophagus. After heaving back the lid, you'll find a staff and (more importantly) a Heart Stone inside. But no skeleton!

➤ Heart Stone

❖ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Neloth

❖ TARGET: Neloth, Tel Mithryn

❖ Enemy Revealed

NOTE This is one of many quests you complete by visiting and speaking to Neloth in his Tel Mithryn tower. For a complete list, consult page 606. Although randomly occurring, this quest usually becomes available once you complete Solstheim Side Quests: Briarheart Necropsy and Healing a House.

As you continue to perform Side Quests for Neloth in his fungal hideaway in Tel Mithryn, he may refer to attackers trying to thwart him. You may have disregarded this as paranoia, and he mentions it only infrequently as he orders you to finish different tasks. However, when you return to Tel Mithryn, you find a group of three or four Ash Spawn waiting to defeat you. Slay them and head in to speak with Neloth. Something more troubling is afoot!

Not surprisingly, Neloth says that he has legions of enemies back in Morrowind, but in this case, somebody in Solstheim is to blame. You can ask what needs doing (or if there's a bounty reward), and Neloth hands you a special ring. Wear it, walk around Tel Mithryn, and follow any strange clues it may impart. You may wish to ask Neloth about how the ring works (it follows a link back to the summoner of the Ash Spawn and provides a visual clue of their location). You can also ask about the threats he's received.

❖ Low-Life at Highpoint

Back at Neloth's tower, explain that the Heart Stone is the source of the attacks. You explain where you found it, and Neloth blames himself. The grave belongs to Ildari, his apprentice before Talvas. He found it annoying when she died. Reply regarding the lack of body in the grave. This continues the conversation.

Or ask more about the experiments he inflicted on her. He lets you know how he tried to emulate the Briarheart and implant a Heart Stone into Ildari's chest. It didn't take.

It seems Ildari may still live! He casts a divination, takes both the Heart Stone and his ring, and commands Ildari to reveal herself. A few moments later, he has her location. You'll find her in Highpoint Tower. The time for friendship seems to have passed; Neloth wants that thrice-cursed Heart Stone ripped from her chest.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Ildari

◆ TARGET: Ildari Sarothril, Highpoint Tower

Head northwest from Tel Mithryn, until you find the cascading stream that used to be the Harstrad River before the choking ash falls from Red Mountain blocked much of the drainage. Move up the stream in the direction of Highpoint Tower, but don't continue to clamber up to the remains of the tower; the entrance is partially hidden. Instead, stay below the rocky area around the tower, and move clockwise around until you're slightly north of the location, facing south. A group of Ash Spawn are lurking near the dying pine trees and trapa roots. Defeat the foes, locate the roughly hewn steps in the rocks that wind up to the southeast, and the stone tunnel entrance to the tower.

NOTE Highpoint Tower is half buried in ash and inaccessible until this quest is activated, so you can't explore it before this point.

Head down three levels of spiral steps (pausing at the table two floors down to secure the first of Ildari's Journals) to a curved stone tunnel that leads into a rocky cave attached to the base of the tower structure with numerous revolting egg sacs to your left (southwest). These burst as you head toward them, so slay any Flame Cloaked or Albino Spiders you find here or in the small cavern with the ruby geode deposits and the low caverns with sapphire and amethyst geodes and scattered bones.

► Ildari's Journal, vol. I

Back at the tower tunnel, move north into the next section of tunnel, plucking the Soul Gem from the magic caster trap so it doesn't spit shock bolts at you. Head past the Ash Spawn waiting to repel you, checking a circular side chamber for more foes. Back in the curved tunnel, rush the next caster trap and halt the electrical damage before continuing east to the tunnel exit.

◆ A Sorcerer Scorned

Watch the explosive rune on the ground in the roughly circular chamber with the Arcane Enchanter. Head east down the large dungeon passage, watching for a wall rune at the far end. To the right (south) is a small dead-end passage with cells. One still has a prisoner inside—Niyya. If you unlock her door [Adept], she tells you Ildari sealed her and other miners into these cells and used them in her experiments. Ildari seems quite deranged. Just how deranged is detailed in the second of her journals, found on the table in the jail area.

► Ildari's Journal, vol. II

Backtrack to the wall rune and head north toward the bowl torch. Turn right (east) and follow the passage into a mine area. Drop down into the mine where veins of gold and sapphire ore can be depleted. Then head northwest, under the three hanging lanterns, and prepare for fraught combat as you reach a small fortification built within a large cave. Ildari Sarothril appears atop the battlements, telling you Neloath was a fool to send someone like you to finish her off. She's not the friendly sort, as indicated by the minions she summons before fleeing.

With a crackle from the gems surrounding her summoning plateau, she conjures an Ash Guardian, and three or four Ash Spawn also join in the throng. Back into the mine so you aren't swamped, and set about removing these initial threats. Then head toward the fortification, move up and around to the left onto the earthen walkways, and face four more Ash Spawn. There's a dead-end mine shaft nearby. Check it before climbing the wooden scaffold steps surrounding the old fort, passing the summoning circle and heading across to the interior of a partially ruined tower where Ildari yelled at you from.

Drop down and inspect the shelves and room, grabbing any items you wish. There are potions and ingredients, a book called Deathbrand (which launches the Solstheim Side Quest of the same name), Ildari's third journal, and a strongbox (not made by the East Empire Company).

► Deathbrand

► Ildari's Journal, vol. III

Quest Conclusion

Activate the lever near the small bridge to her balcony, and a barred archway opens, allowing you to exit via a long path that ends at a pull chain that opens a section of wall leading back to the initial tower chamber. Exit, and return to Tel Mithryn. Tell Nelo of your victory, and he seems actually impressed by your prowess. He gives you a staff and makes you a member of House Telvanni.

➤ [Random] Staff ➤ Bed and Chest

Postquest Activities

Additional quests are available from Nelo. Ask what it means to be a member of his house, and Nelo mentions that when he returns to Vvardenfell in a few decades, you would be seen as nobility. In the meantime, you have your own bed and chest here to use as you please.

NOTE Ildari Sarothril was also involved in the experiments to resurrect General Falx Carius, the undead resident of Fort Frostmoth, who you must engage in Solstheim Side Quest: The March of the Dead. There's a separate journal in that location with more of her notes.

RELUCTANT STEWARD

PREREQUISITES: Second visit to Tel Mithryn (see below).

RELATED QUESTS: Solstheim Side

Quest: A New Debt, Solstheim Side Quests: Nelo's Quests (page 606)

LOCATIONS: Raven Rock, The Retching Netch, Tel Mithryn

CHARACTERS: Dreyla Alor, Drovas Relvi, Elynea Mothren, Geldis Sadri, Grover Mallory, Nelo, Ulves Romoran, Varona

ENEMIES: Ash Spawn

◆ OBJECTIVES: Find Varona, Tell Nelo that Varona is dead, Find a new steward, Report back to Nelo

While speaking with Nelo—sometimes after completing three or four previous Side Quests or minor tasks for the haughty Dunmer—he suddenly demands to know if you've seen Varona, as he's feeling peckish. Answer that you haven't seen his steward, and he demands you find her. You can answer Nelo regarding his attitude and receive put-downs in varying degrees of savage sarcasm, but the fact still remains: Varona is missing.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find Varona
◆ TARGET: Rocky foothills of southern Solstheim

Haughty, Sardonic, and in Need of Sustenance

NOTE This is one of many quests you can complete by visiting and speaking to Nelo in his tower at Tel Mithryn. For a complete list, consult page 606. However, this particular Side Quest begins after you meet certain criteria:

Visit Tel Mithryn and speak to Varona Nelas. This isn't hard—she usually greets you when you first arrive, and you may have already forgotten about this meeting.

Then you must visit Raven Rock and return to Tel Mithryn.

Exit Nelo's tower and make a few inquiries among the other servants. The best places to engage in scuttlebutt are the two side structures.

Enter either Tel Mithryn Kitchen or Tel Mithryn Apothecary, and speak to Ulves Romoran or Elynea Mothren. Both mention that Varona went to Raven Rock to arrange for more supplies. This brings up a compass point to the northwest of your current location.

NOTE Or, you can simply wander blindly until you uncover Varona's location.

Brilliant, Robust, and Blindingly Obedient

Varona's trip to Raven Rock was waylaid rather badly. She unfortunately didn't make it; she was attacked by the hated Ash Spawn who roam the southern foothills. Trek northwest from Tel Mithryn, passing the giant fungal growths until you find Varona's corpse and three or four Ash Spawn gathered around it, in the wilderness just east of the Harstrad River.

Deal out revenge to these Ash Spawn and then examine the still-fresh corpse of Varona Nelas. When you do, your quest updates. This might be a good opportunity to take the key she was carrying, too. It opens the modest dwelling in Tel Mithryn, which you can inspect at your leisure.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Tell Neloth that Varona is dead

◆ TARGET: Neloth, Tel Mithryn

As expected, when you return to Neloth in his high tower, he expresses breathtaking insensitivity toward the death of his steward. You also inform him that Ash Spawn were responsible. But there are more pressing matters, such as the brewing of tea—Neloth requires a new steward immediately, if not sooner! He believes that Raven Rock would be a great place to find a new servant, as "they are in awe" of him there. His requirements for a steward? Someone with a brilliant mind, robust physique, and blinding obedience. He seems to be describing a thrall, rather than a servant.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find a new steward

◆ TARGET: Citizens of Raven Rock

Weak-Willed, Emaciated, and Exceptionally Insolent

Head over to Raven Rock and stroll the main thoroughfare, searching for a suitable replacement steward. Amazingly, Neloth's opinion of himself isn't shared by the citizens of this town. A few examples are listed:

Dreyla Alor isn't interested, as Neloth is as loony as a Skooma addict. He once wanted her father to import a live white mammoth. She may point you toward a fellow named Drovas.

Grover Mallory collapses in a fit of hysterics at the mention of such an idea. If you're a member of the Thieves Guild back in Skyrim, and you've completed Thieves Guild Quest: Taking Care of Business (see page 284), he points you toward a fellow named Drovas.

Geldis Sadri, the innkeeper in The Retching Netch believes Neloth to be soft in the head; apparently the lunatic wizard talks to Mudcrabs! However, Geldis has an apprentice who's hard up for coin: Try Drovas.

Desperate times call for desperate measures; locate Drovas Relvi, a shifty-looking character located in The Retching Netch, and ask him if he's interested in the job. After pondering employment with a crazed Telvanni wizard, he's happy to leave Raven Rock. Perhaps a little too happy? He'll gather his belongings and head there immediately. You don't need to chaperone him.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Neloth

◆ TARGET: Neloth, Tel Mithryn

Quest Conclusion

Back at Neloth's tower, inform Neloth you've found a new steward. Neloth is rarely impressed, and this isn't one of those occasions; Drovas makes dreadful canis root tea, but he'll do for now. As a reward, Neloth offers you the use of his staff enchanter, located in this chamber. You receive a reward of coin, too.

➤ Staff Enchanter Key

➤ [Leveled] Gold

Postquest Activities

Neloth is particularly taken with staffs, and has constructed a Staff Enchanter to allow him to create them without the usual hassle. For information on creating your own staffs, refer to page 75.

The Staff Enchanter room also contains an Arcane Enchanter, useful for enchanting your own items in between quests at Tel Mithryn. On top of it, you may find the Black Book known as "The Hidden Twilight." Reading it will transport you to Hermaeus Mora's realm of Apocrypha, beginning Solstheim Side Quest: Black Book: The Hidden Twilight.

You may also wish to inquire how Drovas is working out; it seems the new steward brought more than a few belongings with him from Raven Rock...Consult Solstheim Side Quest: A New Debt for further information.

PREREQUISITES: Complete Solstheim Side Quest: Reluctant Steward

MINOR SPOILERS

RELATED QUESTS: Solstheim Side

Quest: Reluctant Steward, Solstheim Side Quests: Neloth's Quests (page 606)

LOCATIONS: Raven Rock, Tel Mithryn

CHARACTERS: Drovas Relvi, Mogrul, Neloth, Slitter

◆ OBJECTIVES: Objective: Pay Mogrul

◆ Incompetent, in Over His Head, in Debt

NOTE This is one of many quests you complete by visiting and speaking to Neloth in his Tel Mithryn tower. For a complete list, consult page 606. However, this particular Side Quest begins only after you finish Solstheim Side Quest: Reluctant Steward.

Once Drovas is firmly ensconced as Neloth's steward, making an almost undrinkable canis root tea for his new master, you may hear grumbling about your hire's previous standing:

A courier may stop you when you're in a settlement and request you meet with an Orc named Mogrul.

Or you may approach Mogrul at any time, within the town of Raven Rock (he's usually inside or near The Retching Netch). He'll stop you, forcing you into a conversation. He's backed up by his Dunmeri lackey with the worrying name of Slitter.

As soon as you begin the conversation with Mogrul, you realize Drovas has more than a few loose ends to tie up.

Ask Mogrul about the situation, and Mogrul states that Drovas Relvi left town owing the Orc 1,000 septims. This is a debt Mogrul intends to collect. However, now that Drovas is set up with Neloth, he's untouchable. But you, it seems, are not. The debt has shifted to an obligation you must sort out. This falls into three possible plans, detailed below.

Watch your conversation choices from this point on! Threats end up with you fighting Mogrul and Slitter rather than placating them!

CAUTION

◆ OBJECTIVE: Pay Mogrul

◆ TARGET: Mogrul, in Raven Rock

Plan A: Apologetic Paying

There are three possible ways to complete this plan:

Tell him you're so sorry and to take the money. This removes 1,000 coins from your person. If you don't have this much gold, Plans B or C are your only options.

Ask him to be patient, telling him you'll get him the money. This begins Plan B, but it also allows you to return to Tel Mithryn, corner Drovas, and press him for the gold. He can only come up with 250. Use it to help pay off the debt. Or better yet, gather Drovas's gold, then execute Plan C and come out a winner on this deal!

(Intimidate) Reply that you're willing to hand over half (before or after you visit Drovas). If Mogrul is suitably frightened, you're able to pay the debt for half the original amount (500 gold).

Plan B: Apathetic Waylaying

You can simply choose to ignore the matter: Ask Mogrul to be patient, telling him you'll get him his money. Then forget all about him, ignoring his comments when you return to Raven Rock and killing the thugs he sends to waylay you in the wilderness. These thugs continue to pester you until you complete Plans A or C.

Plan C: Apoplectic Slaying

As you might have guessed, you can also:

Reply that you could just kill Mogrul, and then draw your weapon and attack.

Or you can simply start fighting with Mogrul before he even presses you for coin (before this quest starts, in fact!). It's almost impossible to assassinate Mogrul without being detected, as he sits in a busy room with his back to the wall, and Slitter keeps constant watch over him. Prepare to deal with both of them; this will be a stand-up bloodbath.

After the fight, if your assault was detected, a Redoran Guard stops and asks you to account for yourself. Assuming you don't want to start a battle with the entire town, pay off your bounty (only 40 gold), and conclude this quest by the bloodiest and cheapest possible method.

Quest Conclusion

Once Drovas Relvi's debt has been satisfied, either by payment or by defeating Mogrul, this quest concludes.

RELATED QUESTS: Solstheim Side Quest: The Chief of Thirsk Hall

LOCATIONS: Bujold's Retreat, Hrothmund's Barrow, Thirsk Mead Hall

CHARACTERS: Bujold the Unworthy, Elmus, Halbarn Iron-Fur, Hilund, Kuvar

ENEMIES: Riekling, Riekling Chief

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Approach Thirsk Mead Hall, Kill the Rieklings (18), Speak to Bujold, Meet Bujold at Hrothmund's Barrow, Commune with Hrothmund's Spirit

CAUTION

Wait! If you agree to side with the Nords, you have chosen to forgo Solstheim Side Quest: The Chief of Thirsk Hall. Pick a side, as there's no turning back after agreeing with Bujold!

It's worth scouting the area around the Thirsk Mead Hall, including the interior (as the Rieklings aren't hostile if you don't attack them), so you know the dimensions of the battlefield you're about to enter.

Bludgeoning the Blueskins

Head north and west, up the rough path in the rocky embankment that leads through the snow and toward the Mead Hall. As the spears come flying toward you, concentrate on the foes around the front door of the place, then around the sides. Then move into the hall and look for the chief, who can cause problems for your Nord friends; step in to prevent your fellows from falling to his attacks.

Obviously, you can tackle each Riekling in any way you wish, but defeating them when they're already engaged with an ally will keep you from harm. Be wary of using spells with a wide radius of effect, or you may catch your friends in the blast. This fight shouldn't be too demanding; any Rieklings slain by Nords are also added to your death total.

TIP Keep an eye on the health of Elmus, Halbarn, and Hilund—they offer you Favors after this quest is over. But not if they're dead!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Bujold

◆ TARGET: Bujold the Unworthy, Thirsk Mead Hall

With Riekling blood fresh on your blades, locate Bujold (who's usually inside the mead hall surveying the damage the Rieklings inflicted on her clan and home). She asks you to serve as her second as she proves her worthiness to lead once more. Inquire about where you're both headed, and she tells you that to take up residence here, she needs to receive the blessings of Hrothmund, the ancient leader of her tribe.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Bujold at Hrothmund's Barrow

The Bewildered Bujold

NOTE Solstheim Side Quests: Retaking Thirsk and The Chief of Thirsk Hall are mutually exclusive—you cannot complete both of them. The last opportunity to change your mind is flagged in the following text.

Thirsk Mead Hall is an ancient and venerable structure built by the Nords and nestled in the snowy foothills to the east of the Temple of Miraak, just east of the Beast Stone. East of it, on the coast, is the small camp known as Bujold's

Retreat. Approach this encampment, and you'll overhear a group of Nords moaning about a recent routing they suffered. You can stand back and listen to the conversation or speak to any of the Nords. The situation is tense, and any of the Nords you speak with refer you to their leader, who goes by the unfortunate title of Bujold the Unworthy.

Talk to her, asking any questions you wish, and she explains her members fled from the Mead Hall after a cunning Riekling attack. As the words "cunning" and "Riekling" aren't usually used in the same sentence, Bujold explains a combination of too much mead and too few battles had made her tribe complacent. Now they wait and regroup in this coastal camp. Ask if she's interested in one more warrior (you), and confirm you're happy to help her. She convenes a tactical talk around the fire. Goading her party not to have their spirit outstripped by some wanderer, she whips everyone up into a bloodthirsty frenzy. The assault (and this quest) begins now!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Approach Thirsk Mead Hall

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the Rieklings (18)

◆ TARGET: Rieklings, Thirsk Mead Hall

Hrothmund's Disgust

Just east of White Ridge Barrow in the northern climes of Solstheim, among the wild animals and fallen henges, is a makeshift cave entrance below a towering totem stone. Bujold is already waiting for you here when you arrive. Speak with her, and she explains she needs to prove her mettle by taking hold of Hrothmund's axe, which is embedded somewhere inside this tomb. Then she will be judged by Hrothmund's spirit. Enter the barrow.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Commune with Hrothmund's Spirit

Climb the stone steps, push open the iron door, and enter the ceremonial (and waterlogged) long chamber, which drains as you descend and head north-northeast. Follow the path and lit torches to the far end, where an ancient two-handed axe lies embedded into petroglyph stone. Loot either of the two chests whenever you wish, then let Bujold approach the axe and get a good grip, ready for the heave....

Quest Conclusion

Oh dear. It appears Hrothmund's Spirit is extremely unhappy with the way Bujold has been leading her warriors. His words echo through the chamber, sternly calling her soft. Furthermore, no one among her crew is fit to serve, either! For a band in the wilderness, Hrothmund tells her it is better to have no leader than a poor one. Bujold is left wondering what to do next. Speak to Bujold, choosing either conversation option. Bujold thinks it is better that the tribe has her for a leader and to go against Hrothmund's wishes. This leads to one of two choices you can make:

Agree with Bujold, keep this embarrassment quiet, and return to Thirsk Mead Hall. The quest concludes.

Disagree with Bujold, forcing you both into combat with each other, and the objective "Defeat Bujold" appears. Once she is slain, the quest concludes.

Postquest Activities

Return to Thirsk Mead Hall at any time to tie up a few loose ends. The Mead Hall is now tidied up, with a working forge and beds you can sleep on. As you enter, Bujold's husband, Kuvar, steps forward to greet you. If you kept Bujold alive, he mentions that Bujold said you served her well. You can:

Lie and tell him it was an honor to stand with her. You are free to speak to all the tribe.

Tell the truth and speak of her rejection. Kuvar is disgusted, speaks to Bujold about it, and then banishes her from the hall. Kuvar isn't happy with you, but you can speak with the rest of the tribe.

If you killed Bujold, he asks of his wife's whereabouts. You explain the situation, and Kuvar banishes you from the Mead Hall, only forgiving you because you acted on Hrothmund's wishes. Kuvar isn't happy with you, but you can speak with the rest of the tribe.

After this, more Thirsk Mead Hall Favors (see page 672) are available if you speak with Elmus, Halban, or Hilund. You can sleep in the beds here, too.

MINOR SPOILERS

Those Slippery Slaughterfish

NOTE This is one of a few quests you complete by visiting Raven Rock. For a complete list, consult page 606. This quest only occurs after you've completed two other quests in town: The Final Descent (page 622) and March of the Dead (page 632).

During your wanderings around town, after completing the two previously indicated Side Quests for residents of Raven Rock, you're tracked down by Captain Veleth, who comes with a message from Second Councilor Arano.

Apparently, you're to meet with him at once, and this seems more urgent than the Ash Spawn eradication. Head over to the council chambers or check the main thoroughfare when you get a moment.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Adril Arano

◆ TARGET: Adril Arano, Raven Rock

You usually find Adril walking the main street of Raven Rock. He's under the impression that Councilor Morvayn might be murdered by a rival Dunmer Great House—the Ulen Family of House Hlaalu—who have placed a deathmark on the councilor's head. Whether you think this justified or paranoia, answer Adril how you wish, and he informs you that elements of Ulen's house may already be in Raven Rock. Assuming you agree to help, Adril wants you to eavesdrop on suspicious activity in town and report back to him. The best place to start is an obvious one—that den of iniquity known as The Retching Netch. Pry Adril for further information (on House Hlaalu, the mine's reopening, and his sources) before you leave his company.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Geldis Sadi

◆ TARGET: Retching Netch, Raven Rock

Locate The Retching Netch, enter, and head down the stairs to where Geldis Sadi serves the drinks. Aside from the usual rumors he can impart, if you mention Adril Arano, Geldis tells you the Dunmer has been chasing these Ulen's for years. Instead, Geldis reckons you need to let those slippery Slaughterfish come to you. There's an ancestral tomb near the temple, and someone has been leaving offerings there. Perhaps they might be able to answer your questions?

◆ OBJECTIVE: Wait inside Ulen Ancestral Tomb

◆ TARGET: Ulen Ancestral Tomb, Raven Rock

◆ Those Suspicious Severins

You can continue to question Geldis about the reasons behind Councilor Morvayn executing an Ulen before returning to the main thoroughfare and heading southeast. Just before the bulwark, there are several ancestral tombs. Enter the Ulen's and inspect the first chamber. There are many lit candles around a crematorium and bone pile in the center of the room. Find a spot to hide, then wait here for an hour. The Ulen clanswoman responsible for these gifts eventually shows herself.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Discover the identity of the tomb's visitor

You can confront the woman immediately or let events take their course. Tilisu Severin excuses herself for intruding on you, and when you ask what she's here for, she answers evasively, saying she's leaving an offering for the departed. You can leave her to it or press her for a real answer. Even if you choose the latter conversation, she sticks with her story and does not reveal whether she's part of the Ulen family. Time to update the Second Councilor.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Adril Arano

◆ TARGET: Adril Arano, Raven Rock

Adril is usually waiting for your update in the Morvayn Manor, although he may be walking the streets of Raven Rock or be hanging out inside The Retching Netch. Let him know that you suspect Tilisu Severin is the culprit. Adril believes this, too, although it's going to take more than hearsay to prove this plot. After you recommend searching the Severin house, he agrees but wants you to head there so he isn't tied to an illegal search if Tilisu is, in fact, an innocent party. To help gain access, you're given a key. You can gain further insight into the Severin family, and the Ulen's tomb, if you speak to Adril again.

➤ Severin Manor Key

◆ OBJECTIVE: Recover evidence from Severin Manor

◆ TARGET: Severin Manor, Raven Rock

◆ TIP To avoid bloodshed, you may wish to wear your finest sneaking outfit before entering this dwelling.

◆ The Ulen Matter

Head to the northwest of town, near the entrance to Raven Rock Mine, and use the key to enter Severin Manor. Unless you're particularly adept at sneaking, you're immediately attacked by Mirri and Tilisu Severin, who already know you're part of Morvayn's lot. The only option here (unless you're sneaking) is to slay both Dunmer. Search (or pickpocket) both corpses to discover another Severin Manor Key, among other fineries. However, Mirri Severin is carrying a more helpful item—the key to a safe!

➤ Severin Safe Key

chamber thoroughly; next to a wooden bookcase to the left of the bed is the Severin Family Safe [Expert], which you can pick or use the key you looted. Among the gold and other goods is a note called "The Ulen Matter." It makes illuminating reading. Take it and the quest updates. Read the note if you wish.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring the evidence to Adril Arano

◆ TARGET: Adril Arano, Raven Rock

Adril is usually drumming his fingers impatiently in The Retching Netch, although he may be walking the streets of Raven Rock or hanging out inside Morvayn Manor. Tell him you've found evidence providing the Severin family's guilt and that those seeking to usurp Morvayn are holed up in the Ashfallow Citadel. You can whine or tell Adril you'll head there immediately. Adril is sending two of his best Redoran Guard and you're to assist them. You'll meet them there. Be careful: you can't let these traitors slip away!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet up with the Redoran Guard

◆ TARGET: Ashfallow Citadel (exterior)

◆ OBJECTIVE: End the threat to Councilor Morvayn

◆ TARGET: Vendil Severin, Ashfallow Citadel (interior)

◆ Murder and the Morag Tong

Gather your best Dunmer-killing equipment, and hike to the Ashfallow Citadel, northwest of the Sun Stone. Adril's best guards were no match for the infamous Morag Tong, a feared group of Dunmer assassins that have shown themselves and already murdered the Redoran duo. Face two assassins by the door to the citadel, slaying them as soon as you can before moving inside the structure.

NOTE Morag Tong armor is only available from searching the corpses of assassins you slay as you make your way through this citadel. If you managed to sneak past the two Severins in their house, they appear in full regalia during your blood-spilling exploration of the citadel.

➤ Morag Tong Armor

➤ Morag Tong Boots

➤ Morag Tong Bracers

➤ Morag Tong Hood

Locate the steps down from the top of this tower, and prepare for further combat as you descend. Slay a Morag Tong and head to the base of the structure, passing a chest and heading through a narrow rock wall opening and a connecting passage to the south. This leads to a main dungeon corridor. Ahead is an open door to your right (west); clear this dormitory of assassins and any other incoming foes, then head back to the main corridor and locate a small chamber with an Arcane Enchanter and a pull chain by the entrance. Yank the chain to remove the bars.

Continue into the next section of corridor, noting the three Morag Tong Assassins that must be brought down. Don't pull chain on the left wall (it raises the bars behind you). Now check the passageway to the right (west), watching out for three bear traps before you reach another chain. Pull that and the first set of bars is removed. Now continue down to the training room on your left (east). Outside that door is a third chain, opening up the next part of the corridor.

In the next part of the corridor are eight pressure plates linked to three separate blade traps and two spear traps, so take extreme care as you tread forward. The safest way to reach the two pull chains in the alcove to your right (west) is to look down and avoid all pressure plates, then maneuver past the alcove. Turn right and edge between the left wall of the alcove and a swinging trap. Watch for more plates as you look for two pull chains, both on the pillars in this alcove. They open the two remaining bars.

This allows you to reach the far chamber. Ignore the pull chain to your right, just before the final arched entrance, as this simply raises the bars directly behind you, cutting off your only exit. The chief instigator of this clandestine war against Chancellor Morvayn is Vendil Severin. You must slay him, along with his fellow assassins. When Vendil finally yields, check his corpse for the key to his chest (the exact location is in the nearby bedroom, as shown in this guide's Atlas, on page 1056).

➤ Vendil Ulen's Chest Key

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Adril Arano

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Adril Arano

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Councilor Morvayn

◆ TARGET: Adril Arano, Raven Rock

Quest Conclusion

Head back and search Adril Arano's usual haunts to find him. After explaining that the threat is over, and his Redoran Guards were victims of the Morag Tong, Adril beckons you to follow him to Morvayn Manor and meet with Councilor Lleril Morvayn. Follow Adril to an audience with Lleril, who is told that Vendil, Tilisu, and Mirri Severin were, in fact, here to avenge Vilur Ulen's death. Morvayn wants to speak to you personally. He offers his thanks, and as a bit of coin hardly seems like enough, you're given the deeds and keys to Severin Manor! Welcome, citizen of Raven Rock!

◆ TARGET: Ralis Sedarys, Kolbjorn Barrow

Once you have the money, return to Ralis, and ask if he's looking for a partner. He's agreeable, as long as you manage the coin and he manages the dig. Offer him the 1,000 gold, giving him enough to hire a few lackeys and dig down deeper. But that will take time, so he'll send word when the tomb entrance is found.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Wait for a message from Ralis

◆ TARGET: Courier, any settlement

TIP Don't worry, Ralis may be a Dunmer, but he's an elf of his word: you aren't throwing your coin away. You will see dividends as the excavation continues...providing your septims keep coming!

If you return to Kolbjorn Barrow after paying Ralis but before he sends for you, you can watch the miners at work. However, you can't assist them; just stay out of their way and let them get back to their digging.

◆ Uncovering Kolbjorn Barrow

During your travels through Solstheim, you can learn about Kolbjorn Barrow from a variety of sources. There are several ways to begin this quest:

Read the book Ahzidal's Descent.

There are a number of copies scattered around Solstheim. For example, in Tel Mithryn, on a table close to the floating lift in Neloht's chamber, or in Raven Rock, on Glover Mallory's bedroom shelf, on the second floor of his house.

Visit The Retching Netch in Raven Rock and speak to Geldis the innkeeper about rumors. He mentions a Dunmer named Ralis is up at the Barrow.

Or, you can simply stumble upon the Barrow, just southeast of Raven Rock, on the upper plateau overlooking the sea.

► Book: Ahzidal's Descent

◆ OBJECTIVE: Investigate Kolbjorn Barrow

◆ Digging with a Dark Elf

As you approach Kolbjorn Barrow, buried by the ash from Red Mountain, you'll spot a Dunmer named Ralis Sedarys (and his nearby journal on a bed of hay). Ralis is an explorer from Mournhold who came to Solstheim in search of the Relics of Ahzidal, a set of powerful enchanted items said to have been entombed below.

Journey away from the Barrow, to any main settlement on the island (such as Tel Mithryn or Raven Rock), and wait three days. Occupy yourself with other quests or simply sleep until the time has passed. Then Fast-Travel to a different settlement. A courier approaches with a parchment for your eyes only. Ralis seemed excited when he handed the message to the courier.

► Letter from Ralis Sedarys 1

◆ OBJECTIVE: Visit the Kolbjorn Barrow Excavation

◆ TARGET: Ralis Sedarys, Kolbjorn Barrow

◆ Phase 1: Disturbing the Draugr Dead

Upon your return, it appears your money has been spent; there are miner tents and Ralis is on-site, moaning that something managed to wake the Draugr within the crypt. All the miners are dead, and only Ralis escaped. Unless you're prepared to deal with the draugr, the whole venture is over.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Clear the Draugr from Kolbjorn Barrow

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find a way deeper into the Barrow

◆ TARGET: Kolbjorn Barrow

The miners dug out the entrance, allowing you access down past their bloodied corpses and into an initial burial chamber, where they apparently hit a dead end. Expect at least six Draugr to contend with, both in the main path and from the four raised crypt corners. Once you've embedded your preferred weapons into their rotted hides, one of your objectives completes. But you still need to find a way onward.

Locate the main altar in the center of the burial chamber, and study the strange red skull. Lift it from its pressure plate, and a rotating wall arch ahead of you grinds open. Your objective updates, but don't leave just yet. Head into the newly opened chamber, and you'll see that a lot more digging is in your future. But Ralis's information appears to have been correct—a unique pair of boots sits on the pedestal directly ahead of you.

► Skull

- Ahzidal's Boots of Waterwalking (Waterwalking ability, +10 Enchanting if four Relics of Ahzidal are worn)

TIP Other than Vampire Lord form and the (exceedingly rare) Potions of Waterwalking, Ahzidal's Boots of Waterwalking are one of the only ways to acquire the Waterwalking ability. Being able to walk, sprint, Whirlwind Sprint, and even jump across the water can make exploring some waterlogged caves and crypts significantly easier. Remember that you can always take the boots off if you need to swim through a submerged passage.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Ralis

◆ OBJECTIVE: Fund the next phase of the excavation (2,000 gold)

◆ TARGET: Ralis Sedarys, Kolbjorn Barrow

Head back to the surface, and inform Ralis that his barrow is Draugr-free. He's moderately happy but needs to recruit more miners. This won't be an easy sell, as their friends recently perished here. When you're prepared (or able) to part with 2,000 gold, hand it to Ralis, who tells you it will take a few days to dig up more laborers. Why not swing back when you get a chance?

◆ OBJECTIVE: Wait for a message from Ralis

◆ TARGET: Courier, any settlement

Just as you did before, you must head away from the barrow and drum your fingers for three days. After 72 hours of occupying yourself with other tasks, head to a settlement and locate a courier, who has another message from Ralis.

- Letter from Ralis Sedarys 2

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Kolbjorn Barrow

◆ TARGET: Ralis Sedarys, Kolbjorn Barrow

Phase 2: Deeper with the Dead

As you arrive, it seems your cash injection has been spent; there's a cooking pot and two more tents, and the place is starting to look like an excavation site rather than a hunter's camp. Ralis isn't happy, though; more Draugr have emerged. At least six miners are dead, and the rest have fled. Perhaps a few are hiding or trapped down there?

◆ OBJECTIVE: Clear the Draugr from Kolbjorn Barrow

◆ OBJECTIVE: Search for the missing miners

◆ TARGET: Kolbjorn Barrow

Concern yourself first with eradicating the rotting Nords; head into the initial crypt area and lay waste to the foes appearing from the crypt walls and in the main corridor. Then head deeper (northwest) into the barrow. A toughened Draugr attacks from a circular platform; slay the fiend with ranged weapons or spells.

With the Draugr defeated, head under the narrow bridge to locate the two compass targets (the miners) in the crypt ahead. Bradyn is on the lower floor to your left (west). He's quite dead. However, prepare for more Draugr combat as you reach his corpse; kill three more foes and then venture farther (northwest) into the crypt, yanking the pull chain on the candlelit alcove ahead of you.

This opens a rotating door to your right (east), exposing a tough Draugr to tackle. Once he's down, pull a second chain in this new chamber's alcove, which opens a rotating door to the southwest, behind you. This leads to the upper crypt and another Draugr. Slay it, step around the pressure plate so the magic caster trap isn't triggered, then move to the portcullis puzzle with four handles to the right of it.

Puzzle Solution: The top handle releases the first portcullis. The second releases darts, so ignore it. The third and fourth handles together release the remaining portcullises, so pull them and continue up.

In the upper crypt area are the splattered remains of Mireli. Take the letter on her body if you wish, then inspect the blocked passageways up here. It isn't long before four additional Draugr show themselves. Wipe them out to complete the remaining objective. Before you leave, you might as well pocket another fabled item. Locate the seeming dead end to the northeast, hunting for a low handle on the protruding wall to your right, which slides open a secret alcove allowing you to pick up Ahzidal's Ring!

- Mireli's Letter to Mother
- Ahzidal's Ring of Necromancy (whenever a creature you have reanimated takes damage, they explode for 50 points of Frost Damage and die)

TIP Is this ring worth it? It depends. Causing a weak creature to explode for 50 points of Frost Damage in a large radius may improve their damage output, but stronger creatures might have done more damage on their own. Also, wearing this ring prevents reanimated (but not summoned) creatures from taking damage on your behalf, since the first hit will kill them instantly.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Ralis

◆ OBJECTIVE: Fund the next phase of the excavation (3,000 gold)

◆ TARGET: Ralis Sedarys, Kolbjorn Barrow

NOTE Can you hear the faint chant of a Word Wall? It is in the second chamber, buried under ash and rubble. You can't reach it yet.

Return to the surface and locate the dour Dunmer, informing him of the death down below. This hazard pay keeps piling up, and he now needs additional (some might say ludicrous) funds to continue this expedition. When your coffers can handle this outlay, hand it over and wait for Ralis to hire some brawny types to keep the new miners safe. Naturally, this will take a few days.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Wait for a message from Ralis

◆ TARGET: Courier, any settlement

You know the plan by now; move away from the barrow and attempt other tasks or wait for three days. After 72 hours, saunter into a settlement and locate a courier, who has another message from Ralis. Apparently Ralis is starting to scare the letter carriers.

- Letter from Ralis Sedarys 3

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Kolbjorn Barrow

◆ TARGET: Ralis Sedarys, Kolbjorn Barrow

Phase 3: Disturbing More Draugr

Upon your return, the barrow is almost bustling, with more tents and at least one living miner. So that's encouraging! However, Ralis is less than thrilled as he tells you of yet another disaster: More Draugr have been uncovered! Your objective is as clear as the sunken eyes on Ralis's face.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Clear the Draugr from Kolbjorn Barrow

◆ TARGET: Kolbjorn Barrow

Expect two foes in the initial chamber, another in the main chamber by the pedestal, and the excavation to have cleared out much of the room. Cross the bridge and head into the two-story crypt you explored last time and bring death to the Draugr inside. Continue down the stairs to the lower level where a sarcophagus has been uncovered (a Draugr bashes its way out to meet your blades), and a locked iron door blocks your progress [Expert]. Pick this lock to reach a hidden antechamber with spiders to crush and a chest to inspect. Head down the stairs and deal with another foe, and you can see back out to the central chamber.

Press on to explore more of the catacombs. In the newly opened room, locate a wall chain and pull it, which opens a hidden room to the northeast, where you find Ahzidal's Gauntlets.

- Ahzidal's Gauntlets of Warding (your Wards are 25% less effective but absorb 50% of the Magicka from incoming spells)

TIP Although the gauntlets cause your Wards to block less damage, the increased Magicka absorption allows you to keep them up for longer. In a protracted battle with sorcerous foes, this may give you an edge.

Backtrack to the room with the wall chain and open the iron door. This leads to a wide tunnel with a rockfall trap that can remove Draugr threats ahead of you. Head down the stairs, turn southeast, then go up the steps and into a large sacrificial chamber. Expect to fight two or three Draugr at first, and then another three before you clear the barrow of foes. Before you leave, check the room for dead miners and guards, then look to the left (northeast), into a small antechamber with a pedestal, upon which rests a ring. You can open the portcullis by quickly sprinting across all of the pressure plates so they activate (light up), or simply snatch the ring through the closed grate using the Telekinesis spell.

- Ahzidal's Ring of Arcana (allows you to cast the spells Freeze and Ignite)

TIP Don't recognize those spells? Freeze and Ignite are unique to this ring and can't be acquired in any other way. Both have low casting costs and long-duration versions of their element's secondary effect, slowing or setting foes on fire for quite some time. Use Freeze on melee foes (especially bosses) to slow their movement and attack speed. Use Ignite to inflict heavy fire damage. Multiple castings of Ignite are cumulative, and each does the same damage as the powerful Incinerate spell, just over a longer duration.

NOTE Has your objective not updated? You may have missed a Draugr at the entrance or in an earlier chamber. Keep searching until you slay them all.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Ralis
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Fund the next phase of the excavation (5,000 gold)
- ◆ TARGET: Ralis Sedarys, Kolbjorn Barrow

Head up the side steps in the sacrificial room and yank a chain to open the portcullis, watching for a subsequent blade trap and another chain that opens a quicker way back to the second chamber. Climb the wooden walkways and exit the barrow. Ralis is pleased at your Draugr dispatching but fears it's going to be everything he can do to find more miners. Got any spare change? Dig into your breeches and come up with an amazing amount of gold so he can hire some experienced muscle. Stop back in a few days to see what's been uncovered.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Wait for a message from Ralis
- ◆ TARGET: Courier, any settlement

Execute the "wait around for Ralis" plan once more. After three more days, a courier appears, telling you this is the last time he's visiting that place.

➤ Letter from Ralis Sedarys 4

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Kolbjorn Barrow
- ◆ TARGET: Ralis Sedarys, Kolbjorn Barrow

▶ Phase 4: Curse of the Dragon Acolyte

The camp is more like a small settlement now, with numerous tents but few miners. Optionally, you may want to enter Ralis's tent and read some of his journals. Volume 23 is most illuminating, as the Dunmer appears to have been in league with (or driven mad by) Lord Ahzidal! No wonder there were so many deaths!

➤ The Journal of Ralis Sedarys, vol. 23

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate Ralis
- ◆ TARGET: Ralis Sedarys, Kolbjorn Barrow

Descend into this barrow once more. This time, it isn't necessary to remove all Draugr you encounter, but your rage at paying for Ralis's sacrificial victims may have sent you into a fury. Gain some reward by descending the second chamber and approaching the Word Wall, learning the Word of Power before continuing and optionally taking the short route back to the sacrificial chamber. Yank the overhead pull chain to reactivate the blade traps and let them deal with some of the Draugr. Then press on and deal with the ones that await you in the sacrificial chamber.

Continue down the newly opened tunnel to a throne chamber with three Draugr to slay as they rise from their seats. After that, ponder a small puzzle:

Puzzle Solution I:

There's a relic sealed in a small alcove here. Face north and south and pull each chain to rotate the wall so a whale petroglyph is exposed in opposite alcoves. Behind the two thrones are rotating pedestals. Shift both of them to the whale and pull the lever between them. The bars retract, allowing you to grab Ahzidal's Armor.

➤ Ahzidal's Armor of Retribution (enemies who strike you with a melee attack have a small chance of being paralyzed)

TIP The chance of actually paralyzing a foe in this way is small, but when it occurs, the unlucky enemy will be at your mercy.

Puzzle Solution II: Further progress is stalled. To continue you must open the central trapdoor. Opposite the pedestals are carvings of two hawk petroglyphs. Turn the pedestals so they are both hawks, pull the lever, and the trapdoor opens.

Descend the spiral steps, passing the scattered potions on the ceremonial table, then move into the lower crypts. Remove a Draugr to the right of the entrance before setting the floor ahead ablaze (via magic or a falling oil lamp shot by your bow). This helps remove the four Draugr in the main corridor and stops the forthcoming puzzle from burning you, if you're incorrect in your choices. Turn right (northeast).

Puzzle Solution: Ahead is a portcullis with a chain and two petroglyph pedestals. If you pull the chain, a fire trap engulfs you. Instead, turn the pedestals so the serpent petroglyph points at the ground marking on each pedestal. This is the third of the puzzles, and two serpents is the only remaining pair that hasn't been chosen. Pull the chain and claim Ahzidal's Helm. Watch for another fire trap as you take it!

➤ Ahzidal's Helm of Vision (your Conjuraton and Rune spells cost 25% more but can be cast at greater range)

TIP The helm increases the range at which you can cast these spells by one range increment—about 30 feet. This is less than the increase offered by some Conjuraton perks, but every bit helps. Note that you may want to unequip the helm if you regularly use other Conjuraton spells (like bound weapons), as it increases their costs without giving you any corresponding benefit.

Pass the sarcophagus with the Stalhrim deposit (which you may want to mine if you have an Ancient Nordic Pickaxe handy), and move to the door opposite (southwest).

Into Ahzidal's Clutches

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat Ahzidal
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Confront Ralis
- ◆ TARGET: Ralis Sedarys, Kolbjorn Barrow

Ralis is either mad or under the influence of an ancient power; he is attempting to summon Ahzidal! Unfortunately, he's successful! Expect waves of Draugr to crash out of wall crypts, with Ahzidal raising them to fight again when they fall. Concentrate your force on Ahzidal, countering his fire-based attacks and using the columns around the chamber to hide behind. When the fighting ends, check the ashes for his mask.

- Ahzidal (increases Fire Resistance by 50% and Fire spell damage by 25%)

Quest Conclusion

Ralis sways a little, confused over what just happened. Did he pocket your gold and take you for a fool? Or was he summoned here as a thrall? Did he kill all the miners under the influence of Ahzidal? He doesn't know for sure.

But you can determine whether he lives or not. You can:

Believe him but tell him never to return. He agrees. The quest ends.

Or tell him he can't go unpunished. The objective "Kill Ralis" begins. Fight and slay him. The quest ends.

Postquest Activities: The Relics of Ahzidal

- Set Bonus: Ahzidal's Genius (+10 Enchanting while wearing any four Relics of Ahzidal)

NOTE You receive this bonus for wearing any four items. Although this ability is listed on the boots, you don't actually have to be wearing them. Ahzidal's Mask will count. There's no extra bonus for wearing more than four pieces.

Interestingly, like the abilities on the individual items, this set bonus is also unique: no other armor confers a bonus to your Enchanting skill.

Postquest Activities: The Fate of Ralis

If you kill Ralis: You'll find little of the 11,000 septims you've spent. In fact, only Hoarfrost, his unique Ancient Nordic Pickaxe, is of any real worth.

If you don't kill Ralis: You'll find him in The Retching Netch in Raven Rock. Speak to him and he'll lend you his expertise as a Follower if you want him (see page 103). You can pilfer his pickaxe after he joins you.

- Follower: Ralis

- Hoarfrost (targets take 15 points of Frost damage to Health and Stamina and have a small chance of being frozen solid.)

NOTE Hoarfrost really is an Ancient Nordic Pickaxe, with all that entails. You can use it to mine the veins of Stalhrim you find on Solstheim.

Postquest Activities: Black Books

Leave Kolbjorn Barrow via the gap in the sarcophagus to the southwest, passing a large chest before reaching a pull chain and allowing access into a strange and terrible chamber. Here you find an effigy of Hermaeus Mora, another huge chest and assorted items, and a fabled Black Book. This begins Solstheim Side Quest: Black Book: Filament and Filigree. Consult page 608 for further information.

- Black Book: Filament and Filigree

Whether you're reading this book or not, exit to the northeast, noting the Stalhrim deposit before activating a lever to summon a rotating staircase down to your level. Ascend, and you emerge in the main chamber.

PREREQUISITES: This quest is repeatable.

THE CHALLENGES OF KAGRUMEZ*

PREREQUISITES: Obtain four Kagrumez Resonance Gems

MINOR SPOILERS

LOCATIONS: Fahlbtharz, Kagrumez, Nchardak, The Silt Strider

CHARACTERS: Neloth, Revus Sarvani, Steadfast Dwarven Sphere, Steadfast Dwarven Spider

ENEMIES: Dwarven Ballista, Dwarven Centurion, Dwarven Sphere, Dwarven Spider, Reaver, Riekling, Tempered Sphere

◆ OBJECTIVES: Find Resonance Gems across Solstheim to complete the Kagrumez trials

A Gem of a Find

While exploring Solstheim, you may uncover an odd item or two. Among them may be a white and slightly glowing precious stone, shaped to fit into a slot. This is a Kagrumez Resonance Gem, and there are three scattered across Solstheim and two within the Dwarven ruin of Kagrumez.

NOTE You require only four of the five gems to complete the challenges within Kagrumez.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Find Resonance Gems across Solstheim to complete the Kagrumez trials

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest menu list, although objectives may.

Gem 1: The Expensive Trinket of Revus Sarvani

One gem can be purchased (for over 1,000 gold) from Revus Sarvani, the Silt Strider wrangler who is moored just east of Tel Mithryn.

➤ Kagrumez Resonance Gem

Gem 2: The Elaborate Exploration of Fahlbtharz

This gem requires far more exploring, through the high mountains to the northwest to Fahlbtharz, a dwarven ruin appropriated by Riekling. If you wish to further your knowledge of the interior of this sprawling dwemer city, consult the nearby information.

Defeat the rider and three or four spear-throwing foes on the rickety battlements, then enter the door to the north. Enter the sloping stone corridor, through a Riekling camp with three or four foes, and descend south, passing the Riekling corpses and engaging Automaton farther down.

Aside from a locked door [Novice] to items, this chamber features barred windows overlooking the gigantic cranking mechanisms of the water chamber and a shut gate. Activate the gate at the bank of buttons; look for the second button from the right side, along the bottom row, to open this (the rest launch traps or nothing at all).

Watch for releasing Dwarven Spiders as you head east along the corridor and open a door. Pass the Kinetic Resonator, which you can hit with a weapon or arrow to unlock the adjacent gate, passing a wall-chest and winding around and down an oil-filled, pipe-spilled corridor with scuttling Oil Spiders to squash. Light the trail of oil first to avoid any potential dangers. Slash a second Resonator encased in cobwebs to open a subsequent gate and a lower set of chambers with glowing fungi and Dwarven Automaton. Then head south, opening the door to reach the water chamber.

Initially bewildering, it is worth stopping and working out where you are in this chamber (and check the map on page 1014). Face south and check your location; ahead is a pointed gatehouse with a gap you can't reach. So head right (west) and through a second (open) gatehouse to peer down to a set of giant cogs. You can't access these from the water, so face south and drop down, heading southwest (ignoring or fighting the spiders that clamber out of the central part of the cog). Stay on the cogs until you reach the door to Fahlbtharz Corridor.

Pass the gate [Adept] leading to an alcove chest, and ascend back to the door to Fahlbtharz. You appear on a balcony. Turn left (north), up the steps to a valve that lowers a ramp, allowing you quicker access back here if you fall. Pull the adjacent lever, opening up a bridge to the east. Head along the connecting bridges and gatehouses, then turn left (north) and engage a ballista. Now face east.

Look down at the whirring cogs and drop down to the bloody remains of a bandit adventurer named Eydis. Her journal reveals she was exploring to find an enchanted Dwarven

Helm with her friend Ulyn. Head east along the cogs to the edge of the water chamber, and up the steps to a door leading to Fahlbtharz Boilery. Ignore the door for the moment, and go to the end of the balcony you're on. Activate a valve that lowers two more ramps, enabling progress back here if need be.

➤ Eydis's Journal

Enter the boilery door, heading east, then north, and east again, before moving around to the south through a strange chamber of pistons, pipes, and embedded machinery. Slay the ballista and climb the steps in the southeast corner, leading to a balcony with a corpse clutching a bow; arrows are nearby. These are the remains of Ulyn, and his journal reveals clues to the secrets of the boilery puzzle you must solve.

Puzzle Solution: Face the circular piston lock to the west. There are six Kinetic Resonators (the propeller devices glowing turquoise, three on either side of the main lock). To open the subsequent gate, you must pull all 20 fuel cylinders into place, activating the boiler. This is achieved by shooting an arrow at some of the resonators. Each resonator activates a specific number of cylinders. Shoot too few and nothing happens. Shoot too many and an increasingly dangerous number of Automatons are released and must be defeated. Each resonator has a set number of cylinders that it releases:

✓ RESONATOR	CYLINDERS RELEASED
<input type="checkbox"/> Far left	3
<input type="checkbox"/> Middle Left	4
<input type="checkbox"/> Near Left	6
<input type="checkbox"/> Near Right	9
<input type="checkbox"/> Middle Right	13
<input type="checkbox"/> Far Right	18

To reach 20 fuel cylinders, you need to shoot the far left (3), middle left (4), and middle right (13) resonators.

TIP You can also use ranged spells, or search the room for dwarven arrows if you run out of ammunition. Or, you can strike the pipes with a weapon.

► Ulyn's Journal

Exit via the open gate to the southwest, climbing the stairs and swiping another resonator to open the adjacent gate (saving time if you have to retake this route) and move back into the water chamber of Fahlbtharz.

Activate the lever and head across the bridge that grinds your way. Move west to the edge of the bridge, then turn right (north). Jump onto the cogs, moving west, and leap to a second bridge and gatehouse section.

Head west to a battle with a ballista near a chest and a resonator (in the gatehouse with a skeleton) to shoot (there's a bow by the skeleton in case you don't have ranged magic or weapons). This aligns the bridges you were on at the previous lever.

Wait! Make sure you're standing on the bridge section facing west, with the kinetic resonator diagonally left (southwest) of you! When you hit the resonator, ride the bridge. If you aren't standing correctly, you need to retrace your steps. Now turn and run south across the bridges to the Fahlbtharz Grand Hall.

Clear away the Albino and Oil Spiders, and battle two Dwarven Ballistas immediately. There are two Centurions in this chamber, so it is wise to weed out your foes before you face them!

Move to the walkway on the upper level and inspect three pedestals (known as Dynamo Actuators) that require a core to operate. Fortunately, you can wrench these from a Centurion corpse. Fire or strike one of the Centurions in their casing before battling it. Then repeat this plan with the other. Scrounge a Centurion Dynamo Core from each Centurion, allowing you to raise steps and remove two sets of bars to the treasure room.

► Centurion Dynamo Core (2)

Inspect the treasure room thoroughly. Aside from piles of gold, chests, and the unique dwarven helm Visage of Mzund, the Kagrumez Resonance Gem is on a plate. Take what you wish, then leave via the dwarven elevator to the left (east).

► Visage of Mzund

► Kagrumez Resonance Gem

Gem 3: The Entering of Nchardak Aqueduct

The third Kagrumez Resonance Gem is located in a treasure chamber on the upper floor of the northeast corner of Nchardak Aqueduct (past a control switch that you place a Control Cube on to open). For a complete walkthrough of this dwarven ruin, consult Dragonborn Main Quest: The Path of Knowledge, on page 594. The gem is flagged in that quest.

► Kagrumez Resonance Gem

NOTE Phew! Now that convoluted gem-collecting is over and you've found one (or two or three) of the gems, make your way to Kagrumez, which is south of the Temple of Miraak. Remember! You need four gems to unlock all the trials, not five!

Kagrumez Trials and Tribulations

Gems 4 and 5: The Easiest—Removing from a Reaver

Kagrumez has an entrance sunken into the earth. Head past the small Reaver camp, and descend the steps to the dwarven elevator, opening the entrance to Kagrumez. Head east, down the corridor to a golden door, behind which you can hear voices. A Reaver is talking about entities coming out of the walls and to return with more men. Another replies they have the mettle to slay a few spiders before claiming the treasure of Kagrumez.

Open the door and announce your arrival with a well-placed ranged attack at one of the three foes, then finish them off in this huge chamber of trials. Search the leader's corpse for two more gems. There is a small journal to read, too, offering hints at what is to come. Read it if you wish.

➤ Kagrumez Resonance Gem (2)

➤ Raleth Eldri's Notes on Kagrumez

TIP These two gems allow you to complete the first trial without finding any of the others. However, you must secure two more gems to access the remaining trials.

Inspect the chamber of trials. In the center is a resonance receptacle with nine holes. This receives any Kagrumez Resonance Gems you wish to insert, and you can remove them without any problems. However, the order of placement is critical. Make a quick check of your room, and look to the northern gate. Above it is a resonance marker—a golden plate with the fourth and ninth holes covered. Return to the receptacle and mimic that pattern.

TIP You'll know when you're correct, as a giant cage shoots up all around you!

Trial 1: Automaton Attack

Stone walls rumble across, sealing you in, and the circular cage lifts up to reveal the incoming foes: three Dwarven Spiders and three Dwarven Ballistas.

After this fight, the walls recede, allowing you to head through the northern gate, which is now open. Head up the passage, where among shelves of ingots is a lever that opens a strange cage. Inside is an automaton that doesn't take an instant dislike to you. In fact, it can act in the same way as an Animal Companion. It can fight alongside you or "go home" (which is here). See page 104 for more information.

➤ Follower: Steadfast Dwarven Spider

On the east wall is a gate. Above it is a resonance marker with the second, eighth, and ninth holes covered. Return back to the central receptacle in the main chamber and insert that pattern.

Trial 2: Flame and Fireproof Spheres

The cage walls shoot up, sealing you in, and walls clamp together around you. Two flame gouts shoot vertically, while steam blasts between the walls on the east and west sides. Toward the north and south edges of the arena are rotating fire pedestals that activate when you move near them. Stay on the outer edges or the middle of the arena when fighting. Tackle these waves as you navigate the fire: Dwarven Spiders (5) and Tempered Spheres (2), which are immune to fire damage.

After the battle, the walls recede again. Head north, then east past the second gate (now open), and south into another chamber with a lever to pull. This reveals a new automaton to control: the Steadfast Dwarven Sphere! Choose this or the Spider to aid you further, if you wish.

➤ Follower: Steadfast Dwarven Sphere

To the room's southwest is a gate. Above it is a resonance marker with the first, fifth, seventh, and ninth holes covered. Return to the central receptacle in the main chamber and insert that pattern.

▶ Trial 3: A Short, Sharp Shock

The cage walls shoot up again, and the chamber fills ankle-deep in water, with islands in the center and around the edges. Expect shock damage (which is extra-nasty if you're in the water) from the following foes as you navigate the water:

Tempered Spheres (2), Dwarven Ballistas (2), and Dwarven Spiders (3).

Quest Conclusion

After the battle, the water recedes, and you can retrace your steps all the way to the southwest gate (which is open) and head up to a long hall (where your Miscellaneous Objective ends). Among the other treasures is the Dwarven Black Bow of Fate, an impressive haul for your final prize.

▶ Fetching for Fethis

Fethis Alor is a merchant by trade and has a general goods store in Raven Rock. When he's not squabbling with his daughter Dreylla, he's worrying about his livelihood. You have a number of conversation choices when speaking with him:

You can ask about how his sales are. They aren't good: He's thinking about contacting a friend at the East Empire Company to see if he can move to Windhelm. Then he drops the name of Vittoria Vici.

To begin this Miscellaneous Objective, ask about the special mining gear. He doesn't sell any but does mention East Empire Pendants. He made money from them, until he ran out. He explains the pendants were rewards given to workers for their efforts, and now they're collectible. He wants as many as you can find.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Locate the East Empire Pendants for Fethis Alor in Raven Rock

You can now scour the island for East Empire Pendants. It is worth remembering the following:

These are always found in East Empire Strongboxes, which are always locked [Expert].

There are other (random) valuables within the strongboxes.

The strongboxes are located at Primary and Secondary Locations throughout Solstheim.

There are other strongboxes, too, but these aren't specifically marked and don't contain Pendants.

There are no Pendants to be found in Skyrim; they are only here, on Solstheim.

Some of the Pendants are owned and must be stolen (although you can sometimes take them after completing an appropriate Favor for their owner). If you elect to steal them, be cautious, or you may well be caught and fined (at the very least).

You can collect any or all of the 33 pendants, but there is no special reward for finding them all—just the gold. Simply retrieve the ones you wish.

KARSTAAG'S RESURRECTION*

MINOR SPOILERS

LOCATIONS: Castle Karstaag Caverns,
Castle Karstaag Ruins, Glacial Cave

CHARACTERS: None

ENEMIES: Horker, Karstaag, Mounted Riekling, Riekling

◇ OBJECTIVES: None

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest menu list, although objectives may.

◇ An Audience with Karstaag

Emerge from Glacial Cave and make your way up the steep snowy slopes toward Castle Karstaag Caverns and Castle Karstaag Ruins. These are massive mounds of ice and rock, rather than crenellations of stone, and look just like a mountain. You can enter Castle Karstaag Courtyard, where Karstaag's remaining bones can be found, in one of two ways:

◇ Headless and Furious

Solstheim's ancient tales speak of a frost giant lord both frightening and furious. This brute is said to have died more than 200 years ago, during the time of the Bloodmoon. Perhaps it is time for this gargantuan terror to stalk the northern lands once more? If you're keen on this idea, you should first visit the Glacial Cave, north of Saering's Watch below the glaciers along the northern shores of Solstheim. Expect lounging Horkers on the ice floes as you near.

Inside, an ice tunnel winds south, flanked by the trinkets of a Riekling clan. The cave is home to three easily defeated Rieklings. Search their belongings, but the real prize is at the eastern end of the cave. Embedded in the wall, as part of what looks like a very basic shrine, is a horned skull of a frost giant. Remove it from the ice.

➤ Karstaag's Skull

The Short Way: Master of Unlocking

Travel to the south side of Castle Karstaag Ruins and face north. The entrance is an ice door to the north, with an infernal lock to pick [Master]. If you're able to open this door, you need not fight through the caverns.

The Long Way: Castle Cavern Slogging

Otherwise, you're in for a slog through the Castle Karstaag Caverns. Find the raging mountain stream and look to the west to find the cave entrance. Clamber to the top of the passage, look left (south), and venture into a massive ice cavern with at least five Rieklings. Head along the broken ice, passing the corpse of Esmond Tyne (who has an excellent formula for Bonemold Armor, part of Raven Rock Regional Activity: Thievery and the Karstaag Connection). Now climb the icy banks, fighting Rieklings before crossing a bridge heading west into a narrow vertical fissure passage.

► Bonemold Formula

Navigate the ice chamber with the campfire and several more Rieklings. Open the ice door to the west, and unlock any of the other doors [Apprentice, Novice, and Novice] to reach small alcoves with minor items. Head east, through another ice door, up the passage to the top of the camp room, and head left (southeast) through the exit, back out onto an upper walkway of the massive ice cavern. Deal with three or four more Rieklings before crossing the long wooden bridge heading east.

Slay two more Rieklings on the far side of the bridge, then head up the ice tunnel, peering down to a Bristleback pen with four animals and a Rieklings; ignore or slay it. Check the chest under the outcropping [Novice], then move back up the path to an ice door. This leads out to the highest part of the initial ice cavern. Dispatch two foes, cross the bridges heading southwest toward a couple more foes, and claim one more chest (plus two more nearby, if you can reach them; consult the Atlas for details). Head out the open ice door to a tunnel that brings you into Castle Karstaag Courtyard.

▣ Summoning a Mighty Terror

NOTE This courtyard is the entirety of the interior of Castle Karstaag Ruins. You access this chamber via the short or long routes described above.

You emerge into the ruined shell of the once-great Castle Karstaag. A group of Rieklings immediately sets upon you; engage the Mounted Rieklings first, then slay his two infantry lackeys. It is important to search the Mounted Rieklings, as he is carrying the key allowing a swift exit through the ice door in the south wall [Master] (unless you picked that lock on your way in). Then approach the icy throne of Karstaag, where a scattering of giant bones rests between two ice torches. Are you ready to meet Karstaag? Then activate the Throne, place Karstaag's Skull, and prepare yourself!

► Castle Karstaag Key

The following battle is fraught with difficulty! Remember that you can flee through the south ice door at any time if the fight isn't going your way.

CAUTION

▣ Karstaag: The Glacial Guardian

Know Your Enemy

Before facing Karstaag, it's important to know what dangers you're up against and to have a plan for dealing with the threats this behemoth poses:

Almost Omnipotent: Karstaag is a high-level opponent, with massive reserves of health and devastating attacks. Although there's no "hard" level requirement, you should plan to be Level 50 or higher before you take him on.

Fire and Ice: Karstaag has high health (4,000) and rapidly regenerates his health—fast enough that some weapons and spells may not do any meaningful damage to him at all. However, he does have one weakness—fire damage will stop his regeneration for as long as it lasts. Most flame spells inflict Burning for a few seconds, but by far the most effective at this is Ignite (available only through Ahzidal's Ring of Arcana, found in Solstheim Side Quest: Unearthed), which deals its damage over 15 seconds. Use it, or your highest-damage fire weapons or flame spells, to wear him down. The Marked for Death Shout is also effective at weakening his defenses.

A Frosty Reception: Most of Karstaag's attacks and abilities inflict Frost damage—he has Frost Cloak, casts Blizzard, summons Ice Wraiths, and his club has a Frost enchantment. Armor and/or potions that increase your Frost and Magic resistance are critical.

Stay Away: Karstaag's attacks cause obscene damage—enough to slay a Dragon Priest in a few hits! Warriors with well-tempered Daedric Armor and high health may be able to stand up to him. Every other adventurer should plan to stay well out of his way—Karstaag is slow enough that if you keep moving and avoid backing yourself into a corner, you can generally avoid getting hit.

No Mean Feet: When Karstaag first appears, and each time he performs a stomp attack, a powerful blizzard is triggered at his location. If you are standing nearby, you will be flung backward—leaving you defenseless for several seconds. If you decide to fight Karstaag in melee, make sure to block when he prepares to stomp; this will negate the Blizzard's knockback, though not its damage.

The Cold Shoulder: Karstaag is constantly surrounded by a Frost Cloak that makes melee combat even more difficult. While it is possible to dispel his cloak for a time (using Soulrender, found in Solstheim Side Quest: Deathbrand), it will be renewed when Karstaag next performs his ground stomp.

Karstaag's Minions: When Karstaag's health falls below certain thresholds (80%, 40%, 15%), he will summon Ice Wraiths to harass you. Melee fighters may want to ignore them entirely—compared to Karstaag, they don't inflict much damage. Mages and ranged combatants should take them out quickly, as their speed and harassing attacks make it significantly harder to keep away from Karstaag.

Knocking Your Block Off: All of Karstaag's club attacks are power attacks and will break your block. While you can block his Stomp and Grab attacks effectively, dodge his club strikes.

Strengths and Weaknesses: Karstaag is immune to Frost and Resistant to Shock (75%). He's weak to Fire (25%). Karstaag is also immune to Poison, Disease, Paralysis, the Wabbajack, the Aetherial Shield, and Mora's Grasp.

When fighting Karstaag, your tactics will depend largely on your play style:

Close Combat Savagery: Melee fighters should come heavily armed and armored. Make sure you have the best (preferably Daedric) weapons and armor you can get, temper them well, and imbue them with enchantments to resist frost, resist magic, and increase your one- or two-handed damage. Fire damage enchantments on your weapons are a must. Bring as many health potions as you can afford, focus your attacks on Karstaag, and try to cut him down as quickly as possible.

Stealth and Sprinting: Archers should come prepared to dodge and run. Equip armor that increases your Archery and Stamina—Frost resistance and Health are still useful but somewhat secondary, as you may not survive even a single hit. Stay mobile and try to remain as far away from Karstaag as possible, taking shots (preferably sneak attacks) whenever you can. If Karstaag's health regeneration is swamping the damage you do, consider casting Ignite on him (from Ahzidal's Ring of Arcana), which will allow you to shut down his regeneration for a time.

Incantations and Conjurings: Mages should bring their best Destruction spells and abilities to enhance them. While the other schools of magic are still useful, conjured allies won't distract Karstaag for long, and no amount of wards or armor spells will protect you from his attacks. Try to do as much damage to Karstaag as possible, as quickly as possible. One good combination is to wear the Zahkrisos Mask (increasing the potency of your Shock spells), use the Slow Time Shout, use either the Secret of Arcana Black Book Power or Root of Power Tree Stone ability, and then cast Lightning Storm for as long as you can. Despite Karstaag's shock resistance, the sheer damage of the spell will burn through most of his health. Then quickly switch over to the Ahzidal Mask, cast Ignite (from Ahzidal's Ring of Arcana) on Karstaag to stop his health regeneration, and finish him off with Incinerates.

As noted above, two Solstheim Side Quests have rewards that are especially useful when challenging Karstaag.

Deathbrand: Solstheim Side Quest: Deathbrand (page 617) is a treasure hunt that begins with the search for a suit of Stalhrim Armor (good, but not ideal for this battle). However, by the end of the quest, you will have earned about 10,000 gold and found two unique swords—Bloodscythe and Soulrender. These are effective at weakening Karstaag if you plan to fight him in melee. Once Bloodscythe has reduced his armor and Soulrender has dispelled his Frost Cloak, switch over to weapons with Flame enchantments for maximum damage.

Unearthed: In Solstheim Side Quest: Unearthed (page 645), you can use the gold from Deathbrand to cover the 11,000 gold cost of excavating Kolbjorn Barrow. The barrow contains a number of unique items, including Ahzidal's Ring of Arcana (which allows you to cast the Ignite spell, disabling Karstaag's health regeneration for the duration) and the Ahzidal Mask (which increases the damage done by your fire spells).

Quest Conclusion

When Karstaag is finally dispatched, you receive a mighty power: the ability to summon this ghostly (and ghostly) Frost Giant.

- Summon Karstaag (Summons Karstaag to fight for you for 120 seconds. You may use this ability only three times, and only while outdoors.)

Awakening an Ancient Evil

Miraak and his Dragon Priest Acolytes have the same furious disposition as the Dragon Priests of Skyrim, who you may have encountered in Side Quest: Masks of the Dragon Priests* (see page 471).

NOTE Occasionally, the remnants of a powerful Nordic priest survive even death. Just like the Dragon Priests of Skyrim, Miraak was once a powerful ruler at the time of dragons, with three equally dangerous acolytes who guard his secrets from deep within sprawling barrows. Now that Miraak has returned to Solstheim, something is summoned within these silent crypts....

There is a fourth Dragon Priest on Solstheim: Vahlök the Jailor, who resides in Vahlök's Tomb. He has no mask, is not an acolyte, and has no affiliation with Miraak. Indeed, he fought against the Dragonborn Miraak, after learning of Miraak's traitorous behavior. Solstheim Side Quest: Lost Legacy (page 629) has more information on facing him.

Solstheim Side Quest: The Final Descent (page 622)

This fiend, with his ability to summon Seekers and his predilection for shock-based attacks, is holed up deep in a section of Bloodskal Barrow, which is accessible only from Raven Rock Mine. Complete the quest to face Zahkrisos before rummaging through his ash pile to secure his mask for your collection.

Dragonborn Priest: Miraak (Alliance Guide)

Miraak

Location: [S.A07] Apocrypha: Waking Dreams of a Starless Sky

Dragonborn Main Quest: At the Summit of Apocrypha (page 601)

The leader of these acolytes resides deep within Hermaeus Mora's realm of Apocrypha, leaving only briefly to steal souls from your battles with the dragons. His formidable powers, and how to defeat them, are discussed in Dragonborn Main Quest: At the Summit of Apocrypha. His mask, once you obtain it, may be either light or heavy armor (the mask will be whichever skill is a higher rank). It increases your Magicka by a leveled amount.

➤ Miraak

Quest Conclusion

Wear the mask of your preferred priest when the situation calls for it.

LOCATIONS: Frostmoon Crag

CHARACTERS: Akar, Hjordis, Majni, Rakel

◆ OBJECTIVES: Visit the [hunters or werewolves] of Frostmoon Crag

MINOR SPOILERS

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest menu list, although objectives may.

Howling at the Frostmoon

During your travels through Solstheim, you may be told about the inhabitants of an icy overhang called Frostmoon Crag. You can:

Simply visit the place, which is southwest of the Altar of Thrand, north of Brodir Grove, and northeast of the Abandoned Lodge.

Or, visit Geldis the innkeeper in The Retching Netch in Raven Rock and ask for some rumors. One of these mentions the strange folk that make camp here. Time to pay them a visit?

Or, if you're a werewolf (after completing The Companions Quest: The Silver Hand, see page 242), you may encounter an explorer in Solstheim Wilderness Encounter: Hairy Hunter. He recognizes you as a fellow werewolf and tells you of Majni's pack.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Visit the [hunters or werewolves] of Frostmoon Crag

Rings and Things

The camp is a large underhang at the edge of the snowline, with views of Highpoint Tower to the southeast. Depending on your actions and attributes, the pack at this camp reacts in several different ways:

Rakel stops you as you approach the camp and speaks to you:

If you are not a werewolf, she tells you to leave.

If you are a werewolf but not in Beast Form, she recognizes it after a moment, and allows you to pass.

If you are a werewolf in Beast Form, she welcomes you immediately.

At this point, if you're not a werewolf, you can:

Leave forthwith to avoid any unpleasantness.

Speak to Majni, Akar, Hjordis, or Rakel. They all tell you to go away.

If you wait around the camp long enough, steal anything, or attack anyone, the pack turns hostile.

At this point, if you are a werewolf, you can:

Speak to Majni to be formally welcomed. After speaking to Majni, you become friends with the pack, and you're free to sleep in the camp and take low-value items without it being considered a crime.

Trade with Majni. In addition to some standard hunter's food and items, he also sells a unique set of werewolf rings (listed below).

Speak to Majni, Akar, Hjordis, and Rakel to learn more about them and their pack.

If you commit a crime or otherwise cause the camp to become hostile:

Majni and Akar turn to their Beast Forms immediately.

Hjordis and Rakel remain in human form but will change if you kill the others.

Once all four are dead, you can take whatever you want from the camp, including a chest [Adept]. However, you can't get the rings this way. The only way to obtain them is to buy them from Majni.

NOTE If you cause the camp to become hostile, they always remain hostile (even if you later become a werewolf). If Rakel allows you to pass, the camp will no longer attack you just for being there (even if you later cease to be a werewolf). If Majni welcomes you, you will remain friends with the camp (even if you later cease to be a werewolf).

Quest Conclusion

Werewolf adventurers may purchase the following rings from Majni:

✓ RING	VALUE	POWER
<input type="checkbox"/> Ring of Bloodlust	1500	While in Beast Form, your attacks do 50% more damage, but you also take 50% more damage
<input type="checkbox"/> Ring of Instinct	3000	When you enter Beast Form, the world around you seems to slow for 20 seconds
<input type="checkbox"/> Ring of the Hunt	3500	While in Beast Form, your health regenerates

MINOR SPOILERS

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest menu list, although objectives may.

◆ The Webs of White Ridge

While exploring Solstheim, you may have noticed the variety of spiders that inhabit the isle. The following activity has no objectives, but your exploration may give you some answers about these strange arachnids...and some interesting opportunities to control them.

Atop the snowy mountains of Solstheim, you may stumble across White Ridge Barrow, just west of Hrothmund's Barrow. Enter it, passing signs of violence at the entrance, where two dead Reavers have barred the wooden door shut. Remove the bar and open the door, passing two dead Albino Spiders and three dead Reavers before encountering live arachnids. Circle around the outside of spiral steps leading deeper into the tomb.

Head east down the tomb tunnel and engage more spiders (including Flame Cloaked Spiders) as the passage separates into two parallel corridors. Beware of exploding egg sacs, and mine any geodes you see; there are two Ruby Geodes to the north. Continue east down the corridors, past more egg sacs to a chain on one of the two end pillars, which releases a bridge platform ahead (east). If you have Whirlwind Sprint, use it to jump across the gap to the platform on the far side of the room, circle behind the wooden barriers, and search the area for items. Then drop down to the lower level and head toward the exit, fending off a bandit with a parasitical spider controlling it from its shoulders.

There are exits to the north and west. Head up the steps to the north first, cutting through thick cobwebs to open an iron door and a burial chamber with a nasty Draugr at the far end. There are two chests to pilfer from. Head to the sloping southeast of the room, working your way around to the west. Hack through more spiders, watching for egg sacs and possessed bandits. Continue down the corridor south, then east into a natural cavern with heart stone and ruby deposits and a door to White Ridge Sanctum.

◆ Spider Scrolls

Move east and south, removing a bar from the door leading to a grand cavern where you're set upon by bandits, Flame Spiders, and a sorcerer named Merilar Rendas, who actually throws spiders at you! Remove the key and journal (revealing a difference of opinion with another mage) from her corpse before you move on. Slay her fast enough, and you can recover her supply of Flame Cloaked Spiders and Jumping Flame Spiders, then lob them back at your foes! Continue south to a Word Wall and a crypt with a frightening Acolyte Priest named Dukaan, who guards the Black Book: The Sallow Regent. Consult the Solstheim Side Quests for more information on them.

- Merilar's Cage Door Key
- Merilar's Journal
- Dukaan
- Word of Power: Cyclone
- Black Book: The Sallow Regent

To the west is a narrow winding crypt passage leading down and eventually out to a waterlogged well directly below the graven cavern with a chest. There's a fissure and stream running through it with more geodes to mine too. Of more interest is a wooden ramp to the northeast. Ascend it to the remains of a disused mining chamber, with further geodes, spiders, and possessed bandits to cull. In the north wall is a cell door [Adept], which Merilar's key opens. This leads you through some webs to a dead-end corridor with a chest at the end and a barred door into a circular chamber filled with possessed bandits and spiders.

Return to the mining chamber and climb the wooden ramps, which leads to a cage [Expert] that Merilar's key also opens. This is the place you need to reach to begin Spider Crafting. Once you have finished, you can head north to the ladder (the rest of the tunnel has some geodes to mine) and use Merilar's Key to open it. This leads to Secondary Location: White Ridge Barrow Hut, a small hut with spiders and a sapphire geode. This is a great alternate entrance to the Imbuing device on subsequent visits.

Quest Conclusion

The cage holds the remains of Servos Rendas, a Dunmeri mage with a journal explaining how badly wrong his friendship with Merilar went. Of greater importance is the odd metal device and Spider Experiment Notes near it. This is the Imbuing Chamber, where the Dark Elves' research can be put into practice!

> Servos' Journal

> Spider Experiment Notes

NOTE The notes contain some recipes that explain how to create your own spiders! Activate the machine after you place the ingredients into it. Spiders show up as scrolls in your inventory. You throw them from your hands and create them in batches of three (for normal gems) or six (for flawless gems).

As you can see from the following recipe chart, the type of gem influences the elemental damage of the spider. Amethyst is Shock, Emerald is Poison, Ruby is Flame, and Sapphire is Frost.

All Are Welcome*

NOTE This occurs once Dragonborn Main Quest: Cleansing the Stones has begun and the Earth Stone has been cleansed.

Bralsa Drel is a forlorn Dunmer who is enslaved at the Earth Stone just outside Raven Rock. She mumbles nonsense if you haven't cleansed this stone and carries rocks around. But after she's freed (and provided she survives the ensuing Lurker attack), she takes up residence inside the abandoned house in Raven Rock. Visit her and talk to her about her piteous existence. She tells you she's bad for business after her drinking at The Retching Netch got out of hand. Tell her you'll talk to Geldis Sadri for her.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Convince Geldis Sadri to admit Bralsa Drel to the inn

Head to the inn and ask why Bralsa Drel was banned. Sadri tells you he can't bring himself to watch her drown herself in drink anymore. Reply with one of the following:

(Persuade) That she has the right to do what she pleases.

(Intimidate) That she will be let in, or Sadri will answer to you!

(Gold) Or pay him gold to let her in.

When one of the three plans works, Sadri agrees.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Tell Bralsa Drel she's welcome at The Retching Netch

Quest Conclusion

Move back to Bralsa's location and inform her of the news. She seems a little happier and grants you the following:

► Levelled item

Emberbrand Embargo*

NOTE This occurs once Solstheim Side Quest: March of the Dead has concluded.

Locate Captain Veleth, who usually patrols the main thoroughfare of Raven Rock. Talk to him about the difficulties he has commanding the Redoran Guard, and he speaks of a particularly potent wine and a hidden stash his men have placed somewhere in town. Agree to find it for him.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Locate the hidden stash of Emberbrand Wine in Raven Rock

Captain Veleth recommends searching one of the abandoned houses on the outskirts of town. However, the structure with that name is empty of such contraband. Instead, continue southwest, to the gap between the two ruined structures with the trama root and a barrel, overlooking the docks. Search the barrel for the alcohol.

► Emberbrand Wine (8)

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Report the stash of Emberbrand Wine to Captain Veleth

Quest Conclusion

Return to Captain Veleth with the wine, and he offers you a small reward for your troubles.

► Gold (250)

Jelly from Netch to Fetch*

Find Milore lenth at her alchemy store in the main square of Raven Rock, and speak to her about the exotic ingredients she sells. She tells you she's trying to find a better source for netch jelly. Agree to locate some for her.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Retrieve netch jelly for Milore lenth (5)

Netch jelly is particularly difficult to come by, so try one of the following plans:

Scour the coast of western Solstheim, where several small “pods” of Netch are located. Kill them and harvest the jelly from their remains.

Or, you can sneak into the dwellings in the main settlements (Raven Rock, Tel Mithryn, Skaal Village) and locate more jars of the stuff. Be careful with your stealing, though!

Or, during Solstheim Side Quest: The Final Descent, you can acquire two samples at an Alchemy Lab within the Raven Rock Mine exploration.

► Netch Jelly (5)

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Bring the netch jelly to Milore lenth

Quest Conclusion

Head back to Milore lenth with the five jelly examples, and you’re given some potent potions.

► Potion of Ultimate Well-Being (2)

◆ Sadri’s Sujamma*

Geldis Sadri, the proprietor of The Retching Netch, has a specialty of the house. Asking about it prompts him to mention a special sujamma. It’s a taste sensation! Offer to spread the word of it, and you’ll receive recompense. You’re handed some samples to get rid of.

► Sadri’s Sujamma (10)

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Distribute Sadri’s Sujamma (10)

It falls to you to find interest among the townfolk of Raven Rock for this elixir. Simply mosey up to any of the people of Raven Rock and ask if they wish to try. If they’re interested, that’s one fewer bottle you need to rid yourself of! Here are some plans to help you:

The following inhabitants are interested (although you may need to speak to them about their own woes first): Dreyla Alor, Fethis Alor, Cindiri Arano, Crescius Caerellius, Garyn lenth, Milore lenth, Glover Mallory, Gjalund Salt-Sage, Mirri Severin, Tilisu Severin, and Aphia Velothi.

Time your chats to after 8:00 p.m., inside The Retching Netch, as a large number of these folks head in here anyway, and you can rid yourself of at least five bottles without traipsing everywhere.

Time is also a factor, as waiting for 24 hours and then returning to someone you previously gave a bottle of sujamma to will cause them to take one again. This easily helps get rid of your stash!

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Tell Geldis Sadri you’ve distributed his liquor samples

Quest Conclusion

Return to The Retching Netch, tell Geldis you’ve off-loaded the samples, and take his coin.

► Gold (250)

◆ Take Your Pick*

Glover Mallory is the smith of Raven Rock, and he’s an amenable fellow—that is, until you bring up the touchy subject of his lost pickaxe. He tells you that Crescius Caerellius, a crotchety (and possibly mad) old miner has this prized possession. He’d be happy if you retrieved it for him.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Ancient Nordic Pickaxe

Crescius is nearby, usually in the entrance chamber inside Raven Rock Mine, which is a short stroll to the northwest. When the subject comes up, demand the pickaxe back. He begrudgingly hands it over.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Return Ancient Nordic Pickaxe to Glover Mallory

Quest Conclusion

There is no modicum of coin for this task; Glover insists you use this special pickaxe yourself! Take it, as it’s a rare item to find and the only type of pickaxe you can use to mine Stalhrim ore deposits.

► Ancient Nordic Pickaxe

◆ Thievery and the Karstaag Connection*

NOTE This occurs once Solstheim Regional Activity: Take Your Pick* has concluded and you’re a member of Skyrim’s Thieves Guild, having completed Thieves Guild Quests: Taking Care of Business and Meet the Family*. Be sure to speak with Delvin Mallory (Glover’s brother) and Vex regarding other jobs, and receive your Thieves Guild Armor from Tonilia.

Being a member of the Thieves Guild has its privileges. In this case, provided you’ve chatted at length with Delvin Mallory over in The Ragged Flagon under Riften and completed the prerequisites listed above, you can seek out Glover for a special additional job: to secure a special formula for constructing improved armor. A fellow named Esmond Tyne was carrying it.

TIP The note with the formula on it can be snagged before this activity becomes available.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Recover the Bonemold Formula for Glover Mallory

The formula is a note found on the corpse of Esmond Tyne. His bloodied body can be found on an ice floe at the water's edge, as soon as you enter the giant initial chamber in Castle Karstaag Caverns. If you read this note, you can create Improved Bonemold Armor at any forge, so check the note out before returning to Glover.

➤ Bonemold Formula

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Bring the Bonemold Formula to Glover Mallory

Quest Conclusion

Back at the forge in Raven Rock, hand over the formula. For a fellow thief, Glover gladly provides you with additional compensation far beyond the honest handful of coins—a key to a secret cellar inside Mallory's home!

➤ Key to Glover Mallory's House

Postquest Activities

Enter Glover's house, head downstairs, and unlock the door. Inside is a thieves' treasure trove, which includes a weapon and shield on a rack [leveled]; poisons and potions; sweetrolls (all stolen, no doubt); a Thief Cache barrel with a shadowmark on it; a strongbox (not of the East Empire variety); a set of Blackguard's Armor; and Glover's Letter, which reveals his past and his daughter, the thief Sapphire. If you meet up with Sapphire in Riften's Ragged Flagon and talk to her about this note, she offers you an exquisite gem bearing her name.

- Blackguard's Armor
- Blackguard's Boots
- Blackguard's Gloves
- Blackguard's Hood
- Sword and Shield [leveled]
- Thief Cache
- Glover's Letter
- Exquisite Sapphire

◆ Tomb Eradicator

Elder Othrelloth is located in or around the temple on the raised courtyard near the bulwerk. Enter this sacred place, and ask more about the Ancestral Tombs. He's having troubles with abominations known as Ash Spawn that have risen from the remains of his own ancestors! Can you cleanse the tomb of this filth for him? Agree to receive a key that opens the otherwise-sealed crypts.

➤ Raven Rock Tomb Key

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Clear the Temple's tomb of Ash Spawn

Head down the steps and north to the Temple Ancestral Tomb door, which only opens with the key. Then expect three waves of around four Ash Spawn, with more powerful variants appearing in the last wave, to attack you. They form from the cremated remains in the circular pyres throughout the tomb. Stay in one tomb or move between the different parts of the crypt; it doesn't matter. Keep the slaying going until the objective updates.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Tell Elder Othrelloth that the Tomb has been cleansed

Quest Conclusion

Elder Othrelloth is most pleased, as you honor the Reclamations with your actions. Have some coin!

➤ Gold (250)

◆ Tome Raider

The wife of Second Councilor Adril Arano is the well-to-do Cindiri Arano. Meet up with her in town, and she believes you can handle the recovery of a lost item. She never received an important folio she sent to the Imperial City. It was being returned aboard a ship called the Strident Squall, or something like that. Can you find it for her?

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Locate Cindiri's Folio from the wreck of the Strident Squall

The Strident Squall has run aground, and the wreckage is now the base camp for an unruly gang of Reavers, in the southeastern coast of Solstheim. Travel there, slay the foes stopping you boarding the vessel, and work your way down into the hold and around to the large chest under the stairs. Take the saucy tome. Dare you read its shocking contents?

➤ Lusty Argonian Maid Folio

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Return the Folio to Cindiri Arano in Raven Rock

Quest Conclusion

Cindiri Arano is most pleased with the return of her manuscript and offers you the following:

➤ Ring [Leveled]

A Mother's Lament*

NOTE This occurs once Dragonborn Main Quest: The Fate of the Skaal has concluded.

Speak to Edla, a trader who is usually wandering the village during the day, and she talks about her son. He's a good lad, but she's saddened at the prospect of him leaving the village. Tell her you'll talk to him for her, and she mentions she'd be most grateful.

MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Convince Nikulas to stay in Skaal Village

Nikulas is usually nearby, and he's full of vigor at the idea of adventuring. He's weary of village life and considers this a meager existence. You have a few options to convince him to stay. You can:

- (Bribe) Tell him you're willing to help him get started, and hand over some gold. In return, he needs to give his mother some more time.
- (Intimidate) Tell him the world is dangerous, and he isn't ready for it.
- (Persuade) Ask him why he's abandoning his mother when she needs him the most.

When one of these options works, Nikulas agrees to stall his exploration.

MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Speak to Edla

Quest Conclusion

Edla is overjoyed at the news and offers some rare herbs as payment for your help.

- Emperor Parasol Moss (5)
- Scathecrow (5)
- Ashen Grass Pod (5)

Return to Falkreath*

NOTE This occurs once Dragonborn Main Quest: The Fate of the Skaal has concluded.

Find Morwen, who is usually clanging metal at the forge, or nearby. Strike up a conversation, and she mentions her mother once left the village. Morwen was born in Falkreath, where her mother's remains are still interred. She found a necklace belonging to her mother and wants it buried with her mother's bones.

➤ Bera's Necklace

MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Take Bera's Necklace to Runil in Falkreath

Travel back to Skyrim, and all the way to Falkreath, finding Runil the priest. He tends the graveyard and should be in that area. Speak to him of Morwen's favor, and he remembers her mother and father, Bera and Ulfarr. Present the necklace—a wedding gift—and Runil agrees to grant the request; it should bring joy to both parents as they walk in Aetherius.

MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Return to Morwen in Skaal Village

Quest Conclusion

Morwen is most pleased. Once again you are a true ally to the Skaal. A fine reward is then offered.

➤ Nordic Carved Helmet

Elynea's Ingredients*

NOTE This occurs once Solstheim Side Quest: Healing a House has concluded.

Head into Tel Mithryn Apothecary, and locate the owner Elynea Mothren. When she's not attempting to heal the fungal housing stock of this settlement, she's in need of particular ingredients for her alchemy. Can you bring back a [random] item for her?

◇ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Locate the [random ingredient] for Elynea Mothren

TIP The ingredient in question is chosen from the following list: Briarheart, Daedra Heart, Giant's Toe, Hagraven Claw, Vampire Dust, and Void Salts.

Obviously, the location of the ingredient depends on what it is. However, here is a sample location for each of them:

Briarheart: Found at Bard's Leap Summit, plucked from the foe of the same name.

Daedra Heart: Purchase from Enthir at the College of Winterhold.

Giant's Toe: Locate any Primary Location with Giants.

Hagraven Claw: Slay either Melka or Petra in Blind Cliff Cave.

Vampire Dust: Movarth's Lair has the undead foes you require.

Void Salts: Purchase from Sadri's Used Wares in Windhelm.

◇ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Return to Elynea

Quest Conclusion

Take the ingredient back to Elynea. This quest is repeatable, and you received gold for each item you hand over.

➤ Gold [leveled]

Eyes and Ears*

NOTE This occurs randomly, along with Neloth's many other Side Quests.

The infamous Neloth is always on the lookout for a test subject for spells he's working on. If you allow him to proceed through conversation, his incantation bathes you in light...before submerging you in darkness. You can hear him well enough, but this probably isn't helping your current mental state either, as he and his apprentice Talvas are shocked by the varied and unpleasant results. Tentacles coming out of your eyes? Unspeakable!

Quest Conclusion

Eventually, he returns you to normal, and you both vow never to speak of this again.

➤ 250 Gold

THIRSK MEAD HALL REGIONAL ACTIVITIES

NOTE All four of these activities occur only if you side with Bujold the Unworthy and her motley band of incompetents, and not the Riekling Chief.

A Thirst in Thirsk*

NOTE This occurs prior to the completion of either Solstheim Side Quest: The Chief of Thirsk Hall, or Retaking Thirsk.

Visit the embarrassing ragtag collection of tents and Nords at Bujold's Retreat, and locate Elmus the mead maker. He's less concerned about the plight of his brethren and more interested in tasting some of that Ashfire Mead that they make at Thirsk. Of course, the place is overrun now, but if you could grab a bottle...

◇ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Bring Elmus some Ashfire Mead from Thirsk Mead Hall

Climb the hill and enter Thirsk Mead Hall, which, if neither related quest has begun, does not mean fighting the Rieklings (although you can certainly have a go at them). There are five bottles of Ashfire Mead scattered on the stone floor near the central fire pit. You only need one of them.

Quest Conclusion

Return to Elmus and hand over the mead. He considers you a true friend to Thirsk and pays for your troubles.

➤ Gold [leveled]

◆ Berries out of Reach*

NOTE This occurs once Solstheim Side Quest: Retaking Thirsk has been completed.

Once the Thirsk Mead Hall is back in the hands of Bujold's Nord crew and you haven't made them hostile or unfriendly by your actions at the end of that quest, search out the mead-master Elmus. He's keen to begin brewing again but requires juniper berries for the concoction. Do you have any?

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Bring Elmus some Juniper Berries

If you don't, you can visit many of the apothecary merchants here or in Skyrim. But it is preferable to head to the Reach and locate the juniper trees that grow in abundance there. Gather some berries and return to Solstheim.

Quest Conclusion

Return to Elmus and give him the berries you've collected. He pays you for your troubles.

➤ Gold [leveled]

◆ Ore Inspired*

NOTE This occurs once Solstheim Side Quest: Retaking Thirsk has been completed.

Once Bujold's Nord crew has taken back Thirsk Mead Hall and you haven't made them hostile or unfriendly by your actions at the end of that quest, locate Halbarn Iron-Fur and speak about his work. As there's limited metal on Solstheim, and the Rieklings stole most of his ore, he asks if you'd mind finding him some more.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Bring 10 Stalhrim Ore and 15 Ebony Ingots to Halbarn

Be aware that Stalhrim is required in its ore form and ebony must be in ingots. Here are a few locations where you can find such deposits (and use any smelter to turn ebony into ingots).

Ebony Ingots: Head back to Skyrim and start mining in Gloombound Mine (Eastmarch) or Redbelly Mine (in Shor's Stone, in the Rift). Then smelt the ore into ingots.

Stalhrim Ore: The Stalhrim Source location has triple what is needed. Consult Solstheim Side Quest: A New Source of Stalhrim for details.

Quest Conclusion

Stagger back to Halbarn with your materials. He is impressed by your haul. He starts his blacksmith business, and you can purchase from him. In addition, you receive gold, and the prospect of his hand in marriage.

➤ Gold [leveled] ➤ Marriage Prospect: Halbarn Iron-Fur

◆ Primitive Pointy Sticks*

NOTE This occurs once Solstheim Side Quest: Retaking Thirsk has been completed.

Once Bujold's Nord crew has retaken Thirsk Mead Hall and you haven't made them hostile or unfriendly by your actions at the end of that quest, find Hilund, and she tells you she wants you to find a number of Riekling Spears for her.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Bring 50 Riekling Spears to Hilund

Such spears are commonly thrown by Rieklings. Consult this guide's Atlas for the many locations where Rieklings dwell (almost always in the snowy climbs of Solstheim). Search any you kill, and their camps, for the spears.

➤ Riekling Spear

Quest Conclusion

Return to Hilund and drop off the collected spears, which are subsequently displayed in the Mead Hall after three days. You receive gold as a reward.

➤ Gold [leveled]

WORLD INTERACTIONS AND ENCOUNTERS

Unlike quests, Favors, and objectives, which typically involve a specific person or location, World Interactions and Encounters occur randomly and not all the time. And they almost never occur in the same place. Look for these small occurrences during your adventure.

World Interactions are random and usually very small-scale events that occur in populated areas, such as settlements, towns, or cities. They require you to perform an action, and the consequences are then detailed. Remember that you may perform the action, and it's possible that no one will notice or be interested in your antics. This is the random nature of World Interactions.

World Encounters are random events that may occur as you explore the roads and wilds of Skyrim. These events take a variety of forms, from simple combats to unique scenes that reflect the quests you've completed.

TIP You have very little control over when World Interactions and Encounters appear; just investigate or interact with the ones that interest you once you see them. The following tables show all the World Interactions and Encounters available across Skyrim.

WORLD INTERACTIONS

These are split up based on the actions you perform to get a reaction. These are listed in the following tables, along with a description of the interaction and any prerequisites (such as completing quests) you need to have accomplished.

Part 1: Items of Interest

These Interactions may commence any time you add an item to your inventory.

✓	WORLD INTERACTION	DESCRIPTION	PREREQUISITES
<input type="checkbox"/>	1. An Interested Party	You pick something up. A nearby resident runs up and asks, "Did you find anything good?"	Inside a city, settlement, or town, but not inside a building.
<input type="checkbox"/>	2. Watching the Rummager	You take something from a barrel, sack, crate, or container where "refuse" is usually placed. A nearby resident asks, "What's he/she doing rummaging around in there?" A second resident (if there is one nearby) replies, "Perhaps he/she is looking for food?"	You are not inside a building.
<input type="checkbox"/>	3. Tailing the Thief	You steal an item. After a day or two, three thugs track you when you're in the wilderness, tell you they're here to punish you for stealing, and attack you. Search them for a note from the owner of the property you stole.	You must steal an item and not get caught.
<input type="checkbox"/>	4. Calcelmo's Courier	After buying a dwarven item, you may receive a letter via courier (when you next visit a town or city) asking if you'll bring the item to Calcelmo; he will pay dearly for it.	You must buy [any dwarven item] from a merchant.

Part 2: Assaults with Consequences

These Interactions begin when you assault someone. This means striking them and then stopping before killing them (brawls don't count).

✓	WORLD INTERACTION	DESCRIPTION	PREREQUISITES
<input type="checkbox"/>	1. It's All Relative	After you assault someone within view of others, the crime may be reported. Sometime in the future, you're stopped by a resident, a relative of the person you attacked. You can apologize (and the relative walks away) or remain unapologetic, resulting in an attack.	Attacking a resident of a town or city.
<input type="checkbox"/>	2. An Impressive Assault	After you assault someone within view of others, inside a settlement, town, or city, you receive a letter from a courier. A [randomly determined resident] with an enemy has seen your assault and wants you to rough someone up for them. Meet the impressed party, agree, and then find the [randomly determined foe], roughing them up (but not killing them).	Attacking a resident of a town or city.
<input type="checkbox"/>	3. A Memorable Assault	After you assault someone inside a settlement, town, or city, the next time you meet them, the victim remembers your assault and mentions this.	Attacking a resident of a town or city.

Part 3: Wizardry

These Interactions may begin once someone near to you witnesses you casting a magic spell.

✓	WORLD INTERACTION	DESCRIPTION	PREREQUISITES
<input type="checkbox"/>	1. The Invisible Boy	Once you've cast a spell, a young boy runs up and asks you to cast invisibility on him. You can agree or refuse, but you can't really do this. If you agree, the boy, thinking he's invisible, heads off, sneaking up on people and trying to scare them.	Casting magic within the vicinity of the witness.
<input type="checkbox"/>	2. Lollygagging Looky-Loos	If you're inside a settlement, town, or city with a spell effect that creates a dangerous "sheen" or effect around your person, such as Flame Cloak, bystanders will murmur in alarm, and a crowd may start to form around you until you've dispelled the effect or it wears off.	Casting magic with a "dangerous" effect around you.
<input type="checkbox"/>	3. Quiet, Please	Employ a Shout in a populated settlement, town, or city, and a nearby guard may run up and sternly warn you to stop, as it's making the locals nervous.	Utilizing a Shout.
<input type="checkbox"/>	4. Quest, Please	Employ a Shout in a populated settlement, town, or city, and you may receive a Courier's letter soon afterwards, from a mysterious "friend" who gives directions to a nearby [random dungeon] that contains a Word Wall inside.	Utilizing a Shout.

Part 4: About Town

These Interactions may begin when you enter a settlement, town, or city.

✓	WORLD INTERACTION	DESCRIPTION	PREREQUISITES
<input type="checkbox"/>	1. Courier Catch-Up	As you enter, you may be greeted by a courier with a letter or multiple letters. These may invite you to begin quests, locate areas of interest, or follow up on rumors you've heard, or they simply update your objectives. Consult the individual prerequisites of quests you may be interested in to find out more.	Entering a location.
<input type="checkbox"/>	2. No Nudity	Enter a location without wearing any clothes, and the locals may comment on your appearance and ask you to put on some more appropriate attire.	Entering a location without clothing equipped.
<input type="checkbox"/>	3. Careful, Now	Enter a location brandishing a weapon, and you may find locals asking you about it. Innkeepers and merchants may tell you to be careful brandishing such an implement. Sheath your weapon to stop this talk.	Entering a location with weapons unsheathed.
<input type="checkbox"/>	4. The Enraged Mage	Enter a location, and [a random wizard] steps forward to challenge you to a duel. Kill the wizard (without accruing any Bounty, as you were challenged). You don't have to use magic, although the wizard may protest at this. Not after you kill him, though!	Entering a location.
<input type="checkbox"/>	5. The Engaged Mage	Enter a location, and [a random student of magic] steps forward to ask you about learning ward spells. Oblige the student if you wish.	Entering a location.
<input type="checkbox"/>	6. Gift Giving	Enter a location, and a person you've befriended (e.g., by completing a Favor) hands you a gift. This won't be the Jarl, though.	Entering a settlement, town, or city after befriending one or more of the population there.
<input type="checkbox"/>	7. Games Without Frontiers	As you enter, you may see a group of children playing a game. Talk to them, and they may ask you to join them. The game will be either hide-and-seek or tag. Agree or decline. Play the game if you wish.	Entering a location, speaking to a child.
<input type="checkbox"/>	8. Dragon Attack!	Enter a different location once the dragons return to Skyrim, and the guards yell out a warning as the residents scatter. A dragon swoops down into the settlement and attacks! Flee or fight.	Entering a location after Main Quest: Dragon Rising is complete.
<input type="checkbox"/>	9. Other Talk	Merchants call out a greeting to you, as do friends welcoming you to your home if you own one. Those you haven't befriended may speak to you with suspicion.	Entering a location.

Part 5: Your Demeanor

These Interactions may begin once you visit a different settlement, town, or city in a particular visual state. These can occur as overheard murmuring, or as part of conversations you may have.

<input type="checkbox"/>	5. Hands of Fire	Residents are a little taken aback by your flaming hands.	Have a Flame spell equipped and "unsheathed."
<input type="checkbox"/>	6. The Immodest Adventurer	Residents are quick to comment on your lack of proper modesty.	Have no clothing on.

<input type="checkbox"/>	2. Excellent Enchanting	A nearby Court Wizard comments on the item you're enchanting, or on your competence as an enchanter.	You use an Arcane Enchanter to enchant an item.
<input type="checkbox"/>	3. Adept Alchemist	An apothecary merchant comments on the item you're making (if it's a poison or potion) or on your competence.	You use an Alchemy Lab to make an item.

Part 7: Dealing with the Dead

These Interactions may begin when you or a nearby person sees or interacts with a corpse.

✓	WORLD INTERACTION	DESCRIPTION	PREREQUISITES
<input type="checkbox"/>	1. Suspicious Behavior	Residents step up to the corpse and look at it. A soldier usually tells folks to disperse and begins to interrogate you. Residents begin to wonder out loud if you're the murderer. You can protest your innocence (the guard leaves you alone) or offer an unpleasant response (which gets you arrested).	You're near a dead body (optionally with weapons unsheathed), but no one saw you kill this person.
<input type="checkbox"/>	2. Dead Dragon	Residents step up to the remains of a dragon, remarking as you absorb the Dragon Soul.	You kill a dragon close to residents.

<input type="checkbox"/>	2. A Friend of Your Enemy	When you return to a settlement after you slay someone with a known enemy, a courier greets you to say the enemy of the deceased has a gift for you. Visit them to receive the reward (usually gold).	You kill a resident who has a known enemy.
<input type="checkbox"/>	3. Not Going Out	A bereaved friend of a slain resident runs to their home or dwelling and locks themselves inside, refusing to come out.	The bereaved's friend was killed with them watching (by you or others).

<input type="checkbox"/>	5. Grave Digging	Residents of city's bodies may be disposed of, and any worldly goods you didn't loot from their corpse show up in their coffin in the hall of the dead.	Leave a civilian's corpse lying around a city and come back later.

Part 9: Items of Disinterest

These Interactions may begin if you discard an item (by dropping it, selling it, or giving it away).

✓	WORLD INTERACTION	DESCRIPTION	PREREQUISITES
<input type="checkbox"/>	1. Dropping a Weapon	A guard stops you and reprimands you for leaving dangerous weapons lying around. Walk away or apologize and the guard leaves you alone. Converse and the guard asks for a fine (or bribe). If you refuse to pay, you're attacked or arrested.	Drop a weapon near a guard.
<input type="checkbox"/>	2. I Think You Dropped This (I)	A resident stops you after picking up the discarded item, and hands it back to you (it now appears in your inventory).	Drop an item near a resident.
<input type="checkbox"/>	3. Mine! Mine! Mine!	Two residents move to the item and begin to fight over whose it is. An audience may gather, commenting on the spectacle. The argument may escalate to a brawl (which you aren't involved in).	Dropping an item near two or more residents.

QUESTS: WORLD INTERACTIONS AND ENCOUNTERS

DAWNGUARD

WORLD INTERACTIONS AND ENCOUNTERS

One of the many strange, unique, or amazing encounters you may come across.

Just like World Interactions and Encounters in your original adventure, there are a whole host of randomly occurring small encounters to watch for during your new explorations.

TIP You have very little control over when World Interactions and Encounters appear; just investigate or interact with the ones that interest you, once you see them. The following tables show all the Dawnguard-related World Interactions and Encounters available across Skyrim.

DAWNGUARD WORLD INTERACTIONS

These are split up based on the actions you perform to get a reaction. We list them in table form, along with a description of the interaction and any prerequisites (such as quests) you need to have accomplished.

Eclipse Attacks: Once you've shot a Bloodcursed Arrow into the sun with Auriel's Bow after completing Dawnguard Main Quest: Touching the Sky, these encounters can occur when you enter any settlement with guards during the resulting eclipse.

DAWNGUARD WORLD ENCOUNTERS

The following events occur throughout the Skyrim wilderness, either on roads or off the beaten track. The table also notes whether the encounter has any special conditions. TALL TALES: THE UTTERANCES OF M'AIQ THE LIAR

Meet M'aiq the Liar. He's quite the talker:

"M'aiq's father was also called M'aiq. As was M'aiq's father's father. At least, that's what his father said."

"M'aiq wishes you well."

"M'aiq knows much, and tells some. M'aiq knows many things others do not."

"M'aiq carries two weapons, to be safe. What if one breaks? That would be most unlucky."

"M'aiq is always in search of calipers, yet finds none. Where could they have gone?"

"M'aiq hears many stories of war...yet few of them are true."

"How does anyone know there was a city of Winterhold? M'aiq did not see it with his eyes. Did you?"

"Too much magic can be dangerous. M'aiq once had two spells and burned his sweetroll."

"What does this mean, to combine magic? Magic plus magic is still magic."

"It does not matter to M'aiq how strong or smart one is. It only matters what one can do."

"Dragons were never gone. They were just invisible and very, very quiet."

"Werebears? Where? Bears? Men that are bears?"

"Much snow in Skyrim. Enough snow. M'aiq does not want any more."

"Snow falls. Why worry where it goes? M'aiq thinks the snowflakes are pretty."

"Skyrim was once the land of many butterflies. Now, not so much."

"M'aiq once walked to High Hrothgar. So many steps, he lost count."

"Once M'aiq got in trouble in Riften, and fled to Windhelm. It is good that nobody there cared."

"M'aiq can travel fast across the land. Some lazy types take carriages. It is all the same to M'aiq."

"M'aiq does not understand what is so impressive about shouting. M'aiq can shout whenever he wants."

"M'aiq saw a mudcrab the other day. Horrible creatures."

"M'aiq loves the people of Skyrim. Many interesting things they say to each other."

"Nords are so serious about beards. So many beards. M'aiq thinks they wish they had glorious manes like Khajiit."

"M'aiq does not remember his childhood. Perhaps he never had one."

"M'aiq is very practical. He has no need for mysticism."

"Nords' armor has lots of fur. This sometimes makes M'aiq nervous."

"M'aiq was soul trapped once. Not very pleasant. You should think about that once in a while."

"Some say Alduin is Akatosh. Some say M'aiq is a Liar. Don't you believe either of those things."

"Something strange happens to Khajiit when they arrive in Skyrim."

"M'aiq has heard the people of Skyrim are better-looking than the ones in Cyrodiil. He has no opinion on the matter. All people are beautiful to him."

"Why do soldiers bother with target practice? One learns best by hitting real people."

"M'aiq knows why Falmer are blind. It has nothing to do with the Dwemer disappearing. Really."

"M'aiq has heard it is dangerous to be your friend."

"The people of Skyrim are more open-minded about certain things than people in other places."

"Some like taking friends on adventures. M'aiq thinks being alone is better. Less arguing about splitting treasure."

"Don't try blocking if you have two weapons. You will only get confused. Much better to hit twice anyway."

"M'aiq knows many things, no?"

"M'aiq is tired now. Go bother somebody else."

"M'aiq is done talking."

QUESTS: DAWNGUARD AND DRAGONBORN WORLD INTERACTIONS AND ENCOUNTERS

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

THE ATLAS OF SKYRIM

AN OVERVIEW OF THE NORTHERN LANDS OF TAMRIEL

Welcome to a massive guide to every location across the realm of Skyrim. Since ancient times, the lands of Skyrim have been divided into nine separate Holds, and modern cartographers saw no reason to change this method of dividing the realm into manageable segments for you to reference. Although Holds aren't visible on your in-game maps, the borders between each Hold have been drawn along roads, rivers, and steep mountains so you can visualize where you are more easily.

Overview and Legend

This Atlas is divided into 13 sections. The first nine reveal each of the Holds of Skyrim (Haafingar, Hjaalmarch, The Pale, Winterhold Hold, The Reach, Whiterun Hold, Eastmarch, Falkreath Hold, and The Rift) running from northwest to southeast. Section 10 is dedicated to Other Realms of Skyrim (locations not shown on the World Map, such as the Dragon Cult's bastion of Skuldafn). Sections 11 and 12 show the two parts of the isle of Solstheim (the Northern Mountains and Southern Ash Lands), and the last section is devoted to the Realm of Hermaeus Mora; Apocrypha.

In each chapter, locations are divided into Primary Locations (which appear as Fast-Travel points on the world map once you locate them) and Secondary Locations (some of which appear on your local map). For larger dungeons and settlements, interior maps have been provided. These help you explore major locations and flag important items. The following icons are used:

Primary Locations: These are usually large spaces requiring interior exploration and are listed in a number format. For example, the vampire hideout known as Movarth's Lair is listed as Primary Location [2.19]. This means it is in Hold 2 (Hjaalmarch) and is the 19th Primary Location within this Hold. Each Primary Location has a different icon depending on its type (e.g., a den, town, or capital).

1.A

Secondary Locations: These are smaller areas that rarely require interior exploration. They are listed in a letter format. For example, the Shrine of Zenithar in the Rift is listed as Secondary Location [9.U].

2.C

Secondary Locations with a darker coloration are Dragon Mounds.

World Encounter: This icon indicates the possibility of a random World Encounter.

Map Marker (Interior Maps): This shows the general area to search for one or more important items (with a corresponding number to the text description), or a major room or route in an interior map.

A

Threshold Marker (Interior Maps): This indicates a door (with a letter corresponding to the text description). If this is linked via a line, it shows a connection between two levels or floors of a structure or dungeon.

NOTE Due to the sheer size of Skyrim and the random nature of what appears inside every chest, knapsack, barrel, and satchel, it is impossible to track everything. If you're looking for ingredient locations, consult the Inventory chapter. If you're looking for Skill Book locations, consult the Appendices.

NOTE Throughout this Atlas and Appendices, you'll notice bracketed counts.

◇ Example 1: Haafingar Hold has "Skill Trainers: [3/50]".

◇ Example 2: Dawnward Locations have "Skill Trainers: [DG7/7]".

The first number refers to the specific total for a particular Hold, or Add-On. The second number refers to the grand total for Skyrim, or Add-On.

◇ Example 1: There are three Trainers residing in Haafingar Hold, out 50 in all of Skyrim (not including Add-Ons).

◇ Example 2: There are seven Skill Trainers available throughout all Dawnward Locations.

The first number may have two initials preceding it: These are "DG" (Dawnward Location), "HF" (Hearthfire Location) or "DB" (Dragonborn Location).

Consult the Atlas throughout the rest of this guide to see what counts are in each Primary and Secondary Location of Skyrim, Dawnward, Hearthfire, and Dragonborn.

Consult the Appendices at the back of this guide to see the tables showing counts for all available Services, Collectibles, or Special Objects.

HOLD 1: HAAFINGAR

TOPOGRAPHICAL OVERVIEW

Haafigar is a hold of fortifications and numerous caves weaving deep into the granite foothills and mountainous terrain that the Hold is famous for. Expect smuggling bolt-holes along the coast and a strong Thalmor presence; their embassy is atop the mountain to the northwest of Solitude. There are two large forts—Northwatch Keep and Fort Hraggstad—where you may face a large number of foes. And you haven't fully experienced Haafigar until you've seen the majesty of the Statue to Meridia and the light of Kilkreath Ruins...

Routes and Pathways

Haafigar Hold is dominated by the massive arch and fortified crenelations of the fortress city of Solitude. For those approaching from Hjaalmarch, this is indeed the landmark of choice. The rest of the Hold has a main path that takes you around the base of the Haafigar mountain range, before petering out along the craggy western edge where progress cannot continue. A few minor pathways shoot off from this main route, which is the recommended way to initially explore, as the rest of this Hold requires careful maneuvering over steep and snowy terrain. Indeed, it is often impossible to reach a Primary Location by trekking over rocks and Tundra alone. The Karth River separates this Hold from Hjaalmarch, with the jagged border of the Reach encroaching just southwest of the Dragon Bridge. The largest stretch of flat ground is the shoreline of the Sea of Ghosts along the northern flank of Haafigar, where travelers are few and the Thalmor are out in force.

◀ Lore: City Overview

Solitude is the jewel of Imperial Skyrim. Ruled by Jarl Elisif the Fair, widow of the late High King, it is home to the headquarters of both the Legion and the Thalmor. Part of the reason for this is the eminently defensible nature of Solitude itself. Set upon a great stone arch that towers above the mouth of the Karth River, and surrounded by the soaring peaks of the Haafingar Mountains, Solitude is both a reinforced and breathtaking stronghold. Given the city's name, it may be ironic that over 80 percent of the Hold's population lives within Solitude's walls, but this is testament to the city's political importance, formidable defenses, and diverse population. The Bard's College is located here, as well as the sumptuous Blue Palace. Both are constructed atop the huge, natural arch that the city rests on, affording spectacular views over the Sea of Ghosts and Hjaalmarch to the east. Solitude's accessible docks and wharfs are in relatively calm waters, making trade one of the many reasons why the wealthiest Nords hail from this capital city. Solitude is the one, true cosmopolitan city of Skyrim.

5 Executioner's Platform

The first time you enter Solitude, a small crowd has gathered to watch the execution of Roggvir for crimes against the Empire; he allowed Ulfric Stormcloak to escape the city after killing the High King. Unless you interrupt (a crime), Roggvir is beheaded while the citizens watch, some cheering. There is an entrance up onto the crenellations above the main gate, allowing you to move (or sneak) around the city's perimeter walls.

The Winking Skeever is the only tavern in town and is sometimes host to a variety of interesting (and undesirable) folks. Corpulus Vinus runs this establishment. The minstrel Lisette plays here in the afternoons and evenings. The place is famous for wine and mead imported from Riften. Should Corpulus die, his son Sorex Vinus will run the inn. You can hire Belrand here. The upstairs rooms have numerous books to read. The wine cellar has a chest to steal from.

The walls behind the counter are lined with strange ingredients, potions, and dead animals. There's a large number of potions and ingredients to purchase (or steal) here, an alchemy table, a chest in the cellar, and a strongbox upstairs near the ledger.

B Castle Dour Dungeon Exit

This grating is inaccessible from the street. It is an escape route leading from a secret exit inside one of the prison cells in the Castle Dour Dungeon.

13 South Gate

C South Gate Exit to Skyrim

This windmill landmark can be seen from miles around. The ground-level gate leads to a spiral staircase down to the docks and out into Skyrim. The staircase up leads to a battlement and the rear (and unlocked) entrance to the Emperor's Tower.

D Castle Dour

Dominating the city's northern district is Castle Dour. Thick-walled and imposing, it protected its inhabitants from invaders. As the city grew, walls were added to surround the other, newer buildings. During a long period of peace, the Blue Palace was built for the Jarl, and Castle Dour became a secondary fortress. It now houses the Imperial Garrison and the Temple of the Divines. Find a couple of Skill Books around the sleeping area here:

However, he can't let it interfere with his other work. Should Beirand die, his apprentice Helmvar will take over. Beirand is married to Sayma and has a son named Kayd. 16 Courtyard and Crenellations

Captain Aldis

The ground-level features Solitude Guards practicing archery and sword strikes. Captain Aldis presides over this training, along with the execution you saw as you walked in. Head up the stone ramp to the crenellations, allowing quick (and more stealthy) access above the castle grounds to an upper entrance into Castle Dour and the Thalmor Headquarters, the Temple of the Divines, and then back into the market district. You can even drop off these crenellations, grabbing hanging moss or a bird's nest if you're facing southeast.

17 Castle Dour (Interior)

General Tullius Ahtar the Jailor
Legate Rikke Gianna

In ages gone by, there was just the castle keep. Thick walled and imposing, it protected its inhabitants from invaders. As the city grew, walls were added to surround the other, newer buildings. During a long period of peace, a separate palace was built for the Jarl. Castle Dour became an oversized gatehouse. It was eventually converted into the city's Imperial Garrison. General Tullius is in charge of the Imperial forces in Skyrim. He lives and works here along with his second in command, Legate Rikke.

- ◆ Follower: Ahtar the Jailor [2/47]
- ◆ Unique Weapon: Headsman's Axe [1/80]

General Tullius's War Room (Ground Floor)

The main level of the castle is given over to a battle map of Skyrim, where General Tullius and Legate Rikke plan the countermeasures against the Stormcloaks. It is here you can join with them during the Civil War Quests.

Garrison Barracks (Lower Floor)

Legate Aventus Caesennius runs a tight ship down here where the city guards and conscripts sleep. There's a kitchen here filled with food and an armory of Imperial weapons and equipment.

Castle Dour Dungeon (Lower Floor)

Commit a crime in Haafingar and the guards will throw you in the dungeons of Castle Dour. Ahtar the Jailor (who was part of the execution when you first arrived in Solitude) runs this place.

The upper level is a circular balcony overlooking the dungeon level. There are guards, scattered food and weapons, and three chambers along the outer wall to your right. The first is an interrogation room, the second is a torture room, and the third is Ahtar's office, with steps leading down to the evidence chamber on the lower level. Notice the hole in the wall near the belongings chest? This allows you to recover your equipment when escaping through the secret passage.

- ◆ Evidence Chest
- ◆ Prisoner Belongings Chest
- ◆ Loose gear

Castle Dour Dungeon (Dungeon Floor)

The roughly circular lower level features seven cells, most of them locked. Bjartur, a Stormcloak Soldier, is held in one of the cells if the Imperials control the city. You're usually placed in a cell on the jail's south side.

Instead of serving out your sentence, check the crumbling mortar on the wall behind you. It falls away, enabling you to flee into a dungeon corridor. Check the small hole, allowing you to reach into the Prisoner Belongings Chest in the evidence room. Then flee to the ladder, bringing you up into the Market District, [B] Castle Dour Dungeon Exit. Note that you can only do this once; after you escape, the guards repair the wall, and you'll have to serve your time or escape in the usual way in the future.

- ◆ Prisoner Belongings

18 Emperor's Tower (Interior)

Emperor Titus Mede III

Reviled by the Stormcloaks for his "betrayal" in the Markarth Incident and admired by the Imperials and Loyalists for his steadfastness during the Great War, Titus Mede is somewhat of a tragic figure, being forced by the weakness of the Empire to make deals with those he despises (the Thalmor) in order to preserve the Empire from total destruction.

This is the residence of the Emperor when he is in Solitude. You will come here for Dark Brotherhood Quest: To Kill an Empire.

Throne Room (Ground Floor)

Emperor Titus Mede III isn't usually here. This offers access to the kitchens and the upper floor.

Kitchens (Ground Floor)

As you'd expect, there's an abundance of food, tended to by the chef.

Upper Landing (Upper Floor)

There's an empty bedroom and a door requiring a key, unlocked by the chef during the quest. A Skill Book rests on a table in the small sitting area.

- ◆ Skill Book [Enchanting]: Catalogue of Weapon Enchantments

Banqueting Hall (Upper Floor)

This is where the Emperor and his trusted cohorts eat and talk about politics. There is an exit out to the South Gate (windmill).

19 Thalmor Headquarters

The hated Justiciars are headquartered in the garrison. Effectively run by the Thalmor, they oversee the terms of the peace accords signed by the Empire. Principally, this means rooting out Talos worshippers. Elenwen is the head of the Justiciars. Sometimes she forces her opinion on General Tullius as well. He has little use for her advice, but his emperor has commanded him to follow her orders on matters related to the treaty. Mostly this location is relatively empty, with the Thalmor more content to rule Skyrim from the remote Embassy in the mountains above Solitude. Check inside for a number of books to read, and the following:

20 Temple of the Divines

Rorlund Freir Silana Petreia

Formerly the Temple of the Nine Divines, this is the largest temple in all of Skyrim. Unlike the other temples, it reflects the Imperial view of all eight divinities being equal and represented. Outside is a small courtyard where Vittoria Vici's marriage will take place. There are several doors leading to and from the roof if you want a better look down onto this courtyard. Inside are shrines for each of the eight gods, plus an empty place where the Shrine to Talos once stood. If you side with the Stormcloaks during the Civil War Quests and take Solitude for Ulfric, the Shrine to Talos is reinstated. Each provides a Blessing.

Upstairs is a withdrawing area and exit to the crenellations. Downstairs is a storage room and a firmly sealed door, which can only be opened during Side Quest: The Wolf Queen Awakened. It leads to a second, dust-filled wine cellar, past a Health Potion to a hole in the wall and into Potema's Catacombs.

The Avenues District

Sometimes referred to as "the Stately Avenues of Old Solitude," it's more commonly just called the Avenues. This is the residential section of the city.

21 Hall of the Dead (Solitude Catacombs)

Styrr

This mausoleum is filled with vaults. The dead of Haafingar are buried here. As the local priest of Arkay, Styrr is the cemetery caretaker. Although this could just be his demeanor, Styrr believes that darkness is drawn to Solitude. Upstairs, Styrr's room has a long chest to pilfer from and a small chest behind the door. Into the cellar, there's the corridor to Solitude Catacombs.

However, each has preferred instruments or instructors.

This contains a sleeping area with four beds for the current students. There is a common area, Brendi's small bedroom, and a kitchen here too.

Main Entrance Hall (Main Floor)

31 Blue Palace

Jarl Elisif the Fair
Falk Firebeard
Bolgeir Bearclaw
Sybille Stentor

Odar
Erdi
Una

The following leaders of Solitude are loyal to the Imperials at the start of the Civil War. They remain in place, even if Solitude falls to the Stormcloaks, at the end of the Civil War Quests.

Jarl Elisif the Fair

With the recent death of Jarl Torgg, his beautiful widow, Elisif, rules Solitude for now. She is a young Nord woman, wholly unsuited to rule. The real power lies with General Tullius, technically an Imperial advisor. Personally, Elisif is sympathetic to the Imperial cause. She has a personal hatred for the Stormcloak leader Ulfric, who killed her husband, Torgg, and is just politically savvy enough to realize that her rule, and probably her head, are in place only so long as she is useful to the Empire. She believes that should the Empire regain control of Skyrim, she would be made High Queen.

Falk Firebeard (Steward)

Falk also serves as treasurer when necessary. He is a skilled bureaucrat, despite his years as a member of the Companions. He is loyal to Elisif but frequently gets frustrated at her foolishness. His hair is bright red, although shot with gray, hence his name.

- ◇ Unique Item: Shield of Solitude [3/112]

Bolgeir Bearclaw (Housecarl)

Jarl Elisif never goes anywhere without Bolgeir. He is utterly loyal and highly competent. What he lacks in creativity and social sensitivity, he makes up for in ferociousness. As a youth, he hunted bears. Once, when a bear turned on him, he cut its paw off with a single blow of his axe.

Sybille Stentor (Court Wizard)

Although she has served the Jarls of Solitude for over 20 years, Sybille looks no more than 18. Palace gossip has a multitude of theories for her unnatural youth. The one about her being a vampire may hold most credence. Her role as Court Wizard is a convenience.

- ◇ Trainer [Spell Vendor]: Sybille Stentor [1/12]

Exterior

Solitude's other awe-inspiring landmark is its ornate palace, where the newly appointed Jarl Elisif the Fair resides. It is built on the ruins of the old palace, which was burned to the ground when Queen Potema was finally defeated in the War of the Red Diamond. There is only one entrance: from the cloisters at the end of the Avenues District.

[1.20] Shadowgreen Cavern

It would be easy to miss this widemouthed cave if not for several stacked rocks that mark a dirt path leading inside.

A locked chest can be found in a crumbling stump atop the first ledge, overlooking the stream. Wolves guard a path to the east, along with several dangerous Spriggan and a more ferocious predator. When you've nearly come full circle and arrive at a drop-off to a deep pool, look for a narrow trail leading up the central rock formation. Slay more Spriggan as you climb, along with more beasts when you reach the summit, where a giant chest rests in soft sunlight.

For the thrill-seeker, look northeast from the summit to where another large chest rests on a tiny ledge on the cavern's outer wall. Use the Whirlwind Sprint Shout to reach this platform and escape with your loot. Then cross the rock bridge to a ledge that looms over the water below. Instead of diving straight down, step carefully off the upper ledge to land on one just beneath it, where a final chest awaits. Then take the plunge into the lake below before leaving this wondrous place.

This gated estate stands tall among Haafingar's central mountains and remains securely locked until you advance to Main Quest: Diplomatic Immunity. Those skilled in the shady arts can find plenty of chances for stealth and thievery here.

Exterior

No guards patrol the embassy's outer courtyard, and there's nothing of particular interest out here. The embassy's inner courtyard is patrolled by powerful soldiers and wizards, but you must first pass through the central structure in order to get there.

Barracks

The barracks are unlocked, and a few hardened soldiers lie in wait here, along with a couple of spellcasters—these eager troops will attack you on sight. Either flee immediately or slay these challenging adversaries so that you may loot the many chests within the barracks.

Thalmor Embassy (Interior)

Swipe the odd potion from a shelf or table as you explore the embassy. Tsavani waits in the locked northwest kitchen, but you cannot enter until you're let in during the Main Quest. Upstairs, an elf named Elenwen is hosting a marvelous dinner party. Collect many more potions around the dining room, then head for the southwest exit to return outside.

Elenwen's Solar

Upon entering this small structure, eavesdrop on the conversation between Gissur and Rulindil. Loot a chest to the north to obtain special quest-related documents and a key; you can obtain this key from Rulindil by either slaying the man or picking his pocket. Search closets and shelves for potions, and don't miss the upstairs chest or a third chest that's hidden beneath the west basement stairs.

Dungeon

The Thalmor Embassy dungeon lies directly below Elenwen's Solar. This area is strictly off-limits, but you can obtain a key that grants you entry by looting a chest within Elenwen's Solar or by slaying Rulindil at the same location and then looting his corpse or picking Rulindil's pocket. Open a particular chest down here to obtain the final quest-related document you seek. If you like, open a holding cell and speak with a prisoner named Etienne Rarnis to free him. The dungeon also sports a trapdoor that leads to a nearby cave. Obtain a key from any of the dungeon's guards (kill or pickpocket).

This area, located just south of Solitude, consists of a network of docks and an interior harbor, where workers patch up Haafingar's sea-worn vessels. A large merchant ship called the Red Wave remains docked to the south as well.

Jolf (Ferryman) [1/3]

During Thieves Guild Quest: Scoundrel's Folly, you must tail an Argonian named Gulum-Ei through the warehouse. Continue to follow Gulum-Ei until you spy him changing a business ledger. Then shadow him through a passage hidden among the shelves along the northeastern wall of the warehouse into Brinewater Grotto. Here you will find an underground river where Gulum-Ei and his goons have been moving goods stolen from the warehouse. This is only open after starting this quest.

NOTE If you kill Gulum Ei, you'll have to find evidence of the sale in Brinewater Grotto on your own. The Guild will not be pleased, and if you get a foothold in Solitude later, Gulum won't be around to act as a Fence.

Exterior

At first, it seems there's little of interest along the exterior docks. However, if you dive into the nearby water, you'll discover a sunken chest not far from the warehouse doors.

Lore: Castle Volkihar Overview

Long thought lost to the eternal mists of the Sea of Ghosts, the sprawling castle manifesting on the rocky islands north of Icewater Jetty has been seen by fishermen on Skyrim's northwest coast. Little is known about the previous owners of the place, but it has been home to the Volkihar Vampires and their leader, Lord Harkon, for centuries. The castle is a formidable place even from the outside, but once you manage to pass the Watchman, all the horror and decadence of the pure-blooded vampire is on display.

Castle Volkihar's interior is upgraded in stages throughout the Dawnguard Main Quest:

Initially, the castle is entirely sealed off. When you bring Serana home during Dawnguard Main Quest: Bloodline, you gain access to the main hall, but the rest of the castle remains sealed until you decide whether to accept or reject Harkon's offer.

If you side with the vampires, once Dawnguard Main Quest: Power of the Blood is complete, you are free to explore the keep; use the smithing, enchanting, and alchemy stations; and feed on the castle's thralls. You can also trade and seek training from the other members of the court.

After Dawnguard Main Quest: The Bloodstone Chalice, Serana's room is refurbished. You can now accept Faction Quests from the members of the court and recruit Death Hounds. You can also drink from the Bloodstone Chalice to enhance your Drain Life abilities.

After Dawnguard Main Quest: Kindred Judgment, you take possession of Lord Harkon's quarters. Optionally, you can improve the castle further, if you wish:

If you speak to Garan, you can order him to begin repairing the castle, which clears the rubble from a passage connecting the main banquet hall to the central courtyard.

If you speak to Valerica (in the Soul Cairn), you can convince her to return to the castle. She takes up residence in her laboratory (the Volkihar Ruins area) and takes charge of both the laboratory and the courtyard garden, which are stocked with potions and alchemy ingredients, respectively.

A Boat to Icewater Jetty

1 Jetty and Watchtower

An imposing watchtower stands over the jetty and moored boat. Access the mainland from here.

2 Volkihar Bridge

A grand span leading up to the main castle entrance, the bridge is flanked by gargoyle statues (which don't spring to life until the Dawnguard assault on the castle during Dawnguard Main Quest: Kindred Judgment).

B Door to Volkihar Keep

The entrance is guarded by a Watchman behind a portcullis. You're unable to enter until Dawnguard Main Quest: Bloodline is active.

3 Ruined Docks

The main docks of Castle Volkihar are in a shocking state of disrepair. There are numerous boats (and a galleon) sunk beneath the icy water (watch you don't drown as you extricate items from a chest inside the galleon hull) and four skeletons ready to attack from this U-shaped jetty.

This door is firmly sealed and is accessible only during Dawnguard Main Quest: Chasing Echoes.

D Door from Volkihar Undercroft

This door is firmly sealed and is accessible only during Dawnguard Main Quest: Chasing Echoes. It allows access into the Courtyard.

4 Volkihar Courtyard

This central courtyard garden, dominated by a moonial that reveals the phases of Masser and Secunda (the moons of Tamriel), is accessible only from the Undercroft during and after Dawnguard Main Quest: Chasing Echoes. Aside from the unkempt Nightshade allotment that Serana used to tend, this is simply a gnarled and overgrown reminder of Valerica's favorite spot in the castle. It is the only way you can reach the ruined north and east towers and the secret entrance to Volkihar Ruins (under the moonial, once you find the crests and slotted them into place).

Once the Dawnguard Main Quest ends, you can ask Valerica to return to the castle; once she does, she will replant the courtyard garden. If you sided with the vampires, you can also instruct Garan to remove the debris from inside the keep, allowing direct access here from Volkihar Keep.

7 Kitchens and Gaol

Rargal Thrallmaster is in charge of the "meat preparation" in the kitchen and attached gaol, where the vampire cattle (also known as thralls) are imprisoned. B Door to Courtyard

This door is buried under tons of collapsed rubble and is inaccessible unless you complete the Dawnguard Main Quest, side with the vampires, and ask Garan to clear out the rubble. If you do, you can use this door to reach the courtyard that appears in the Castle Volkihar Exterior Map (Location I of that map).

Volkihar Undercroft

Exterior

The unused inlet on the tower's northern side, which is where the entrance is located, is detailed earlier in the Castle Volkihar (Exterior) section.

Expect a skeleton attack from the right (north) as you enter this bridge platform. The bridge ahead (west) is raised and must be lowered (at location 8) to continue. Below is fetid water and spikes, with nothing of note to search for.

Interior

A Exit to Skyrim

This door is sealed until Dawnguard Main Quest: Chasing Echoes begins.

1 Entrance Landing

A few gold pieces and some bloody rags, along with a Skeever, greet you in this set of descending landings.

2 Frigid Cistern

HOLD 2: HJAALMARCH

TOPOGRAPHICAL OVERVIEW

The most impoverished of the nine Holds, Hjaalmarch's low-lying salt marsh is an eerie and mist-filled place. Known colloquially as "the Mouths of the Karth," this is where the mighty Karth River empties into the Sea of Ghosts by a variety of intricate channels. Also known as the Karth Delta, many adventurers have entered this dank bog, never to return. Most of the locals gravitate to the capital city of Morthal or the firmer (if colder) ground of the Tundra and farmland and the mountains flanking the Hold to the south and east.

Routes and Pathways

The protrusion of Solitude's giant natural arch is a useful marker, if only to remember how dominant the economy of neighboring Haafingar Hold is: Indeed, along the western edge is a path through the low country that leads to and from the strategically important town of Dragon Bridge (also in Haafingar). Farther away from the mists and hidden terrors of the marsh is the more rocky and mountainous south and eastern parts of the Hold. This area is dominated by Eldersblood Peak to the southwest, part of the Skyborn Range that separates Hjaalmarch from Whiterun. Eating into the Pale to the east is the dwarven temple ruins of Mzinchaleft. But the most impressive (and dangerous) portion of the Hold is a path cut through the mountains from the Tundra plains of Whiterun, which leads through the massive ruined city of Labyrinthian.

Lore: City Overview

Sitting on the southern edge of the Drakmyr marsh, dry ground can be hard to come by in Morthal.

The capital of the Hjaalmarch Hold, Morthal, is often shrouded in a thick fog, and ominous twisted trees grow from the surrounding marsh. Morthal is foreboding to travelers approaching it, and the torches of the town glowing in the fog often give the impression of wisps at a distance. Many travelers choose to steer clear of the place altogether.

Morthal is a town shrouded in mystery. Its people are reclusive and wary of newcomers, and only a single lumber camp supports its weak economy. The Jarl is among the most relaxed in Skyrim when it comes to taxation, but Hjaalmarch is also the poorest of the nine Holds. The Hold is still part of the Empire, but the Jarl is unapologetically vague in her enthusiasm for the Imperial Legate stationed in her dwelling. A number of the people in the town are concerned about the prospect of war. War brings outsiders, and outsiders are not a welcome sight in Morthal. Most would rather the conflict were kept outside their home, leaving them free to pursue their own interests.

Important Areas of Interest

① Main Thoroughfare

Lacking much in the way of paving, this main dirt track leads from one end of town to the other, with Highmoon Hall to the south and the lumber mill at the north end, after which the marshland encroaches and takes over.

② Dockside

This deck passes the structures where the town's guards and two of the more interesting inhabitants live and leads to a jetty. This is where the civilization of Morthal stops and the wilds of the Drakmyr marsh begin. The bog isn't particularly deep, and many townsfolk spend time watching the water from the covered jetty, hoping the strange sounds during the night will go away.

③ Highmoon Hall

The following leaders of Morthal are (begudgingly) loyal to the Imperials at the start of the Civil War.

Jarl Idgrod Ravenchrone
Aslfur (Steward)
Gorm (Housecarl)

Idgrod the Younger
Joric
Legate Taurinus Duilis

Jarl Idgrod Ravenchrone

Idgrod Ravenchrone is unlike the other Jarls of Skyrim: She is a hunched old woman, who speaks in riddles and parables and rarely ever directly.

However, her wisdom is sometimes misunderstood as the ramblings of an old woman, and some are beginning to lose faith in her. Idgrod spent her younger years wandering Tamriel in search of wisdom. Some say that she returned from her trip "touched." Gorm is actively plotting to remove her.

Aslfur (Steward)

Aslfur met Idgrod during the time she spent wandering Tamriel. A young warrior then, Aslfur protected Idgrod during her pilgrimage, and the two were married before returning to her home in Morthal. Over the years, Aslfur has served as Idgrod's advisor, and now, in her old age (and some say her insanity), he is more protective than ever.

Gorm (Housecarl)

Gorm was once loyal to Idgrod but has since come to think of her as insane and unfit for the throne in these trying times. Gorm has formulated a plan to remove her from power with little bloodshed. Aslfur and Idgrod are both aware of his plan, but Idgrod has refused to allow Aslfur to act on the knowledge, insisting that there is a larger role for Gorm to play.

Idgrod the Younger

Idgrod the Younger has heard the rumors that her mother is touched. In truth, Idgrod has been taught by her mother to seek insight and wisdom. Although neither recognize it, both are manipulating Magicka subconsciously in order to achieve their visions. The Younger Idgrod is much more adept at separating the visions from reality and is poised to make an excellent Jarl.

Joric

Joric is the youngest child of Idgrod Ravenchrone and Aslfur. He's a young boy who seems to have lost his mind at a very early age. He doesn't say much, but when he does speak, he is oddly insightful, even if his words make little sense.

Legate Taurinus Duilis

The following residents of Hjaalmarch arrive to take control of Morthal, once this Hold has fallen during the Civil War.

Jarl Sorli the Builder
Pactur (Steward)
Teeba-Ei (Housecarl)

Jarl Sorli the Builder

Sorli the Builder is the great-granddaughter of the founder of Stonehills. She lives in the first building constructed in the town by her ancestors. Leadership has been passed down through her family, but whatever that used to mean, it has little bearing on the present day. Reduced to a single building and a marginally profitable mine owned by Bryling of Solitude, Sorli attempts to cling to whatever authority she currently has, while dreaming of something greater for herself.

Pactur (Steward)

Pactur's life revolves around Sorli. He assists with running the mine, which means doing all the work Sorli doesn't care to, and he feeds her ambitions in whatever way he can.

Teeba-Ei (Housecarl)

The sole survivor of a wrecked trader vessel, Teeba-Ei wandered into Stonehills nearly frozen to death. He was taken in and cared for, and was grateful that few questions were asked about how he came to be there. He now gladly serves Sorli, working the mine, and is willing to follow her everywhere, even if that means going to Morthal as her Housecarl.

Highmoon Hall is the central meeting place for all citizens of Hjaalmarch. Although, few seek audience with the reclusive and mysterious Jarl. She spends most of her days pottering around this sturdy Nordic structure. Aslfur handles many of the citizens' grievances in the main hall, and some have come to question whether he is trying to remove that burden from his wife or trying to hide her deteriorating condition. The war room manned by Legate Taurinus Duilis across from the Jarl's chamber is an inconvenience Idgrod is having to live with. Discover a Skill Book mixed in with other, less valuable books on the top shelf in the upstairs bedroom.

④ Guardhouse

Benor

The guardhouse is not a picture of military order. The Jarl of Hjaalmarch had little need for an organized militia. The Legion has attempted to improve the old guardhouse and the jail (which is more of a cellar with a single cell [Adept]), but it is still a mess. ⑤ Moorside Inn

Jonna Lurbuk gro-Dushnikh

Jonna is the sister of Falion, both from Hammerfell. She and her brother have traveled together their whole lives, but when something "drew" Falion to Morthal, they both settled. The town was without an inn at the time, so Jonna modified one of the homes. She doesn't get a lot of business, but she does appreciate visitors who stop by and can stand to hear Lurbuk's painful ballads. 7 Morthal Cemetery

Too small for a Hall of the Dead, the few folks of Morthal make do with a more traditional Nordic graveyard to the west of town. Odd noises have been heard during the night there.

Falion is a Redguard. While his sister Jonna is accepted by the people of Morthal, Falion is looked at with fear and distrust. He has settled in Morthal because he felt drawn to the location and wishes to remain relatively close to the College in Winterhold. He spends his time in his workshop and is the only person in the realm who knows how to cure vampirism. 4 Stairwell 1

Use extreme care when entering this stairwell, which leads up to the dining hall's second floor. A trapdoor opens beneath your feet as you enter, dunking you into a watery pit. The water actually spares you from falling onto lethal spikes—keep well away from the spikes as you carefully loot the sunken corpses, then swim onto the stairs (or pull the chain and let the trapdoor lift you up). Surrounded by rocks, these impressive dwarven ruins stand in the frozen wastelands in Hjaalmarch's northeast corner. South of the ruins, an ornate elevator grants passage to the Mzinchaleft Gatehouse, where a dwarven mechanism can be activated to grant passage to Blackreach [10.02]; known as the Great Lift at Mzinchaleft. However, you can't use this elevator until you've navigated all of Mzinchaleft and used it to exit the Gatehouse, which is the ruins' final area.

During a Miscellaneous Objective for Mjoll the Lioness, you can discover a unique weapon here at Mzinchaleft called "Grimsever." See the Quests chapter for further details.

◇ [2.N] Collapsed Burial Ground

A Nordic burial mound has slowly been sinking into the mire. It has been ransacked plenty of times. Gnarled and twisted trees and plants grow within the stones that have remained upright. Among the fallen rubble is a chest (Locked: Novice).

- ◇ Chest (Novice)

◇ [2.O] Black Arts Burial Ground

Enter this snow-covered burial mound from the open roof and deal with the skeleton who attacks you. In one of the side alcoves is a necromancer impaled by a dagger on the table. Claim the powerful Staff of Revenants near his body, then search the rest of the ruin to find a Skill Book.

◇ [2.Q] Ghost Barrow

While wandering near Kjenstag Ruins, close to the road (to the south) or the pine forest, you may encounter a ghostly figure at night. It moves up across the snow-covered forest floor to this barrow and disappears. Attack the grave robbers here. You may not see it. Open the trapdoor (Adept). Inside is usually a Silver Necklace, enchanted Draugr sword, and a shield.

◇ [2.R] The Conjurer's Caravan

Two bandits have ambushed a caravan and slaughtered the magician, and are dividing the spoils. Slaughter them on sight, before they do the same to you. Check the wagon for a basket of ingredients and the following:

- ◇ Apothecary Satchel (2)
- ◇ Potions aplenty

◇ [2.S] Hamvir's Summit Hunter's Camp

At the very southeastern corner of Hjaalmarch, in the rocky crags close to Labyrinthian, is a remote hunter's camp with two foragers waiting by the campfire (or on a hunt if no one is here). This location offers spectacular views across Whiterun to the south.

1 Balcony Overlook

The narrow rocky tunnel opens up to a much larger subterranean fortification, with a strange stone plateau upon which a shimmering barrier has been conjured. From this point on, you must fight enemies of the opposing faction.

2 Stone Bridge

Expect hounds to attack you as you head down from the balcony overlook, past the stalagmites and over the stone bridge. Also check the crenellations; you can use Bats or Whirlwind Sprint to reach the top of a stalagmite, along the northern wall, where a hidden chest is waiting.

3 Circular Lower Bailey

Expect combat with foes throughout this lower circular campsite, with stairs leading to the lower crenellations and a spiral set of steps to the rear (west).

4 Vampire Balconies and Weystone Source

The toughest foes are guarding a magical barrier at the top of the bailey, which you access via the spiral stairs. One carries a Weystone Focus that, when plugged into the Weystone Source, deactivates the barrier. Dexion Evicus—the Moth Priest—is inside the barrier. HOLD 3: THE PALE

TOPOGRAPHICAL OVERVIEW

Dominated by ice fields and glacial deposits, especially along its northern shore, the Pale (named for the pallid Tundra and pigmentation of its Nord inhabitants) is one of the four oldest Holds in Skyrim. The harsh environment here makes life a chore rather than a joy, and the shape of the Hold has led some to refer to it as "the old boot." Ragged peaks, snow-covered ground, and little sunshine means most of the Nords congregate at the city of Dawnstar, a popular port and mining town. The Pale lacks waterways, save for Lake Yorgrim, located in the southeastern part of the Hold.

Routes and Pathways

Possessing fewer roads and pathways than most other Holds, there is still a reasonable road connecting the Pale to Hjaalmarch, which continues past Fort Dunstad and eventually heads east into Eastmarch and Windhelm or south below the snow line into Whiterun Hold. This Hold's perimeters are dominated by mountains that run north to south along the western edge, and the Sea of Ghosts runs along the northern coast. To the east are the Winterhold Mountains, which follow the perimeter south and then east, to the partially frozen Lake Yorgrim. The River Yorgrim begins from here, merging with the mighty White River just east of Anga's Mill, this Hold's most easterly location. The rest of the dwarven ruins, barrows, and windswept catacombs are nestled between crags and the jutting, unforgiving mountains. Follow the often-elusive minor paths to find some of these locations, or venture off into the snow to locate them all.

Lore: City Overview

Dawnstar, capital of the Pale Hold, sits on Skyrim's northern coastline, halfway between Winterhold and Solitude. Because of the glacial icefields just to the east, it is the last port before Windhelm that is not icebound. Dawnstar's economy is driven by its two mines, and the people of Dawnstar often find meaning in the stones. Like their leader, Jarl Skald the Elder, they stand unbreakable and firm despite all their troubles. Residents of the city fight the weather, the beasts, and raiders every day in order to keep goods and ore flowing into and out of their port and market.

Important Areas of Interest

① Main Thoroughfare

The main road (packed with snow and dirt) is in two tiers, with the structures built around the inlet to the Sea of Ghosts. The upper track houses the main structures, while the lower road connects all the buildings owned by individuals. East and west of the roadways are the two mines that help bolster Dawnstar's economy. To the north, farther along the shoreline, is the entrance to an old, abandoned sanctuary. Dominating the town is the Nightcaller Temple, perched and ever watching over the rugged rocks.

② Northstar Port (and the Sea Squall)

Captain Lief Wayfinder

Located at the base of the cliffs under the Nightcaller Temple, these docks host incoming trade ships. The vessel currently docked in these frigid waters is the Sea Squall.

⚓ Harlaug (Ferryman) [2/3]

③ The White Hall

The following leaders of Dawnstar are loyal to the Stormcloaks at the start of the Civil War.

Jarl Skald the Elder

Skald has ruled Dawnstar since his father's death on the battlefield 35 years ago. He came into his rule in his teenage years and has never really lost the arrogance and sense of invincibility that comes with that age. He is quick to judge and doesn't change his mind once he has decided something.

Jod (Housecarl)

Jod is Captain of the Dawnstar's Guard. He takes his duty and his loyalty to the town seriously. He served on a ship in the Great War, and because of his experiences, he is not anxious to fight the Empire. Skald's fervent animosity toward the Empire has made Jod doubt him.

Bulfrek

Bulfrek's family has served the Jarls of Dawnstar for generations. He is not pleased with being born into a life that he considers to be without honor. Although he would never speak it out loud, he would do almost anything to be free of his duty.

Madena (Court Wizard)

Madena is far from home. She is a Breton who served as a battle-mage in the Imperial Legion during the Great War. After seeing the horrors of a large war firsthand, she moved to Dawnstar, hoping that being a court mage in a small hold would be free of complication. She refuses to take sides, insisting that her job is to help the people of Dawnstar. She will support whoever is in power.

Forkmar Banner-Torn

The following residents of Dawnstar arrive to take control of the capital, once this Hold has fallen during the Civil War.

Jarl Brina Merilis

Brina was once renowned throughout the Legion for her leadership and her tactical ability. She is a stern woman who tolerates no foolishness from those under her command. She does have a warm side that sometimes shows through, although it is rarely seen since the start of the war.

Horik Halfhand (Housecarl)

Horik has served with Brina nearly his whole life. With no command ambitions of his own, he is content to serve as her bodyguard. Horik has nothing but respect and admiration for his commander, and there are few things that would shake his loyalty to her.

The White Hall keep serves as both the Jarl's residence and the place where he holds court. The keep's main feature is the large combined throne room, mead hall, and council chamber that dominates the largest portion of the main floor. To the right are the Jarl's Bedchambers, while Madena, the Jarl's advisor (and excellent spell vendor), resides on the upper floor, along with his manservant Bulfrek. Madena's spell shop has been partly turned over to the Stormcloaks as a war room, with the blessing of Jarl Skald. Find a Skill Book on a small table upstairs and another tucked between a barrel and pony keg in the room with the training dummy.

④ Dawnstar Barracks

Jarl Skald's guards rest here after their patrols, murmuring about the nightmares all the inhabitants are suffering from. The Barracks has a main floor (where most of the drinking occurs) and an upper sleeping quarters leading to a balcony overlooking the shoreline. Down the stairs is the Dawnstar Jail. Remarkably, a Skill Book is tucked away in one corner of the jail.

Erاندur

Windpeak Inn is Dawnstar's only tavern and is run by Thoring and his young daughter Karita, who both live in the building. Karita serves as a bard, and their servant Abelone handles most of the menial chores, chopping wood or using the grindstone in the pen outside. Currently, the place is a meeting spot where anxious townsfolk (such as Fruki and Irgnir the miners) gather to gossip and worry about the strange nightmares that have been keeping them from their beds.

Located overlooking the shoreline of Dawnstar, Rustleif has his smithy and home set up facing the main road. Rustleif is a renowned weaponsmith, and he is often called upon to arm and outfit the Jarl's men. His Redguard wife, Seren, assists him and is currently with child. Inside, their home is comfortable but a little spartan.

Brina (a respected Legion commander) retired to Dawnstar and has been living here for several years. She shares her dwelling with her bodyguard and friend Horik. Recently, when the Jarl of Dawnstar seceded from the Empire, she attempted to talk sense into him, but to no avail. Beitild Iron-Breaker

Beitild Iron-Breaker manages Iron-Breaker Mine. She's in constant competition with Leigelf Quicksilver, the owner of Quicksilver Mine and her former husband. Beitild lives in the house she used to share with her husband. She refuses to do much else but tend to her mine, eat, and sleep.

Also known as the Museum of the Mythic Dawn, the building is dedicated to the cult in Dawnstar. This is Silus's vain attempt to capture some attention and infamy for his family's past deeds. The pride of the collection is his impressive assortment of Mythic Dawn memorabilia, as well as a piece of Mehrunes' Razor that is kept in a secured display case. Karl and Irgnir, the workers of Iron-Breaker Mine, live here in this modest dwelling. They have finally saved up enough gold to purchase from Beitild.

◇ Chest

13 Iron-Breaker Mine

This mine is located on the outskirts of town to the east. Karl, Irgnir, Gjak, and Bodil work here. This mine produces iron and has a smelter for extracting steel from the iron. Under the watchful (some might say, stern and overbearing) gaze of Beitild, the mine is producing a large amount of ore and is a boon to the local economy. Fruki and Lond, the miners working the Quicksilver veins, live here in this small structure in which Fruki was raised. They occasionally speak with Borgny and Edith, who take the other shifts to keep the mine productive—when Leigelf isn't running the operation into the ground.

◇ Chest

15 Quicksilver Mine

This mine is located on the outskirts of town to the west. Fruki, Lond, Borgny, and Edith work here. This is the only Quicksilver mine inside Skyrim's borders, but despite this, the mine is suffering—from marauders and falling production. In fact, it is practically shut down as Leigelf spends his time obsessing over his wife and the competing mine. More proud than sensible, Leigelf's negligence is causing all of his workers to consider quitting in frustration or fear of attack. The mine holds a Skill Book. Find it inside the small crate on the ground floor of the farthest cavern.

This massive dwarven city remains largely sealed off until you venture here as part of Thieves Guild Quest: Blindsighted. Only the exterior ruins can be explored until then. Use stealth whenever possible here.

Exterior

Bandits have established a campsite at Irkngthand's exterior ruins. The front gate is sealed, so go west, pillaging a chest and swiping some potions from a wooden table. Go left and scale the stone steps, skirting bear traps and swiping some potions from a lean-to found at the top. Find a chest tucked away beneath another wooden table near some bedrolls, then avoid a pressure plate trap in the tunnel-like passage that follows. Pull the lever beyond the tunnel to open Irkngthand's front gate. Scale a series of narrow wooden stairs afterward to locate the bandits' leader. Loot two more chests that the chief guards. Raid a chest at the balcony's other end and find the second lever there. You must pull one of the levers, then race to the other side to pull the other lever to open the gate below or the levers will reset. You can tell that the gate is open when the dwarven lamps on either side are both lit. Make your way downstairs, looting the chest that's tucked away near the steps. A Exit to Skyrim

1 Entrance Grotto

A short tunnel opens up into this grotto with a stream at its base. If Dawnguard Main Quest: Awakening is active, a group of vampires are speaking about the death of Vigilant Tolan. Expect combat with vampires, a thrall, and Death Hound. Then head south to the small stone tower and activate the chain inside to open the main entrance gate to the northeast.

If Dawnguard Main Quest: Awakening hasn't been started, only wolves are here, and a rockfall prevents you from progressing farther.

3 Draugr Catacombs

Expect combat between Draugr and a vampire, plus a Death Hound. The chamber has four portcullis gates leading to corridors. Although you may expect something to happen if you take the scroll from the pedestal, nothing does. Open the gate with the lever on the left. Gaze across the gloom at the central stone island, then descend and fight a vampire named Lokil and his brethren near a rock platform. 8 Ceremonial Crypt

This circular stone island is actually an elaborate sarcophagus. To open, solve the following puzzle:

Puzzle Solution: Follow the single line of flames back from the circle, and find the brazier it passes through. Push the brazier to the outer base it slides onto, channeling the fire around. This leads to another brazier to shift; continue to follow the fire around, channeling it onward using the braziers (there are five in total to push or pull; the fire won't move if you shove the brazier the wrong way). After the final brazier slots into place, a monolith is revealed. A Mysterious Woman, who was sealed in this crypt, falls out of it.

HOLD 4: WINTERHOLD HOLD

TOPOGRAPHICAL OVERVIEW

The northeastern coast of the Sea of Ghosts around the city of Winterhold is by far the least populated area of Skyrim, and the same can be said for the entire Hold. It has no towns or villages other than the capital, and many adventurers perish in the glacial fields that surround the city. Winterhold boasts a vast stretch of sharp and rugged coastline, and even the mouth of the White River, but it is otherwise devoid of flowing water. Instead, the vast majority of the Hold is either encased in snow or ice or part of the vast and treacherous Mount Anthor range, interspersed with strange or ancient burial sites, including the ominous Saarthal.

Routes and Pathways

There is but a single main road from Winterhold and its college of mages, which connects to the Pale. With no rivers, the only other pathways are the minor goat and hunting trails that weave through the mountains. These are recommended routes when first exploring such a vast and foreboding wilderness. The entire north and western part of the Hold is rugged coastline; don't forget your explorations can take you well into the Sea of Ghosts. To the west is Fort Fellhammer, a good marker since it is close to the border of the Pale. Should you refrain from using the main road, the Wayward Pass is another option, as the path it connects to weaves through the Mount Anthor range and takes in many locations. Otherwise, the edges of this Hold are less rocky and more glacial and feature a variety of lonely and lost barrows, including one said to be the tomb of the legendary warrior and founder of the Companions, Ysgramor.

Hold Capital: Winterhold

Lore: City Overview

Once a great capital rivaling Solitude in power and importance, Winterhold is now little more than a shell of its former self. Eighty years ago, a seemingly never-ending series of storms lashed out at the northern coast of Skyrim, eventually causing most of the city to plummet into the Sea of Ghosts, an event now known as the Great Collapse. Strangely, the College of Winterhold was unaffected, remaining firm on a now freestanding spire of rock. Many inhabitants of Winterhold, both mages and magic-fearing Nords, were forced to abandon the city, and those who remained still eye the College with suspicion.

Since that time, the population of Winterhold has continued to dwindle. Other than the College, only a handful of buildings still stand. What remains of the town's economy is based around serving the needs of the College. As such, Winterhold has become something of a haven for mages in Skyrim, a safe refuge from distrustful Nords.

for her situation, she's placed all the blame squarely on the shoulders of the College and spends every day cursing its existence.

Assur

Assur is confused by the reaction he gets when he repeats what his parents have always told him: mages can't be trusted, and anyone who uses magic is dangerous. He's been taught that warlocks and witches are even worse than elves, and no one but a Nord is a friend to Winterhold.

Malur Seloth

A slouch with few marketable skills, Melur has landed himself in what he perceives as a wonderful position. Korir is convinced that he's in cahoots with the mages of the College of Winterhold and therefore expects little of Malur in the way of servant's duties. Malur has done nothing to dissuade this misunderstanding; in fact, he's cultivating it to get away with as little work as possible. Naturally, he survives if the balance of power shifts to the Imperials.

Kai Wet-Pommel

The following residents arrive to take control of Winterhold, should this Hold fall during the Civil War.

Jarl Kraldar

Kraldar is, by all accounts, what may well be the last in a long line of nobility in Winterhold, due to the cataclysm. He understands that while the College may seem a bit of an eyesore to the rest of the province, being on good terms with the Arch-Mage is in Winterhold's best interest. Ever the optimist, he firmly believes that Winterhold will be restored to greatness someday, and often regales his Housecarl with his dreams for the future. He's less chatty with Malur Seloth.

Thonjolf (Housecarl)

Thonjolf's family has served the Kraldars for generations. It's all he knows. It doesn't matter that there's little for him to actually do or that the Great City of Winterhold doesn't exist anymore; he has a duty and he will perform it to the best of his ability. He's aware of Malur's abuse of his position and has repeatedly attempted to speak to Kraldar about it. Kraldar refuses to listen, so Thonjolf grows more frustrated with every passing day.

One of the buildings of old Winterhold has been repurposed as the Jarl's Longhouse, since the original home of the Jarl was lost in the Great Collapse. Korir rules from this new location, though currently there's very little "ruling" that actually takes place; the College remains separated from the mainland (both physically and socially), and the handful of residents left need little governing on a daily basis. Korir is convinced that without the Imperials or the College, Winterhold will someday regain its former glory. Jarl Korir is grateful for any protection and actively encourages the Stormcloaks to plan their attacks from his war room. In the downstairs bedroom, a Skill Book has been stashed in a woven basket that sits atop a barrel.

NOTE There is no jail in Winterhold, but that doesn't mean you can hack, steal, or annoy anyone you please. If you're caught committing a crime in Winterhold, you're taken to serve out your sentence on a remote glacial cave north of here in the Sea of Ghosts, aptly named the Chill. See the Secondary Location for the details.

4 The Frozen Hearth

Dagur	Nelacar
Haran	Angwe
Eirid

The only profitable business left in Winterhold, the Inn serves as the sole place petitioners to the College may stay. As such, Dagur has put aside any personal feelings he may have toward wizards and does his best to look on the bright side. Nelacar is paying Dagur good money to maintain a small room in the Inn, where he can do some research on his own, away from the College. He also takes a cut of Enthir's questionable sales downstairs in the cellar. Enthir (a member of the College) stays here during the Thieves Guild Quests and becomes a Fence for you. Down in the cellar, a Skill Book is hidden among a collection of crates and sacks.

3 Jarl's Longhouse

The following leaders of Winterhold are loyal to the Stormcloaks at the start of the Civil War.

Jarl Korir

Whatever optimism might have lived in Korir's heart was beaten down by decades of hearing how much better things used to be before the Great Collapse. Knowing nothing else, he carries on the grudges of his ancestors while refusing to abandon his home, so he's done everything he can to persevere. He'll maintain the traditions of his forefathers if it kills him, and he fails to realize the impact it's having on his son.

Thaena

Thaena's life isn't what it was supposed to be. The beautiful city she should've grown up in doesn't exist, her husband has turned into a bitter, cynical man, and the future for her son looks bleak. While Korir may stop short of assigning blame, Thaena has no problem pointing a finger at those responsible for her family's plight: the mages of Winterhold. Refusing to accept any responsibility

1 Winterhold Bridge

Many of the townsfolk in Winterhold think this bridge is being held up by magic alone, and they are correct. Faralda waits to greet (or halt) anyone thinking of entering the College, forcing them to prove they have an aptitude for magic. Ignore her, and the gates into the College remain closed to you. Fall from the bridge, and expect a long death plummet. Walk on the shores of the Sea of Ghosts below, and you'll find the remains of fallen masonry and stones, but only Clams, Nordic Barnacles, and Slaughterfish Eggs to collect.

2 Main Courtyard

 Dominated by a statue of the first Arch-Mage of the College, this is the hub of the facility, offering access back out to the bridge and into the three Halls and one of the trapdoors into the murky depths of the Midden. The exterior windows offer exceptional views of the coastline.

NOTE If you're looking for a specific member of the College, most move constantly throughout the Halls of Attainment, Countenance, and Elements. Any mages who are usually in a single location are mentioned below.

3 Hall of Attainment

This is to the west of the Courtyard and is where the students and some of the teachers rest. If you join the College, the first room on your right is where you can sleep. There are two floors and a door up onto the roof where you can access the other main parts of the College, which can be accessed from ground level as well.

◆ Chest [2]

4 Hall of Countenance

The senior members of the College have a home here, which is a tower laid out in the same fashion as the Hall of Attainment. Check the upper floor and the roof access. There are many staffs here, but stealing them isn't wise. The ingredients (and Soul Gems) on display near the Alchemy Lab (and Arcane Enchanter) can be used without penalty, so seek them out if you're looking for a particularly rare item (or gem) to craft. Also note the trapdoor entrance to the Midden at the base of the spiral steps.

5 Hall of the Elements

The College's grand central chamber is where students practice their magic and senior members discuss important matters. You attend your first lesson in magic here. Ancano usually mooches around these parts. This is a major location during the College of Winterhold Quests. The entrance is flanked by two doors, each leading to a higher level of the main tower.

6 Arch-Mage's Quarters

You can reach the Arch-Mage's Quarters from the Hall of the Elements or the Arcanaeum. These are the chambers of Savos Aren, where he spends some of his time. The circular chamber is lined with ingredients for mixing and features a fungal garden lit by magical floating lights. These aren't yours to take, unless you wish to incur the wrath of the College elders (or can manage it without being seen!) or you're patient enough to complete the College quest line, at which point the chamber becomes yours.

◆ Crafting: Alchemy Lab, Arcane Enchanter

◆ Unusual Gem: [5/24]

7 The Arcanaeum

You can reach the Arcanaeum from the Hall of the Elements or the roof parapets. This is the home to Urag gro-Shub the Lorekeeper and his extensive collection of tomes (although he's always on the lookout for more research materials). The Ysmir Collective, a selection of rare books, is on display, and many books are scattered about. If you want to read, you've come to the right place. The Investigator's Chest has rings to be used in the Midden, as part of College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: Forgotten Names.

The Midden, a hidden underbelly where ancient and unspeakable magic has been practiced (and mostly forgotten about) isn't a place where College members usually go.

Frostflow Lighthouse (Interior)

Enter the tower to discover a butchered person. Search the corpse to gain a new Dungeon Quest and obtain an informative journal. A Torchbug in a Jar rests atop the mantel—this pertains to Side Quest: Captured Critters. In the northern room, you find Sudi's Journal on the desk, Mani's Letter in the knapsack under the bed, and a Skill Book. In the room adjacent, you find the journal of Ramati, the dead woman you just found. Piecing together the story from these journals will lead you to find Mani's Cellar Key, hidden in an urn on the mantel above the fireplace. Ramati's Journal also mentions a promise to cremate her husband in the lighthouse fire in the event of his death (this is important later).

Take the key and use it to reach the cellar where you can clear out a cluster of Chaurus and loot a locked chest. Venture through the large hole in the basement's southeast wall to proceed to the Frostflow Abyss.

A Exit to Skyrim

1 Pillar Puzzle Chamber

Loot a few Draugr corpses on the way to this first chamber, then inspect the dead scholar's remains to discover a book that provides a clue on how to solve the room's puzzle. Spin the glyph pillars to create the pattern described in the scholar's book. The lone south pillar should be a Whale, while the other two north pillars should be a Snake and a Hawk; then pull the central lever to open the way forward. Collect the Coral Dragon Claw from a pedestal just beyond the gate, unless you've already acquired it from Winterhold.

◇ Dragon Claw: Coral Dragon Claw [4/10]

HOLD 5: THE REACH

TOPOGRAPHICAL OVERVIEW

Over 600 years ago, historians described the Reach as the most cosmopolitan of Skyrim's Holds. Others stated "the Reach could be mistaken for one of the petty kingdoms of High Rock; it is full of Bretons, Redguards, Cyrodiils, elves of all stripes, and even a few misplaced Khajiit." Topographically, it takes up the entire western edge of Skyrim and is arguably the most difficult to traverse and easiest to lose your way in. The towering crags, the sheer number of locations, and the ferociousness of its Forsworn inhabitants (friendly hamlets are few and far between) mean that many fail to stop and marvel at the Hold's rugged beauty and numerous ruins.

Routes and Pathways

The Druadach Mountains rise to the west of this Hold, cradling Markarth and other settlements within its peaks, crags, and foothills. The Karth River and its tributaries are the waterways you can track as you familiarize yourself with the geography; pause every so often to explore the bisecting pathways from the main road, which loops in from Whiterun Hold to the east and circles back again. Then rejoin the road, until you can muster the stomach to venture into the scrubland and rocky ravines, ready to stumble upon a Forsworn camp...or worse! Karthwasten and Old Hroldan provide some degree of safety, and the Blades hideout known as Sky Haven Temple is another beacon of tranquility surrounded by hard terrain and harder adversaries. Fort Sungard and Broken Tower Redoubt are both fortifications to explore, and two Orc Strongholds (Mor Khazgur and Dushnikh Yal) are also here for you to find. To the northeast is Hjaalmarch, but the majority of the Reach borders Whiterun; once you step into the flat Tundra plains, you know you've left the Reach.

Lore: City Overview

Markarth is an epic canyon city built eons ago by dwarven stonewrights in the Druadach Mountains. It is a defensive fortification constructed around the underground city of Nchuand-Zel. Primitive Reachmen were the first to repopulate the sprawling city after the dwarves' disappearance. Hundreds of years later, Markarth is in a state of turmoil stemming from what some historians (and Nord nationalists) call "the Markarth Incident."

In 4E 174, at the height of the Great War, a tribe of native Reachmen called the Forsworn took advantage of the Empire's desperate straits by launching an open rebellion, wresting control of Markarth and declaring their independence from Skyrim. This was seen as a stab in the back by both the Empire and more radical Nord elements, but the Forsworn were left unchallenged for a time.

Two years later, in a short but very bloody war, Nord irregulars invaded the Reach and drove the Forsworn from Markarth. The Nords were led by the most vociferous adherents to Talos (whose worship had been outlawed by the terms of the White-Gold Concordat that ended the Great War), who claimed that they had been promised freedom of worship within the Reach in return for their help in retaking the Hold. While true, this secret agreement violated the terms of the treaty. Shortly thereafter, the Thalmor ambassador arrived in the Imperial City to confront the Emperor. Faced with the threat of a second war, the Emperor was forced to send the Imperial Legion to back the Thalmor Justiciars. The Nords refused to back down, and many were arrested or imprisoned. The Markarth Incident was a large step toward the eventual Civil War.

Aside from conflict and power struggles, Markarth is the center of silver mining in Skyrim. The city is a contrast between the beauty of its architecture, based on its dwarven heritage and the wealth of its silver mines, and the squalor and grime of the mining operation. Markarth simmers with tension between the ruling Nords and the native Reachmen who work the mines. Meanwhile, the surviving Forsworn hide in the hills, terrorizing the Reach and waiting for an opportunity to strike.

Important Areas of Interest

① City Gates

The only way to enter Markarth (until you've visited Understone Keep and can Fast-Travel there) is to step through the giant dwarven doors. However, you can use the rocks to the north or the river to the south, and sneak into the guardhouse from either of these side entrances. There are some covered battlements from which the guards look out across the Reach and two watchtowers, one of which forms the side of the stables.

② Highside

Located on the spur's north side, behind and above the market, Highside is where the most prominent members of the city (besides the Jarl and his advisors) live and work, mingling with the lower classes who stagger around the canal streets during let-out time at the Silver-Blood Inn.

③ Marketplace

Endon Adara
Kerah Hogni Red-Arm

An open-air market near the city gate, the Marketplace is where you'll watch a brazen Forsworn named Weylin attack one of the street traders (Margaret), meet Eltrys, and begin Side Quest: The Forsworn Conspiracy. One of the stalls has several necklaces to steal. Search Margaret's corpse for the key to her room inside the Silver-Blood Inn.

- ◇ Trader (Food Vendor): Hogni Red-Arm [4/9]

③ Arnleif and Sons Trading Company

Lisbet Imedhnain Cosnach

Another of the ancient Markarth trading houses, this dwelling adjacent to the market functions as the general store for Markarth. Currently run by the widow Lisbet, the trading company has fallen on hard times due to the Forsworn situation.

④ Silver-Blood Inn

Kleppr Hroki and Hreinn
Frabbi Ogmund

The Silver-Blood Inn is a relatively successful establishment considering the problems Markarth is facing and is perhaps the most welcoming of Markarth's social dwellings. It is comprised of a central bar and roaring fire, with rentable rooms on either side. Hire Vorstag to aid you in your adventures here, learn eloquence from Ogmund, and beckon Kleppr to ask him for the latest rumor around town and beyond. His wife, Frabbi, is a little more crabby. Search the rooms for loose gear, a few coins, and books. Continue Side Quest: The Forsworn Conspiracy by searching the only rented room that is locked (Adept), which belonged to the deceased Margaret. There's a journal in the end table that helps your progress.

⑥ The Treasury House

Thonar Silver-Blood
Betrid
Rhiada
Ildene and Donnel

This is an impressive building befitting one of Markarth's most important families, who take charge of the Reach should it fall into Stormcloaks hands (Thongvor will move to Understone Keep with Reburus and Yngvar, while Thonar, Betrid, Kolgrim, and the servants will remain in Treasury House). This family mansion of the Silver-Blood clan is the most elaborate dwelling in Markarth and also functions as a bank. It is where a frightening Forsworn insurrection is mounted during Side Quest: The Forsworn Conspiracy. Inside, a Skill Book rests on a stone shelf at the foot of the stairs. Behind the counter is a locked gate (Expert), behind which are some ingots and a safe. The rooms to the southeast are where the servants sleep. The locked door (Apprentice) to the northwest leads to Thonar's private chambers.

The Crag

This is the central spur of rock that splits the city into north (Highside) and south (Riverside) sections.

11 Guard Tower

This dwarven tower atop the central rock spur is now used as a barracks and lookout tower for the soldiers who patrol the city. Head down the spiral steps to the training room and sleeping quarters.

12 Temple of Dibella

Hamal Orla and Anwen Senna

The other main structure atop the Crag is the ancient Temple of Dibella. There is a Shrine of Dibella where you can get a Blessing Sybil's Antechamber: where the High Priestess sleeps. An Inner Sanctum (Locked: Expert) is where only women are allowed to go. A small number of priestesses wander the temple grounds. Inside the Sanctum, more priestesses pray and seek sensual contemplation, including Hamal, who is an exceptional enchantress. Aside from books (including a Skill Book on a shelf), ingredients, and a variety of trinkets, the following offerings are to be found. The door at the far end of the Inner Sanctum leads to an altar, where Dibella's fetish is prayed to and offerings are made.

13 Shrine of Talos

This is a relatively grand chapel. During Imperial control, it will be deserted and "closed," but even the Thalmor know not to desecrate this place for fear of fueling the rebellion. The shrine functions again if the Stormcloaks seize control. Eltrys usually hides out here.

- Shrine of Talos [6/17]

Riverside

This section of Markarth encompasses the area along the river, near the smelter, on the south side of the central spur. Reachmen laborers of Markarth live here; mainly they work in the smelter but are also maids and servants in other parts of the city. There's a slight feeling of despair cloaking the already-dirty air.

14 15 Smelter and Smelter Overseer's House

Mulush gra-Shugurz

The smelter is by the river, for all your ingot-creation needs. Above the smelter, by some half-hidden steps at the waterfall, is the locked entrance to Mulush's dwelling.

16 The Stocks and Ducking Cage

For those who are unwilling or unable to work in Cidhna Mine to pay for their crimes, Markarth has another solution. The Stocks and Ducking Cage stands right outside the entrance to the mine, a reminder of the fate of any criminals who don't work or who talk back to their overseers. This can result in humiliation or death. Fortunately, you don't suffer either; you're put to work in the mines if you commit a crime in the Reach!

17 The Warrens

Degaine Eltrys Weylin
Hathrasil Garvey Dryston
Omluag Cairine

Most of the poor in Markarth live in the Warrens, an old crypt with run-down chambers for the poorest of the city's residents. Aside from the chambers that have suffered a cave-in, all six rooms are locked (Novice), and good practice for your Lockpicking skill. Only Weylin's room has anything more than a few pieces of food in it; there is a chest inside with a Note important for Side Quest: The Forsworn Conspiracy.

18 Cidhna Mine

Urzoga gra-Shugurz Odvan
Madanach Uraccen
Braig Borkul
Duach Grisvar the Unlucky

This silver mine (Cidhna means "silver" in the Reach dialect) is the primary source of Markarth's wealth. It is also a prison where criminals work off their sentences. Many of the prisoners here are Forsworn, imprisoned for life after the Nords recaptured the city. The mine is owned and operated by the powerful Silver-Blood clan.

A Door to Markarth

1 Entrance Shaft

Urzoga gra-Shugurz and her Silver-Blood Guards patrol this area, which is usually off-limits to visitors. The main mine to the south has already been excavated and is sealed off.

5 Campfire

The large hub room has exits out of the mine, to the two tunnel areas. The entrance to Madanach's Quarters are guarded by Borkul the Beast and a moping man named Uraccen who usually sits by the fire.

6 South Tunnel

Mining occurs in these parts.

Part of an ancient dwarven city, these ruins have been slowly collapsing during earthquakes. No one ventures into these parts, due to the instability of the area and reports of mechanical monstrosities guarding the place. 23 Understone Keep

Jarl Igmund
Raerek (Steward)
Faleen (Housecarl)
Legate Emmanuel Admand
Thongvor Silver-Blood
Reburrus Quintilius (Steward)
Yngvar (Housecarl)
Calcelmo (Court wizard)
Aicantar
Anton Virane
Rondach and Voada
Blacksmith: Moth gro-Bagol
Ondolemar

The following leaders of Markarth are loyal to the Imperials at the start of the Civil War.

Jarl Igmund

Jarl Igmund, son of Hrolfdir and nephew of Raerek, recently took the throne when Hrolfdir was killed in battle with the Forsworn. Igmund is an Imperial supporter (some might say a puppet) and holds court all day and eats and sleeps in the Keep. He sits upon the Mournful Throne, a relic and seat of power famous for centuries across the Reach.

Raerek (Steward)

Igmund's Steward and successor manages the household, serves as the treasurer, and commands the palace guard.

- ◆ Unique Item: Raerek's Inscribed Amulet of Talos [48/112]

Faleen (Housecarl)

She is completely loyal and very competent. She was Igmund's father's Housecarl and managed to escape from the ambush with the gravely wounded Igmund, although she blames herself for not being able to do more. As a result, she is almost paranoid about Igmund's security and will rarely allow him out of her sight.

Legate Emmanuel Admand

The following residents of Markarth arrive to take control once this Hold has fallen during the Civil War.

Thongvor Silver-Blood

Thongvor is the head of the Silver-Blood family, who controls the majority of Markarth's wealth. More involved in politics and Ulfric's rebellion, Thongvor leaves the business operations of the family to his brother Thonar.

Reburrus Quintilius (Steward)

Reburrus Quintilius is the steward to Thongvor. His family has served as the chief financial and political advisors to the Silver-Blood family for generations, and Reburrus has distilled the wisdom of the generations to a fine art.

Yngvar (Housecarl)

The huge housecarl to the Silver-Blood family, Yngvar has a reputation for cheerful brutality. He is completely loyal to the Silver-Blood clan and loves his job. He particularly loves it when he can beat someone to a pulp. But he is also surprisingly cultured; he attended the Bard's College as a youth, until he found better employment using his other talents.

The following citizens are staff of Understone Keep:

Calcelmo (Court wizard)

Calcelmo is here in order to study the Dwemer ruins in and around the city. He views his duties as the castle mage as a distraction from his main scholarly interest. He is completely uninterested (and mainly unaware) of politics. He has been quite put out by the Forsworn situation, which has prevented him from doing his usual wide-ranging travels. He is secretly in love with Faleen, although he has never told anyone else or done anything about it.

- ◆ Trader (Spell Vendor): Calcelmo [9/12]

Aicantar

Aicantar is Calcelmo's assistant and nephew. He is less than enthused by his uncle's plans to study more dangerous Dwemer Ruins and prefers they spend time studying spells and enchanting. Aicantar is aware of Calcelmo's secret love for Faleen but is unlikely to do anything about it directly. Faleen scares Aicantar, and the thought of her being around the laboratory more makes him nervous.

Anton Virane

Anton is a genuine Breton from High Rock in a city of Reachmen, a fact that constantly annoys him (because everyone assumes he's a Reachman). He is particularly bigoted toward Reachmen. He is an excellent cook, though, which is why the Jarl continues to tolerate him.

Rondach and Voada

Moth gro-Bagol

- ◆ Trader (Blacksmith): Moth gro-Bagol [12/33]

Ondolemar

Ondolemar is the head of the Thalmor Justiciars in Markarth, and a prime example of why most folk hate the Thalmor. Ondolemar is completely confident in the Dominion's ultimate victory over the Empire. He's a Thalmor true believer, and is not here if the Stormcloaks take this city during the Civil War.

Understone Keep (Interior)

Understone Keep is a gigantic dwarven structure, now used as the city's castle. Built by the Dwemer into the western wall of the canyon, the Castle Wizard, Calcelmo, has recently uncovered additional chambers (and worrying underground monstrosities) and a wealth of artifacts that he keeps in his museum. The sheer size of this place and ability to be well guarded negates some of the instability the location has recently suffered from.

A Door to Markarth

1 Entrance to the Mournful Throne

The first time you enter via the main doors, Thongvor Silver-Blood is having a heated discussion with Brother Verulus about the worship of the outlawed deity, Talos. At this huge intersection of stone and fire, head right to the Dwemer Museum, or move up to meet the Jarl, who is guarded by both Markarth Guards and Thalmor Soldiers. Jarl Igmund sits on the Mournful Throne, usually with his Steward and Housecarl by him. Outside, on the upper top of the stairs where Ondolemar and his guards like to stride about, are two stone tables. The one to the right (northwest) houses a Skill Book.

The epic cavern is usually where Calcelmo and Aicantar can be found, dedicating their lives to researching this mighty dwarven stronghold of historic significance. When you emerge from the entrance cavern close to the throne room, you are greeted by a rushing river, various curved passageways, and circular towers (one with seats to sit on and gaze down at the rushing water), as well as an entrance to the Hall of the Dead. Of more significance is the entrance to Nchuand-Zel itself. 11 Dwemer Museum (Locked: Adept)

The Dwemer Museum showcases Calcelmo's collection of artifacts recovered from ruins across Skyrim. Only three guards patrol this area, keeping watch for intruders. This space is normally off-limits—the guards will aggressively arrest you if you trespass here—but you can get Calcelmo's permission to visit the museum in any number of ways; see Thieves Guild Quest: Hard Answers for details.

The Museum has the finest collection of Dwarven artifacts (weapons, armor, items, and books) in the entirety of Skyrim and the highest concentration of locked containers in any area of the game. There's even a small selection of Falmer items. To the south is a gate (Apprentice) leading to a small workshop with an Unusual Gem and locked chest (Expert). Just southwest of the crest of the mountain where the Shrine to Peryite stands is a tiny temple structure and fallen outer ruins. It is home to a vicious Wispmother. Slay or flee if you wish; this location has no further items of note.

[5.K] Sabre Cat Ravine

In the steep crags south of the Shrine of Peryite is a ravine where a Sabre Cat has been brought down by arrows. There's loose gear along the ravine, and a skeleton of a previous feast the Sabre Cat enjoyed.

- ◇ Knapsack
- ◇ Loose gear

[5.L] Totem to the Dragon

On the lower and slightly flatter scrubland below the Shrine to Peryite are the remains of a Wood Elf. There is blood everywhere, and the body is slumped against a writhing stone column, likely a totem to dragon worshippers of old. Among the offerings is a diamond!

◊ [5.M] The Exposed Miner

Head east, away from Broken Tower Redoubt. Once the mountainous terrain drops along your left (northern) side, head down the first ravine you see. Close to a trio of pine trees are the skeletal remains of a miner.

- ◊ Mineable ore (Corundum)

◊ [5.N] Hagraven Camp: Ragnvald Scree

Once you reach Ragnvald, take the winding path south, unless you pass the snow line, and enter a small Hagraven Camp. Bloodied goat appendages are strewn about, but the place is empty...until you enter the tent and the Hagraven returns!

- ◊ Chest

◊ [5.O] Dwarven Rubble: Salvius Farm Trail

Take the goat trail north from Salvius Farm to discover these sections of dwarven rubble. Note that there may be a World Encounter occurring here as you arrive. Among the ancient stones under a small bush is a chest to open.

- ◊ Chest

◊ [5.P] Shrine of Zenithar: Four Skull Lookout

West of Four Skull Lookout, over the rise of the hill, is a narrow stone balcony leading to a small Shrine to Zenithar. A few offerings are available, but the main reason to visit is the blessing you receive. Fall off here, and you're likely to die.

- ◊ Shrine of Zenithar [2/5]

◊ [5.Q] Brush Strongbox: Riverside

Close to the chiming Nirnroot, just northeast of the long protruding rocks in the river, the bank rises slightly, and a collection of dead brush makes a less-than-competent hiding spot for a small dagger and strongbox.

- ◊ Strongbox (Adept)
- ◊ Loose gear

◊ [5.R] Lost Treasure: Purewater Run

North of Purewater Run, on the south riverbank just east of where the two waterfalls meet but before the last waterfall cascades down toward the bridge, is a long-forgotten treasure chest.

- ◊ Chest

◊ [5.S] Forsworn Camp: Reachwater River

Follow the road west past Reachwater Rock until you see this small Forsworn Camp on the hill to the south. As you approach, two soldiers (Imperials or Stormcloaks, depending on who controls the Reach) attack the camp. Join in the assault, and they'll thank you for the help. Then loot the four tents and corpses, finding a Skill Book in a wooden bucket in one of the tents

- ◊ Skill Book [Block]: Death Blow of Abernanti
- ◊ Chest
- ◊ Satchel
- ◊ Loose gear

◊ [5.T] Dragon Mound: Karthspire Bluffs

Related Quest: Main Quest: Alduin's Wall

This Dragon Mound is initially sealed. It opens during Main Quest: Alduin's Wall. If you visit during or after this point in the Main Quest, the resurrected dragon will likely be circling overhead. Challenge it on the high bluff near the mound, or lure to attack the nearby Forsworn camp at Karthspire Redoubt.

◊ [5.U] Reachman's Altar: Red Eagle Redoubt

Among the rocks and scrub southeast (and downhill) of Red Eagle Redoubt is a cliff-top promontory with the ruined remains of an old altar and a throne, along with a chest and bird's nest.

[5.V] Lovers' Camp

Two corpses lie in this remote camp, having been savaged by a wild animal. Kill the beast, then search Karan's body for a journal. It seems she was eloping with her lover, Talvur. The journal hints at a treasure nearby; search the tree stump behind the tent for a knapsack and some items.

If you leave the camp and return later, you'll find that someone else (perhaps Karan's father?) has passed this way: The camp has been cleaned up, the bodies buried, and a Shrine to Mara has been erected to commemorate their love.

[5.X] Reachwind Burial Mound

[5.Y] Forsworn Camp: Gloomreach Pathway

Journey along the winding path from the main road by the river, toward Gloomreach, and you'll encounter a small cliffside Forsworn camp with two foes to defeat or sneak past.

[5.Z] Shrine of Dibella: Bridge at Old Hroldan

Cross the bridge spanning the rushing river, and you can stop to receive a blessing at this roadside Shrine to Dibella. You may not be the only pilgrim; one or more hunters can often be found resting here as well. Steal the offerings if you wish, but beware if there are hunters nearby, as they will take offense at this sacrilege.

- ◆ Shrine of Dibella [5/8]

[5.AA] Juniper Tree Ruins

If you follow the dirt trail through the southernmost part of the Reach, you can find this small ruin perched near the edge of the bluff. Pick through the rubble to find a chest and Skill Book. Weather permitting, there's a great view from the edge of the cliff—just watch your step.

- ◆ Chest

[5.AB] Cradle Stone Crag

In the hills to the east of Valthume, you can find this animal den set into the mountains. When you approach, you'll see two trolls fighting for territory. Watch their fight play out, then move in to kill the survivor before he can recover. The ironically named Frofnir Trollsbane lies dead in this den. Search his twisted corpse for an excellent Troll-slaughtering weapon!

An unassuming crag in the Reach is actually the gateway to a vast network of uncharted caverns and mountain land in the northern climbs of the Reach and Haafingar Hold. The cave is south of Mor Khazgur and north of Drudach Redoubt.

Darkfall Cave

Interior: Darkfall Cave

A Exit to Skyrim

1 Waterfall Pool

Aside from the rushing water, this place is quiet. Continue to navigate the curving tunnels past this water feature.

B Hidden Exit

This small alcove has a Frostbite Spider. Approach from the south (as you exit this cave system once the quest is over, although it can be opened prior to the quest), and you can remove a hidden stone wall, allowing quick access back out to Skyrim.

2 River Ride

Cross the rickety bridge, optionally mining the Moonstone if you wish. There aren't any more tunnels here, except the one the river is racing through. Take a deep breath (although you can surface easily) and ride the two tunnels into the lower depths of the cave.

3 Subterranean Spider Lair

You land on some rocks with a couple of Frostbite Spiders following you downstream. Tackle all the spiders as you work your way down this cavern. Engage the Giant Frostbite Spider in its eastern alcove (watch for the gap in the natural bridge!) before ransacking its lair.

◇ Chest

4 Crossroads Camp

A dead Breton lies here (along with a note on her inability to deal peacefully with trolls) near a small makeshift camp. Scour it for items, then assess your situation. If you're running low on supplies, you can take the ascending path that leads to the Upper Ledge Cave and eventually back to the Hidden Exit (Location B). Or you can press on and take the descending tunnel deeper into the caves. There's also a secret cave door here, just behind the wooden planks leaning up against the wall. Use Clairvoyance to reveal it; it leads down to the Great Chantry of Auri-El.

5 Upper Ledge Cave

If you take the tunnel that ascends to the west from Location 4 (step over the trip wire or face boulders in your back), you end up in a circular cave with ledges that lead back up to the Hidden Exit (Location B). This is used to exit the cave (as you can't swim back).

◇ Danger! Boulder Trap

6 Troll Cavern

Two trolls are lolloping around this large cavern with shallow water pools, near a male corpse. Stay in the eastern section and deal with them. They are guarding a rather bloody chest.

◇ Chest

7 Great Chantry of Auri-El

If Dawnguard Main Quest: Touching the Sky is not active, this area is empty, and you have no choice but to exit via the narrow tunnel here, which leads back to the Crossroads Camp (Location 4), after dispatching some additional trolls roaming this area. If you are on the quest, you meet Knight-Paladin Gelebor here. Gelebor prepares you for the Pilgrim's Path to five Wayshrines and raises the Portal to Darkfall Passage. Dip the ewer into the water before proceeding, and take advantage of the blessing before you leave.

9 Skeleton's Grotto

This is a small grotto with a low ceiling. Inspect the skeleton here, but the real prize awaits those with fine swimming abilities. One of the pools of water isn't that shallow; dive into it and swim east to a hidden cave (Location 10)!

You are now in the central part of this cave system, where the Falmer have built two makeshift camps (the other is directly above this one). Use the waterfall to judge your position. This large, low-ceilinged cave has a few huts to check for items and more Falmer (along with their disgusting pets) to deal with. Exit the camp by heading around the waterfall and moving north through a connecting cave to a second Falmer Camp (Location 14).

13 Fallen Falls Passage

If you fall down the waterfall, you'll have to use this passage to return to the first Falmer Camp. You can't access it from the first Falmer Camp, as there's a hidden stone wall to lift with a rope lever. Head up the narrow tunnel, pausing to inspect a skeleton draped over a chest.

14 Falmer Village (Lower)

Around the corner to the west of the Falmer Camp is a larger village with more huts to search and Falmer to fight. It's easy to overlook the skeletal remains near a satchel at Location 18. The end of the tunnel has another dead Snow Elf (with a note to read, and loose gear) and two rope levers. The left one releases a rock wall to the right (north). The other releases a multitude of traps that can kill the Vale Sabre Cat on the other side of the rock wall.

Arkngthamz is a hidden Dwarven ruin located in the Reach, just south of the Orc Stronghold Dushnikh Yal and a short romp south of Reachwind Eyrie. As you approach its ancient exterior steps, you feel a slight vibration, an earthquake from down below. Push open the imposing Dwarven doors and enter this ancient city.

A Exit to Skyrim

1 Fallen Pillar and Stream

Cross a fast-flowing stream via a fallen pillar here. The remains of a Dwarven Spider are at one end of the stream.

2 Grand Cavern (East)

A massive earthquake sundered this room recently, caused by Katria's failure to solve a Tonal Lock, creating a huge chasm down the center. This side of the cavern is now home to a ghost named Katria, who approaches you shortly after you enter.

3 Katria's Remains

Katria's ill-fated fall ended here. Inspect her twisted remains for her journal and a few small valuables.

◇ Katria's Journal

4 Grand Caven (River)

The river at the bottom of the cavern is fast-flowing (and can be dropped into once your adventuring here is over) and has several corpses scattered around its banks (two automaton, two Falmer). Check the ledge to the right of the waterfall for a chest.

◇ Chest

5 Pipe Vent Tunnel and Waterlogged Chamber

Inspect the Falmer corpses and check under the walkway for a rare Dynamo Core. Watch for Dwarven Spiders as you progress into the waterlogged room. Climb the pipe to continue on, or stay and check underwater for a chest.

◇ Chest

6 Kinetic Resonators: Machine Room

The first gate opens as the Kinetic Resonator on the other side is struck by blasts of steam from a broken pipe. Step into the machine room. Strike the second resonator (with any weapon) to open the second gate. Then ready yourself for Falmer in the next corridor.

7 Grand Cavern (West)

A small Falmer camp has been constructed on this side of the cavern. Remember to check the hut and the ledge to the north for a chest.

◇ Chest (2)

8 9 Chasm Ledge and Falmer Nest

Take care as you progress up the chasm, as the rumbling continues. Before you cross the first bridge, edge to a small ledge and chest. Then cross the bridge. Expect three Falmer in this area. Remember to double back across the fallen pillar bridge to a ledge on the opposite side of the chasm with some Falmer fencing.

◆ Chest

10 Barred Chamber and Inlet Stream Tunnel

Inspect the sealed door to your left (south) and observe that there is a chest behind it. To reach it, head west to the cliff edge and drop down to the riverbank; then turn south and trek up an inlet stream tunnel. This leads to the half-fallen rear of the chamber behind the door and a fallen Dwarven Centurion at the foot of the waterfall. Expect Dwarven Sphere combat before the chest. Use the ground lever to open the door from the chamber.

◆ Chest

11 Waterfall Grotto

Pockmarked with Falmer nest holes, attack the foes (Falmer and a Chaurus) here. There are two secret areas (Locations 14 and 15) on the opposite side of the waterfall.

12 Falmer Camp

Slay the Falmer in this small camp, and journey southwest to reach the next location, or head north to continue toward your goal.

◆ Chest

13 Chaurus Tunnel

In this tight tunnel, expect Chaurus attacks as you ascend.

14 15 Waterfall Grotto (High Ledge and Secret Tunnel)

At the top of the Chaurus Tunnel is a stream leading to the top of the Waterfall Grotto. Watch for a Falmer dropping onto this precarious perch. Check the tiny ledge to the left (north) for a chest. Then (carefully) turn right (south), drop down the grotto wall to a lower ledge and to a second, lower stream. Inspect this secret tunnel for a chest. Then drop into the grotto water in search of one more secret, an underwater passage to the west. Dive into the pool at the base of the falls and search for this tunnel leading into a thin, secret cavern with another chest, close to the skeletal remains of a warrior.

16 Zephyr's Glade

Sitting on the edge of a log over a nasty drop (where Katria fell from) is the ghost's trusty bow. Carefully reach for it before making your way up the cliffs here.

◆ Unique Weapon: Zephyr [DG6/7]

17 Tonal Lock Chamber

A spectacular summit with dwarven arches to descend through, and a flat lower area littered with dwarven arrows and skeletal remains (at least eight corpses are here, some of whom have gear to grab).

Puzzle Solution: There are five resonators that make up the Tonal Lock. Bring out your favored bow (or Zephyr), and utilize the scattered arrows on the ground if you run out of ammunition. Figure out the correct order to hit each resonator. There are two clues to help you:

The first clue provides the correct listing of the first two resonators to hit. This is the sketch on the last page of Katria's Journal.

The second clue is on the corpse of the only non-skeletal adventurer lying on the ground near your feet. Search him for a scrap of paper, which correctly lists the second and the third resonator. Now take careful aim...

The correct order to strike the resonators is as follows: lower row, left (directly above the left door). Then lower row, right (directly above the right door). Then upper row, left (of the dwarven head). Then upper row, right (of the dwarven head). Then, finally, lower row, middle (below the dwarven head).

CAUTION If you strike the resonators in the wrong order, the dwarven head above the lock glows red, and Dwarven Spiders and Spheres are released. Three mistakes, and the Dwarven Centurion behind the middle door clanks into life!

Beyond the puzzle is the treasure room with an Aetherium Shard (called Glowing Crystal Shard if you haven't received this quest yet) and a chest and other items. Don't forget to find the chest on the ledge above the exit tunnel to Location 19 too!

◆ Aetherium Shard [1/4] ◆ Loose Gear
◆ Chest (2) ◆ Scrap of Paper

18 Waterlogged Tunnel

This is the preferred (and rather terrifying) exit back to the Grand Cavern. The long drop into the water is safe. Well, so long as you hit the water...

HOLD 6: WHITERUN HOLD

TOPOGRAPHICAL OVERVIEW

Whiterun Hold, named for the fortress city in the eastern part of its vast Tundra plain, is the most centrally located of the nine Holds. Roads are numerous and well maintained, and visibility across the plains is excellent. This Hold is relatively flat, surrounded by the mountains of the Reach to the west, Hjaalmarch and the Pale to the north, and Falkreath to the south. However, Whiterun's southeastern corner is dominated by the gigantic and soaring Throat of the World—the highest mountain in all of Tamriel. It is here that many climb the 7,000 steps to High Hrothgar, home to the mysterious and reclusive Greybeards.

Routes and Pathways

Whiterun is certainly one of the most well-tracked Holds, with main roads and excellent access west to the Reach, with a border road north through the town of Rorikstead and up toward Dragon Bridge. The Tundra plains have a number of odd barrows and giant camps to investigate, and the center is dominated by Fort Grey Moor. The road here allows you to travel north, up through the mountains to reach the dreaded Labyrinthian in Hjaalmarch. Farther east is Whiterun and the roaring White River and town of Riverwood on the southern border with Falkreath. Another road stretches north from here, into the wilds of the Pale. There's yet another road that skirts the northern foothills of the Throat of the World, following White River valley into Eastmarch. And although the first of the 7,000 steps that pilgrims take to reach the summit of the Throat of the World begins in Ivarstead (in the Rift), the actual mountain lies within Whiterun's domain. However, only those possessing a Thu'um (Shout) powerful enough to impress the Greybeards of High Hrothgar will be allowed to finish the journey to the summit.

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Lore: City Overview

Whiterun is seen as the most “pure” Nordic city in Skyrim. In Whiterun, Nords live as they have for centuries: their lives are simple, harsh, and rooted in ancient traditions. Even the city’s fortifications—wooden and stone palisade walls and the sheer defensive advantage offered by its position on a large bluff that raises the city above the surrounding Tundra—are archaic by contemporary standards. So while Windhelm may serve as the Stormcloaks’ center of operations in the Civil War, it is the culture of Whiterun that best exemplifies what it means to be a “True Nord.”

Whiterun is located on the eastern end of its Hold, a cold and windy Tundra that fills the center of Skyrim. It was constructed around the Companions’ hall of Jorrvaskr, which, centuries ago, was the sole structure on the mountain. Now, Whiterun is a large city, albeit one that retains the feel of a smaller Nord village.

When approaching Whiterun, the towering fortress of Dragonsreach dominates the view. Its history can be traced back to the First Era, when King Olaf One-Eye subdued the great dragon Numinex in a legendary duel of Thu’ums atop Mount Anthor, and brought him back to the fledgling town as a captive. It was then that the magnificent keep was rebuilt and renamed to serve as a cage for Numinex, whose head still adorns the Great Hall.

Important Areas of Interest

① City Gates and Drawbridge

The winding stone path that leads from the outer gate to the drawbridge and to the entrance to the Main Gate is designed to keep marauders at bay. The drawbridge is open and utilized in the Civil War Quests.

② Plains District

This is the first district any visitor to Whiterun enters, so named because it is the lowest of the three and therefore closest to the plains outside the city. It contains all the major merchants and the marketplace.

③ Main Gate and Guard Barracks (West)

Persuade, bribe, or otherwise insist that the guard lets you into Whiterun the first time you reach these gates. There is a small guard barracks just over the bridge and a couple of Alik’r Warriors (Side Quest: In My Time of Need) you can speak to. Explore the rushing canal water under the bridge or the platform on top of the guard barracks roof if you wish. Inside, there’s little but food and Nordic pottery to steal.

◆ Chest

④ The Drunken Huntsman

Anoriath Elrindir Nazeem Ahlam

The Drunken Huntsman is a unique shop specializing in the needs of hunters. It sells bows, arrows, clothing, suits of armor, and anything else that may be useful to those who stalk Skyrim’s game. But the establishment is also set up as a small bar, and customers can buy a small selection of alcoholic drinks, including a specially made Wood Elven wine. The shop is run by the Wood Elf brothers Anoriath and Elrindir. Jenassa the Hireling is to be found here, too. There’s also a Skill Book behind the counter. Check the back bedroom on the ground floor near the central cooking spit for a chest and strongbox. Upstairs is a single bedroom with an empty chest.

④ Severio Pelagia's House

Severio Pelagia

Nestled above the market is the residence of Severio Pelagia, who owns the Pelagia Farm just outside Whiterun's walls. Aside from a cooking pot and some delicious long taffy treat, there's very little worth stealing in this single-floor dwelling, which has a small bedroom and office on either side of the main dining area and fire pit.

- Shadowmark: "Loot"

⑤ Marketplace

Carlotta Valentia Fralia Gray-Mane
Brenuin

The Whiterun Marketplace rivals the Bannered Mare as the most popular congregation spot in Whiterun. It is open during the day and closed at night. When the marketplace is open, stalls sells various items, including fresh fruits and vegetables. The stalls are run by Carlotta Valentia (fruits and vegetables), Fralia Gray-Mane (trinkets and jewelry), and Anorriah (fresh meat).

⑥ The Bannered Mare

Hulda Uthgerd the Unbroken
Saadia Sinmir
Mikael

The Bannered Mare is Whiterun's most popular gathering place, a tavern and inn that offers cold mead, fresh food, and a warm and welcoming fire. Its sign is that of a majestic horse carrying a banner. Hulda, the publican, is fond of telling the story of the horse, which belonged to a Nord king who died in battle; the king may have died, but his favorite filly carried his banner still, inspiring the leader's warriors to victory. The building has a central tavern area and a side kitchen with a business ledger and strongbox near the roasting spit. To the rear of the main bar area is a small bedroom and office where shady deals may be done. There are two sets of steps to separate bedroom areas.

⑧ Arcadia's Cauldron

Arcadia

Arcadia's Cauldron is Whiterun's apothecary. It sells potions and potion ingredients of all kinds and is probably the most respected of the city's non-Nord-owned businesses. Aside from the goods she sells, she is an excellent trainer. Check the office at the back of the store for a Skill Book and the locked door (Adept) next to the lab; this leads to the area under the stairs and a chest. Upstairs is a landing balcony overlooking the shop and a cooking pot.

⑨ Ysolda's House

Ysolda

The young maid Ysolda lives in this house, making handcrafted goods that she hopes to sell. She is currently selling her goods to the Khajiit caravans, raising money to buy a shop of her own. Her dwelling is modest, locked, and has no loot to speak of, although there's a bowl of impressive potatoes.

- Shadowmark: "Empty"
- Marriage Prospect: Ysolda [28/62]

⑩ Belethor's General Goods

Belethor

The Wood Elf owner Belethor will buy and sell just about anything, and he's got a fair collection of items that could best be categorized as junk. From tomatoes to troll skulls, there's something here to steal, and a Skill Book on one of the shelves. In the back is a kitchen, and upstairs is a balcony, bed, and ledger with a strongbox.

⑪ Olava the Feeble's House

Olava the Feeble

Besides being a seer, Olava is also something of a hermit. She rarely leaves her house, and her residence is usually locked. Inside, there's a small table with a Petty Soul Gem and a setup for a reading, but otherwise the place is devoid of valuables.

Member: Athis, Njada Stonearm, Ria, Torvar, Vignar the Revered

Housekeeper: Tilma the Haggard

Blacksmith: Eorlund Gray-Mane

Jorrvaskr is the ancient and honored mead hall that has served as headquarters of the mercenary company the Companions for untold generations. According to local legend, Jorrvaskr is actually the oldest building in all of Whiterun and once existed by itself on the mountain, with the other buildings the town being built up around it over the centuries. Jorrvaskr is a place of honor and courage, and to walk into the hall is to proclaim, "I am a warrior and will die as I lived—in glorious battle!" The mead hall is also the place where you may join the Companions as a Shield-Brother or Sister. The exterior of the building features two front doors and a rear outside dining and training area.

Inside, the main floor is dominated by the mead hall and fire pit. A Skill Book rests on a low shelf here. At one end of the hall is a sparring area, and around the sides are various shelves stocked with books and food. The door at the north end leads to a bedroom with another chest. The stairs at the south end lead down to the living quarters. Displayed on the wall here are the pieces of Wuuthrad, a powerful weapon wielded by their founder, Ysgramor. Check Kodlak Whitmane's bedroom chambers to find an Unusual Gem that pertains to Side Quest: No Stone Unturned.

19 Skyforge and the Underforge

The Skyforge is the great forge used by Eorlund Gray-Mane to craft his masterful weapons, shields, and armor. It got its name due to the fact that it's a large, ancient forge, located outside on a mountain, close to the sky. The forge is large, and unlike most forges is rather ornate. It is in the shape of an eagle, with wings spreading out from each side. Eorlund is happy to trade his wares with you, but will only train you after you join the Companions.

This is only accessible during the Companions quest line. You can return here to deliver or utilize Totems; consult the quests starting on page 250 for more details.

20 House Gray-Mane

Olfina the Golden Avulstein Gray-Mane

House Gray-Mane is the residence of Eorlund Gray-Mane and his children. It is a large, solid house, built by Eorlund over 35 years earlier. Recently, due to their differing stances on the Civil War, Clan Gray-Mane has bad relations with Clan Battle-Born, with whom they had always been friendly before the conflict started. Jon Battle-Born and Olfina the Golden are said to be in love, but the families certainly do not approve of such activities. Outside the house is a small paddock with a cow. Inside the house is a central fire pit and dining area, with a small entrance alcove and Avulstein's bedroom. Upstairs is a landing and two bedrooms with some books and valuables (usually necklaces) lying around.

24 House of Clan Battle-Born

Olfid Battle-Born Jon Battle-Born
Bergitte Battle-Born Alfhild Battle-Born
Idolaf Battle-Born Lars Battle-Born

This large house holds three generations of the equally large Clan Battle-Born. This warrior family—owners of the Battle-Born Farm outside Whiterun—has lived in the city for centuries; their ties to Skyrim and the ancient Nord ways cannot be disputed. The Clan has come out vocally in support of the pro-Imperial forces in the ongoing Civil War. Recently, due to their differing stances on the Civil War, Clan Battle-Born has bad relations with Clan Gray-Mane, with whom they had always been friendly before the conflict started.

The rear door is usually unlocked, while the front door isn't (Novice). Inside, the ground floor is one large chamber with a cooking spit and dining table dominating the area. To the northwest is Olfid's bedroom, which has some valuables on display (including a Skill Book) and a locked door (Adept) leading to a small office with books and an Imperial Missive, useful during Side Quest: Missing in Action. Cloud District

The Cloud District is the smallest of Whiterun's three districts. It was so named because it is located atop the mountain Whiterun was built on and is therefore closer to the clouds than any other. It is dominated by the imposing form of Dragonsreach.

26 Dragonsreach

The following leaders of Whiterun are loyal to the Imperials at the start of the Civil War.

Jarl Balgruuf the Greater

Balgruuf believes that Skyrim should remain a part of the Empire. This has become something of a confusing situation for the people of Skyrim, many of whom are decidedly anti-Empire. Balgruuf embodies the very best of what it is to be a Nord, but at the same time he supports the Empire's presence. This has actually caused some of these same anti-Empire residents of Whiterun to at least reconsider their thinking. After all, if Balgruuf the Greater supports the Empire, then maybe they are the key to Skyrim's future. Balgruuf is very close to his younger brother Hrongar.

Hrongar

Hrongar is Balgruuf's younger brother and is something of a warmonger. He believes his brother should organize Imperial forces and wipe out any Stormcloaks presence in Whiterun Hold. Hrongar divides his time among a few activities, most notably advising (and sometimes arguing with) his brother Balgruuf and practicing with his sword and axe against the town guard.

Frothar

Dagny

Nelkir

Farengar Secret-Fire (Court Wizard)

Farengar serves the Jarl because of duty, but Farengar has no interest in the Civil War and certainly has no love for the Empire. He is dedicated to the College of Winterhold and furthering the cause of magical research. So as long as he is able to maintain his laboratory and keep up his research, he really doesn't care what the Jarl believes.

Proventus Avenicci (Steward)

Proventus essentially tells Balgruuf whatever he wants to hear and is a politician through and through. In other words, Proventus is completely inept as a Steward. The only reason he's been able to achieve any manner of success and keep his position is because his daughter Adrienne is tactically brilliant and has been telling her father what to tell the Jarl.

Irileth (Housecarl)

Irileth is unusual for a Housecarl: She's female, a Dark Elf, and doesn't fit the role of muscle-bound protector. But that doesn't make her any less effective. Irileth is actually a skilled assassin, trained in Morrowind by the Morag Tong. She met Balgruuf several years prior and the two became fast friends and adventuring companions.

Commander Caius

The following residents arrive to take control of Whiterun, should this Hold fall during the Civil War.

Jarl Vignar Gray-Mane

Vignar was once a general and commander in the Legion during the Great War. He came to Whiterun to retire and be near his brother, the renowned smith Eorlund Gray-Mane. Because of his long experience as a soldier, Vignar holds a place of honor among the Companions, and the group welcomes his council. In the course of the Civil War, Vignar shifted loyalties to his home. He is angry at the Empire for surrendering to the Dominion and feels that Skyrim would be better off on its own, as in the ancient times. When the Stormcloaks control Whiterun, they call on Vignar's experience and wisdom to lead the city as its Jarl.

Brill (Steward)

Brill was once an adventurer who was injured by a Draugr axe a number of years ago. This brush with death left him shaken and broken. He took to drinking, spending much time and coin in the Bannered Mare. It was there he met Vignar, who he befriended. Vignar took Brill into his home, and he's never left.

Olfina Gray-Mane (Housecarl)

When Vignar is called upon to serve as Whiterun's Jarl, he names his niece Olfina as his Housecarl. Willful and determined, Olfina accepts the honorable duty and swears to defend her uncle's life with her own.

Sinmir

Dragonsreach is Whiterun's majestic keep. It was constructed in the ornate wooden style of the great Nord longhouses of old. Visually and politically, it is very much the focal point of the city. As is true of the keeps in other cities, Dragonsreach serves many important functions. There is an ornate bridge leading to the main double doors. Around to the side is an entrance to Dragonsreach Dungeon.

Dragonsreach (Interior)

A Door to Whiterun

1 Great Hall

The great hall is the main chamber of the keep and is where the Jarl holds court on his throne beyond the long tables and central fire pit. Check the shelves to the sides for all manner of books. There are balconies on the upper floor, accessed via the War Room, from which you can peer down.

2 Kitchens

Two large tables and an even bigger fireplace are where the Jarl's servants prepare the feasts of the long table.

3 Servant's Bedroom and Storage (Lower)

A rough-hewn, rock-walled chamber where the servant sleeps. There is a storage room behind the door.

Cell Block

Arn

Home to a proportion of the city's guard and the jail. The entrance area has the chests you need to retrieve your items, either after you serve your time or if you reach in from the sewer grate behind the chests. The main cell block has cells on either side (Adept, unless a quest-related cell) and a door at the opposite end leading to Dragonsreach. The cell to the west is of particular interest, as it comes decked out with food and a variety of luxuries not normally associated with jails. This is where the more prominent miscreants are kept, usually after a drunken binge.

A man named Arn is imprisoned in this location, but only after you undertake Thieves Guild City Influence Quest; Imitation Amnesty.

- ◇ Evidence Chest

Dungeon Catacombs

Below the cells are the Catacombs, ideally explored only after you escape from your cell, and wish to weave your way to the small hub chamber, where you can climb a ladder and stand on some barrels to reach the chests which contain your belongings. Then open the barred door [Expert] or drop down the hole to reach a ladder leading up and into [7] Guard Barracks (East), down in the Plains District.

Whiterun's renowned meadery lies just southeast of her capital. There's little of interest outside but quite a bit of drama and intrigue brewing within.

Honningbrew Meadery (Interior)

Speak with Sabjorn inside the meadery to purchase a variety of foodstuffs. You need special keys to enter the meadery's basement and upstairs office; these are obtained during Thieves Guild Quest: Dampened Spirits. The office holds most objects of value, including an informative note and Skill Book found on tables, as well as a locked chest that's further secured behind an Expert-level locked door (no key for this one). The office also contains one of seven Larceny Targets that pertain to a Thieves Guild Radiant Quest.

Honningbrew Basement

Beware of bear traps as you purge the brewery's basement of Skeevers during the "Dampened Spirits" quest. Beware: the Venomfang Skeevers can poison you. Slay him and poison the nearby Skeeever nest, then read the journal you find on Hamelyn's corpse to learn of his questionable motives. Loot a chest here as well before proceeding into the boillery.

This crumbling stronghold in Whiterun's northeast mountains has become a haven for renegade mages and necromancers.

If you're here for College of Winterhold Quest: Hitting the Books, this location changes substantially. The front door is locked, forcing you to enter through the side tower and take the longer route through the dungeons. The upper levels of the keep, previously sealed, are now accessible. And a whole host of unique events await you. This Dragon Mound is initially sealed. It opens during Main Quest: Diplomatic Immunity, once you set off for Solitude. After this point, but before you begin your journey to Sky Haven Temple, Alduin will appear here and resurrect the dragon Vuljotnaak. Alduin cannot be harmed; he resurrects his brethren and flies off. But slay Vuljotnaak and claim his soul.

HOLD 7: EASTMARCH

TOPOGRAPHICAL OVERVIEW

Historians refer to Eastmarch as one of the "old Holds." Its ancient capital, Windhelm, sits in the northeast of Skyrim, where the White River races toward the Sea of Ghosts. Windhelm remains the only sizable city in the otherwise determinedly rural Hold of Eastmarch, where the volcanic terrain limits farming and development. The entire Hold is dominated by sulfur pools where very little grows and seems sunken in compared to the higher elevations of the Rift and the towering Throat of the World. Most Nords congregate in the north, in and around the granite walls of Windhelm, where Ulfric Stormcloak plans his rebellion against the Empire.

Routes and Pathways

Travelers to this region should be satisfied with the well-maintained roads that connect Windhelm to Winterhold in the north, head across to the Pale and Whiterun to the west, and wind south into the Rift. The White and Darkwater Rivers combine in this territory, allowing you to find your bearings more easily. These rivers then combine with River Yorgim at the Windhelm bridge and flow out into Winterhold and the Sea of Ghosts, with Dunmeth Pass to the northeast. The eastern edge of this Hold (and Skyrim itself) is dominated by the Dunmeth Pass at lower elevations, which merge into the Velothi Mountains; this impenetrable mountain range stretches south into the Rift and shrouds the Orc stronghold of Narzulbur and the hidden dwarven ruins of Mzulft. To the south, the tumbledown Mistwatch and steep slopes buttressing the Rift dominate the area. More rocky terrain can be found to the southwest and west, toward the foothills of the Throat of the World. The interior of Eastmarch is a no-man's-land of bubbling sulfur pools, giant camps, crests, slopes, and mines.

Important Areas of Interest

Exterior and Dockside

The Docks, located just outside the city walls to the southeast, make up Windhelm's secondary economy. Here, merchants receive raw materials and other goods from all over the Empire, and ship out processed goods and raw materials unique to Skyrim. The Windhelm Docks are also where the East Empire Company has its only office outside of Solitude. Most of the dockworkers are poor Argonians who live on the docks in a large, ramshackle residence known as the Argonian Assemblage. They are the lowest class in all of Windhelm, and the Docks district is their domain.

① City Gates and Bridge

Windhelm's large fortified main gate serves as the primary means of entry into the city. The bridge leading to the gate from the Stables has side parapets, mostly in disrepair, but offers a good view of the ominous main walls. Head into the belly of the bridge (there's an interior barracks) to discover a Skill Book resting on a table. You can drop down to the dockside from the right edge of the bridge, by the gate.

② East Empire Company

Orthus Endario
Adelaisa Vendicci (after Side Quest: Rise in the East has started)

The East Empire Company is the well-known Imperial Shipping organization and has spread its influence across Tamriel. A few years prior, the company made its first in-roads in Skyrim by establishing an office and shipping center in Windhelm. The organization enjoyed a brisk business here, in direct competition with that of Clan Shatter-Shield's, but the office is now closed. It can be reopened as part of Side Quest: Rise in the East; if that happens, business will resume.

Lore: City Overview

Windhelm sits on the northern bank of the White River and is an imposing sight, with its massive ice-covered stone walls. Travelers to the city are greeted by the majestic frozen bridge leading to the main gate, but it is the old Palace of Ysgoramor (now known as the Palace of the Kings), towering over all other structures in the city, that truly takes the breath away. The city slopes slightly northward and has different levels of elevation, with the Palace located at the city's highest point, making it even more visible and striking. The streets are packed with snow, giving the city something of a claustrophobic feel; the sky is always white or overcast, and fierce blizzards batter the city with alarming regularity.

It is within these snow-strewn streets and icy alleys that Windhelm's inhabitants live, usually with an overriding sense of tension. There's a lot on the minds of the city's residents these days. Skyrim is now in the throes of Civil War, and Jarl Ulfric Stormcloak leads the rebellion against the Empire. The Dark Elves in the Gray Quarter have grown increasingly disillusioned. Dragons have returned to the world and threaten to destroy all of Skyrim. And as if all that weren't bad enough, a mysterious killer has been stalking the snowy streets of Windhelm at night and has already claimed three victims.

Gjalund Salt-Sage

Gjalund's surname is born from his love of the sea. He's the proud captain of the Northern Maiden, well known in Raven Rock. Being one of their only lifelines to the mainland, he commands a great deal of respect. Gjalund's passion for the sea is evidenced by his commitment to his ship, which (although small) he keeps in fine working order. Ferrying individuals and supplies to and from Windhelm has kept him occupied for a better part of the last 20 years, and he insists he'll keep doing it until he dies.

Only a single ship sails the waters between Skyrim and the port of Raven Rock on the isle of Solstheim. If you intend to visit the isle, speak to captain Gjalund aboard his ship, the Northern Maiden.

During Dragonborn Main Quest: Dragonborn, it transpires that Gjalund was befuddled for most of the trip, losing whole days of his memory after agreeing to bring the Cultists aboard. He has little desire to return to Solstheim, though. Unless you:

(500 gold) Agree to pay him double his usual rate, or

(Persuade) Tell him he owes you for bringing those killers to your doorstep, or

(Intimidate) Let him know you're not taking no for an answer.

When successful, Gjalund agrees to set sail but leaves immediately. Ready yourself for the voyage to Solstheim. However, you can also visit the Northern Maiden without the forewarning of any Cultists or knowledge of Solstheim. If Dragonborn Main Quest: Dragonborn isn't active, you must pay Gjalund 250 for the trip.

🗺️ TIP Once you arrive in Solstheim, study the world maps of Skyrim and Solstheim:

Solstheim: You should see an arrow just southwest of Raven Rock.

Skyrim: You should see an arrow just east of the Wreck of the Winter War.

Both arrows allow Fast-Travel to and from Skyrim. For free. This is important, as you don't need to request safe passage (for 250 gold each time) from Gjalund every time you want to head between the two land masses!

Just inside the main gate are a number of stone steps and thoroughfares around the Candlehearth Hall. It is a place of warmth, comfort, and security, where all the troubles of the outside world are drowned away by cold mead. The inn gets its name from its giant fireplace, with a fire that is constantly attended. On the hearth above the great fire sits a lone candle that was lit 150 years earlier, when the inn was a smaller private residence, to mark the death of the great warrior Vundheim; since that day, the candle has never gone out.

3 Calixto's House of Curiosities

Calixto Corrium

Calixto's House of Curiosities is like no other building in Skyrim. It is a private residence but has been set up as a collection of oddities, all of which have been gathered by the owner, Calixto Corrium, over a period of nearly 20 years. The items range from ingredients to the unique to the questionable (such as Ysgramor's Spoon). Take the tour for two gold pieces. Calixto has a key that opens his chest on the upper cubbyhole.

5 Aretino Residence

Aventus Aretino

The Aretino Residence is where Aurelia Aretino lived with her young son Aventus, until her brutal murder in a Windhelm back alley a couple of weeks prior. Now, the home is locked up, but rumors around town (including talk from Idesa Sadri and Grimvar Cruel-Sea under the eaves of the house) are that young Aventus is inside—having escaped from the Honorhall Orphanage and returned home—and has gone mad with grief. That's the only reasoning that could explain the strange noises coming from the house at odd hours. Consult the Dark Brotherhood Quest: Innocence Lost for more information. Inside the house, find a Skill Book hidden behind a shelf.

8 The White Phial

Nurelion Quintus Navale

The White Phial is Windhelm's apothecary and sells all manner of potions and alchemical reagents. It was named after an item of legend, the White Phial, a potion bottle made of magically infused snow, which was said to replenish any liquid placed into it, one day after that liquid was consumed or emptied. The truth is, the White Phial is quite real and is coveted greatly by the establishment's owner and resident alchemist, Nurelion, who has recently learned of its location. 9 Hall of the Dead

Helgird

The Windhelm Hall of the Dead is a large stone structure that serves as both mausoleum and Shrine to Arkay. The first chamber anyone enters is the shrine, and people do come to worship freely. But the rest of the building, and the lower catacombs, hold generations of Nord dead. The entire facility is overseen by Helgird, a Priestess of Arkay. Outside is a graveyard separated by the main thoroughfare; this is the scene of a gruesome murder that begins Side Quest: Blood on the Ice.

10 Temple of Talos

Lortheim
Jora Wing-Wish

The Temple of Talos is immense and unique, and due to the current Civil War, it is the only full-fledged Temple of Talos in all of Skyrim. Here in Windhelm, a city held by the Stormcloaks, the people are free to worship Talos freely. You can get a Blessing at the altar, and the priests sleep behind in the alcove, which has a number of books you might wish to read.

- ◆ Shrine to Talos [11/17]

Gray Quarter

The Gray Quarter was so named because of the sheer number of Dark Elves who reside here. It was once named the "Snow Quarter," but that was a long time ago. But to the elves, the name "Gray Quarter" is one of derision, cruelty, and discrimination. They believe the Nord people of Windhelm have always seen them as outsiders and hated them because of it.

11 Belyn Hlaalu's House

Ambarys, the proprietor, has no great love of the Nords (especially given the way they treat his fellow Dark Elves) and thus has allowed a back room to become a small headquarters for the Imperial faction in Skyrim. Torbjorn Shatter-Shield
Tova Shatter-Shield
Nilsine Shatter-Shield

Clan Shatter-Shield has lived in Windhelm for generations. They are from "old money," garnered from the city's shipping industry, and have not needed to do any kind of work for as long as anyone in the city can remember (much to the jealousy and general derision of many citizens). They still control much of the shipping but leave the particulars up to their supervisor Suvaris Atheron and the workers at the Argonian Assemblage. Lately, the Shatter-Shields have become an object of pity, as one of the clan's members, Friga, twin sister of Nilsine, was recently murdered by the unknown killer stalking Windhelm's streets.

19 Palace of the Kings

The following people of Windhelm are the leaders of the Stormcloaks at the start of the Civil War:

Ulfric Stormcloak (Jarl)

Ulfric Stormcloak is the leader of the Stormcloaks, who are attempting to make Skyrim independent of the Empire. He fought in the Imperial Legions during the Great War against the Aldmeri Dominion, 20 years ago, distinguishing himself in the battle at the Imperial City, which ended the war in the White-Gold Concordat. In 176, he was one of the key figures in the Markarth Incident. Soon after, he founded the Stormcloaks (initially as an underground group centered around the now-proscribed worship of Talos). He became Jarl of Windhelm after the death of his father Hoag in 183.

In 201, he killed the High King of Skyrim in the throne room of the Blue Palace in Solitude, declaring him a lackey of the Empire and no true Nord (the slaying was based on the High King's support for the Empire's policy of suppression of Talos worship). A surprisingly swift and effective response by the Empire (possibly secretly aided by Thalmor informants) led to his arrest along with those of his associates. After escaping death in Helgen, he returned to his throne. Fiery and impetuous, he is a born leader but lacks the cool head of a military strategist. He passionately believes in his cause, though; he is not an opportunist—although the chance to become King of Skyrim certainly does appeal to his substantial ego.

Galmar Stone-Fist (Housecarl)

Galmar is old but still hale, a very experienced Nord warrior and Ulfric's right-hand man. He served Ulfric's father and is more concerned with winning the war than the politics behind it. He is one of Ulfric's most trusted allies and acts as the main field commander for the Civil War.

Jorleif (Steward)

Jorleif is an excellent advisor, especially in this time of war. Ulfric greatly values Jorleif's council and especially appreciates the man's honesty and realistic assessments of the ongoing conflict.

Captain Lonely-Gale

One of Skyrim's most respected citizens, Captain Lonely-Gale made his fortune as a trading ship captain working the rivers and coastlines of Skyrim. Those adventurous days are behind him now, but his authoritative, commanding nature remains and the people of Windhelm have a great respect for his fair and evenhanded views of the war. It is these qualities that cause Brunwulf Free-Winter to choose him as a Steward when he takes over as Jarl following a successful invasion of Windhelm by the Imperial forces during the Civil War.

Wuunferth the Unliving (Court Wizard)

An ancient and frail Court Wizard, Wuunferth is also an immensely powerful magic user and is obsessed with becoming even more powerful. The people of Windhelm are convinced the man has sold his soul to some Daedra or is only part human, and that's how he earned the title "the Unliving." For his part, Ulfric doesn't necessarily like Wuunferth and distrusts his sorcery, but he respects the great power the man holds and his possible use in the Civil War.

- Unique Item: Necromancer Amulet [62/112]

Sifnar Ironkettle

Silda the Unseen

- Trainer (Pickpocket: Expert): Silda the Unseen [1/3]

The following residents of Windhelm take control of Windhelm once this Hold falls during the Civil War.

Jarl Brunwulf Free-Winter

Brunwulf's reputation and natural leadership would be enough to make him the Empire's choice to replace Ulfric as Jarl of the city, but the fact that its people both love and respect him cements the choice. Brunwulf has no patience for those who exhibit prejudice, and this fits well with the Empire's cosmopolitan views. Notably, Brunwulf will forgo the naming of a Housecarl because he believes that he can defend himself capably enough, and he does not want anyone else to risk their life on his behalf.

Captain Lonely-Gale (Steward)

When Brunwulf ascends to the position of Jarl, he calls upon Captain Lonely-Gale to join him as Steward. In his days as a ship's master, the good captain earned his success by running a tight ship and managing his resources wisely. Brunwulf is counting on those same qualities as he works to heal his city and his Hold from the scars of war.

Palace of the Kings: Ground Floor

The Palace of the Kings is an ancient stone fortress that now serves as the city's main keep. These days, the palace serves as the headquarters of the Stormcloaks, under the leadership of Jarl Ulfric Stormcloak, who sits upon the ancient Throne of Ysgramor. And so the Palace of the Kings is the center of the pro-Nord war effort in the Civil War.

This imposing stone fortress stands at the southern edge of Eastmarch, not far from the mountains along the Reach's north edge. A group of bandits have taken control of the fort and must be dealt with.

Exterior

Dispatch the handful of bandits who defend the fort's exterior, then pull a lever to lower the drawbridge and advance into the first of three interior towers.

North Tower

Speak with a man named Christer inside the tower to gain a new Side Quest and an important key that unlocks the nearby door. Make your way upstairs, then climb a ladder and use the key again to go outside. (Don't bother opening the upstairs holding cell—there's nothing of interest in the small room.)

East Tower

You encounter the bandit's leader in this final tower, but she isn't what you'd expect. It turns out to be Fjola, Christer's missing wife. Fjola won't come with you, so you must either kill her on the spot or return to Christer and give him the bad news. Fjola is a powerful enemy, but she carries many valuables, so killing her is worth the effort. Agree to help her first, and you can slay Fjola and complete the quest with Christer by handing him her wedding band. Either way, search for a Skill Book that rests atop a dresser in this tower.

6 Fatal Floor Chamber

Beware: the entire center of this room rises if you step on it, delivering you up to deadly spikes that line the ceiling. Avoid the chamber's center as you make your way through here.

- ◇ Danger! Rising Floor Trap

7 Nordic Overlook Chamber Revisited

Cross elevated walkways to reach this location, where some valuable potions sit on a small table. Another possessed Draugr is busy digging near a large scaffold that over the doorway onward.

You may have noticed this solution in the common book Fjori and Holgeir! This opens the south gate; avoid the pressure plate when crossing the footbridge or you'll be scorched. 9 Swinging Blades Passage

Avoid the many pressure plates in this first passage—stepping on any of them causes a host of swinging blades to activate in the adjacent hall. 10 Key Chamber

This Draugr-filled chamber also sports several traps. Avoid the central pressure plates or you'll be burned by flames. Beware when taking the item off the nearby pedestal as well—removing it causes arrows to fire from the wall directly behind you. (Stand to one side to avoid damage.) Taking the key from the far pedestal causes a host of Draugr to awaken, but the key is a great help in opening the upper gates, whose Master-level locks aren't easily picked. When you loop back around to the main chamber, sprint straight across the elevated walkway to avoid damage from traps.

A Skill Book rests atop another, trap-free pedestal here.

12 Lamp-Lit Hall

Lu'ah Al-Skaven awaits you here. You're just in time to disrupt her nefarious ritual. However, Lu'ah manages to raise two powerful Draugr. Try knocking down the cavern's many hanging lamps to inflict extra damage upon these dangerous foes. Kill Lu'ah to complete your Side Quest. This also frees the souls of Fjori and Holgeir, who leave a unique blade behind in thanks. Use the key you find on Lu'ah's corpse to open the upstairs door and sack one last chest on your way back to the surface.

HOLD 8: FALKREATH HOLD

TOPOGRAPHICAL OVERVIEW

The Hold along Skyrim's southern border with Cyrodiil is known as Falkreath, and its capital shares the same name. The Hold's second largest town, Helgen, was the site of a recent dragon attack and prisoner escape. Before its destruction, Helgen was "the Gateway to Skyrim," a well-traveled town at an important crossroads in the foothills of the Jerall Mountains. As you move north, the rugged, mountainous south gradually gives way to pine forest lowlands. Though initially tranquil to the untrained eye, the woods are a wilderness fraught with the prospect of enemies (wild animals or worse) lurking behind every tree. Still, the people of Falkreath are reasonably prosperous farmers and loggers, thanks to the abundant supply of fresh water from Lake Ilinalta—the largest body of water in Skyrim.

Routes and Pathways

Falkreath is among the most-traveled Holds in terms of major roads and minor pathways. The lake is an excellent anchoring point, allowing you to get your bearings from almost any angle. North of the lake are the sharp and protruding Brittleskin Hills—snowy peaks dominated by Bleak Falls Barrow that overlook the origin of the White River—and the town of Riverwood just across the border in Whiterun Hold. Head east, and you brave the blizzards of the Jerall Mountains, bandit attacks in the high mountain passes, and the windswept caverns of Haemar's Shame. To the south, the Jerall Mountains dominate, their icy crags making many locations difficult to reach and almost impossible to escape from without blade or spell. Still, resolute hunters like Angi can still be found in this vast wilderness, determined to live life on their own terms. Head west, and the pine forests give way to more rocky scree and sharper crags, where you can hear the howls of anger of the Forsworn from the Reach and find old or forgotten cuts into the earth, including the fabled Twilight Sepulcher.

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

Lore: City Overview

The capital of Falkreath is infamous for its bloody history and sprawling graveyard. Its name is not Nordic in origin, but Elvish, though even they no longer remember its meaning. The town, and its graveyard, blossomed over the ages from a monument commemorating the Battle of Sungard. A statue once stood commemorating the spot where Kjoric the White fell in battle defending Falkreath from the First Empire, and legend has it that his son, Hoag Merkiller, fell in exactly the same spot when he retook Falkreath years later. The residents of Falkreath take a certain pride in this history and their cemetery, though some darkly refer to Falkreath as "Where heroes come to die."

In recent years, the Jarl's family has become bitterly divided between Siddgeir, the avaricious Imperial Jarl, and his uncle, the former Jarl Dengeir, who was forced from his position due to his growing Stormcloak sympathies. The people of Falkreath work hard just to keep the town functioning properly despite the political struggles. Isolated and isolationist, the capital of Falkreath is unwelcoming to visitors, with stern facades and its haunting graveyard. Some say wisps flit across the graveyard at night, and lonely buildings feel surrounded by the graveyard and hidden foes on the treeline's edge, while gloomy interiors hold the court of a Jarl with a family divided.

Important Areas of Interest

1 Main Thoroughfare

Jarl Siddgeir's moneymaking schemes are paying dividends, as the settlement of Falkreath is well guarded, featuring fortified gates at opposite ends of town. The main thoroughfare is mostly paved, and there's always a guard presence. There's room for a small farm and lumber mill to support the local economy.

2 Jarl's Longhouse

The following leaders of Falkreath are loyal to the Imperials at the start of the Civil War.

Jarl Siddgeir

The nephew of Dengeir and now the Jarl of Falkreath, Siddgeir has always had money and power, although he's done little to deserve either. He acts as Jarl now that his uncle has given up the position. Siddgeir mostly focuses on ways to acquire more money and protect his newfound power. His main concern is busybodies like Valga Vinicia, Tekla, and Narri, who he fears might ruin his family's name. However, he has already amassed his own supporters: Solaf and Bolund, a pair of brothers who complete occasional dirty deeds on his behalf.

Nenya (Steward)

Nenya is an overworked High Elf who attempts to maintain order and is the brains behind the throne. She isn't conniving or plotting, just attempting to maintain order while in the service of an incapable leader.

Helvard (Housecarl)

A loyal bodyguard and skilled military tactician, Helvard serves as a bodyguard for the Jarl. While he has great respect for the position of Jarl, Helvard agrees with Nenya that neither Dengeir of Stuhn nor Siddgeir are suited for the important decisions of the town, and he works with her to guide the Jarl's policies to what is best for the city.

Legate Skulnar

The following residents of Falkreath control the capital, once this Hold has fallen during the Civil War.

Jarl Dengeir of Stuhn

Once the Jarl of Falkreath, now "voluntarily" lowered to the position of Thane, Dengeir of Stuhn was a great warrior and virtuous hero of Falkreath in his youth. However, he has outlived his glory and is slowly descending into a creeping paranoia. He sees enemies hidden everywhere and rarely goes out in public. Shortly before Imperial pressure forced him from his position as Jarl, Dengeir very nearly exiled all Imperials from Falkreath, a proclamation prevented only by Nenya's careful council. Dengeir is a strong supporter of the Stormcloaks, but he knows to stay quiet about his support.

Tekla (Steward)

As further evidence of his growing dementia, Dengeir names his house servant Tekla as his Steward when the Stormcloaks restore him to the position of Jarl. He does this not because he believes that she is qualified to hold the position (she almost certainly isn't) but because she is the only person left who he trusts.

Jarl Siddgeir runs Falkreath Hold from this impressive Longhouse. His main reason for supporting the Empire is because it makes life more profitable for him, so he continues to find ways to line his own pockets with their help. As a result, much of the day-to-day workings of the Hold are still handled by his overworked Steward, Nenya, and she works with Helvard to deal with matters of military defense, such as bolstering the city from Civil War attacks. He has welcomed Legate Skulnar into his hearth and home, and turned the wine storage room into a place where the Imperials can plot war. The Jarl's bedroom has two display cases ([Adept] and [Expert]), the latter of which has a Skill Book to read. There's another on a table in the War Room, and an Arcane Enchanter on one of the upstairs balconies.

3 Falkreath Barracks

Sinding

The three floors of Falkreath's Barracks are where the town's guard sleep, drink, and return to drink some more. Find a Skill Book tucked between some wooden crates near the entry door. The bedrooms are upstairs, and most of the meals (and brawling) occurs on the ground floor. Below is a cellar, or Falkreath Jail, where mainly petty thieves or drunkards are placed. However, one specially reinforced cell holds the "monster" Sinding, who is a threat to all the townsfolk after he murdered the child of Mathies and Indara.

6 Gray Pine Goods

Solaf

Bolund

Solaf runs this general store that is owned by Siddgeir—which has a surprising array of goods for such an isolated town—while his brother voices disapproval of the Imperials around Falkreath. The only obstacles to the brothers becoming the most powerful family in town are Valga Vinicia and her “daughters,” who Bolund sees as busybodies and gossips who have something against him. Solaf and Bolund’s sister Grelka left them for Riften a while ago, sick of their attitudes. Solaf and Bolund don’t particularly miss her.

7 Dead Man’s Drink

Valga Vinicia Narri Delacourt

A cozy tavern with a roaring fire and fine food, the Dead Man’s Drink stands in stark contrast to the Jarl’s court and is the far more inviting world for visitors. The owner, Valga Vinicia, is always glad to listen to a traveler’s tales, and the server, Narri, collects gossip from around the town, particularly from her sister, Tekla, who works as a maid for Dengeir. Valga Vinicia has slowly become aware of the Dengeir’s paranoia and has long known of Siddgeir’s corruption, and she grows concerned for the town. A Skill Book is kept behind the counter.

Indara Caerellia

Indara and her husband, Mathies, reside peacefully at the Corpselight farm, so named because a past resident helped develop the idea of “cultivating” the witchlights and wisps that illuminate the edges of the town graveyard. Currently, the pair are managing a bumper crop of potatoes, cabbages, and gourds.

Tekla

Once the Jarl of Falkreath, now “voluntarily” lowered to the position of Thane, Dengeir of Stuhn was a great warrior and virtuous hero of Falkreath in his youth. However, he has outlived his glory and is slowly descending into a creeping paranoia. Dengeir of Stuhn is loathe to meet guests and sees threats and conspiracies everywhere. His rantings terrorize his servant, Tekla. Tekla will raise the alarm if you decide to break into this dwelling, if she’s inside this location.

10 Deadwood Lumber Mill

Hardly a hive of activity, the mill isn’t utilized to capacity thanks to the lackadaisical attitudes of its owner, Jarl Siddgeir, and its abrasive foreman, Bolund.

11 Hall of the Dead

Runil

Kust

Originally meant for the cemetery’s groundskeeper, this now consists of a dwelling for Runil and Kust and a makeshift shrine for Arkay, the god of birth and death. Unlike the larger Hold capitals, there is neither the room nor the coin to build a mausoleum to the fallen, who are buried outside in the cemetery instead. Inside, a Skill Book is hidden under the bed near the chest.

12 Cemetery

The graveyard encroaches into the town and is large compared to the population. Most of the graves have worn away, including a memorial statue commemorating Hoag Merkiller and Kjoric the White, who died defending Falkreath from outsiders. By tradition, the graveyard at Falkreath is the central graveyard for all residents of Falkreath Hold, and the many battles for control over the Hold have provided it with no shortage of graves. Because the town has a resident priest of Arkay, the grave sites are better maintained than in smaller cemeteries, and in many cases, the tombstones have long outlasted the bodies of those they were meant to commemorate.

Bones and bloodstains mark the entrance to this small cave, and a powerful mage stands watch outside. Nearly every square inch of this treacherous cave's interior is filled with traps and dangers—sneak and avoid rushing forward, or you'll suffer dearly. Protection against fire can be invaluable here.

A Exit to Skyrim

1 Entry Passages

Avoid a pressure plate that releases a lethal rockfall as you sneak toward an unwary mage who's tending a fire inside the cave. Beware of another dangerous pressure plate trap in the small cavern that follows, which is guarded by a lowly skeleton. Hug the right wall to dodge hanging rattles, then ignite the next tunnel's oily floor to scorch more foes.

- ❖ Danger! Oil Lamp Traps, Bone Alarm Trap, Oil Pool Traps, Rockfall Trap (pressure plate), Mammoth Skull Trap (pressure plate)

2 Stair Chamber

Knock down a hanging lamp to make a mage flee from his advantageous perch in the oily passage that leads to this small area. Beware of a lethal pressure plate trap at the passage's end, and find a chest in a nook near the wooden stairs. Another chest is tucked away atop the stairs as well.

3 Lab

Watch your step before reaching the bottom of these stairs, as there is a magic trap waiting in a nook to the side. Ignite the oily floor here to scorch more mages, and crouch before opening the south wooden door; there's a chest in the closet beyond, but arrows will puncture you from behind if you're standing tall. (Alternatively, you can disable the trap's trigger on the door.) Mix some potions at the Alchemy Lab here, then loot a large, locked chest that lies in the west rubble—if you're able to pick its tricky lock.

4 Word Wall Chamber

Beware the large amount of oil on the floor here—the far mages and Fire Atronach will quickly ignite it if they detect you. Sneak past this hazard, or sprint past it before your enemies can react. Approach the Word Wall to learn a new Word of Power, then raid the nearby chest and collect a Skill Book off the nearby pedestal. Exploit an Arcane Enchanter if you like, then pull a wall chain to access another Alchemy Lab. The Unusual Gem found here pertains to a Thieves Guild Radiant Quest. Pull a second wall chain to open the passage that leads back to the cave's entry tunnel.

In the northeast reaches of Falkreath, a coven of nefarious witches have occupied a sizeable cave. You visit this site during two different quests, for very different reasons. At the entrance, prepare to fight a mage (and mages inhabit this cave complex if you aren't specifically hunting for Hagravens as part of the Companions Quests).

A Door to Skyrim

1 Main Cavern

Discover a locked chest in the dark nook of the cave's first passage from the entrance. Then expect a vicious animal and Hag (or Mage) fight in this main cavern. When the coast is clear, look around the room for four separate tunnels (in addition to the entrance tunnel). Finding them is half the fun; don't confuse them during your exploration!

◇ Chest [Novice]

2 Spiked Pole Lair

Accessed via the ground tunnel to the north of the Main Cavern. This leads to a small cave with a row of spiked poles, a few ingredients, and a baying enemy to slay.

3 Spider Lair

Accessed via the upper tunnel to the north of the Main Cavern. This opens to a cave with a ferocious animal that sometimes moves into the Main Cavern. Check the skill book on the table with the Arcane Enchanter.

4 Fetid Pond Lair

1 Knifepoint Mine Entry

If you're not on the quest, then the bandits' formidable leader lurks just inside the mine, and you can't explore beyond the first room. See if you can ignite the oil beneath the chief's feet with a fire-based attack. Opening the Expert-level holding cell puts you close to a thick Iron Ore vein, but the same ore can be more easily mined from the vein that's just outside the cell.

During "Boethiah's Calling," the mines are significantly larger—the bandits have tunneled much farther into the rock. A lowly bandit guard will be stationed here instead of a powerful leader.

Pick a Novice-level gate to enter this wide cavern from the west, or loop around and take the north passage to get here. If you choose the north passage, you can use a narrow space beneath the scaffolding to your left to sneak across the open chamber easier. Sneak around and slay the lone bandit worker, then mine plenty of ore from the surrounding veins and exploit the crafting stations to improve your gear. You can proceed up the ramp and go through the front door, or use the smaller cave hallway on the south end of this chamber to loop around to the back of the shack. Approaching from the rear will allow you to jump on a pile of crates and enter the shack through a hole in the roof, dropping directly into shadow and giving you an easy chance to backstab the Champion of Boethiah. Slay the Champion of Boethiah by whatever method you prefer, then don his Ebony Mail to complete your quest. Raid the nearby large chest before backtracking outside.

5 Fourth Trial: Path to Salvation

Don't let this passage's swinging blades stupefy you into stepping on the pressure plate that lies before them. If you can, open the Master-level iron door to the south to sneak through [6] and bypass the blades altogether. Otherwise, you must time it right and sprint straight through—you'll trigger another pressure plate midway through, so move to the left the moment you clear the passage to avoid being shot by arrows. Beware of another as you exit the blade passage, and stand back before opening the iron door ahead to avoid being struck by a battering ram (or simply disable its trap hinge). Proceed through the door that follows to reach the inner sanctum.

- ◇ Danger! Battering Ram Trap (door), Swinging Blade Trap (proximity), Spear Trap (pressure plate), Dart Trap (pressure plates)

6 Great Hall

Pick a locked door to enter this large chamber and avoid the swinging blade passage altogether. A few items of interest are found in the chamber's lower central area, including a pair of Skill Books. Sneak through here to avoid alerting the two roaming Nightingale Sentries.

Final Trial: Hesitate Not

Sprint down a long, empty corridor to reach this deep pit. Drop down—you'll suffer a bit of damage—then loot a skeleton to discover an informative note. You seem trapped but are soon whisked away to an alternate version of the pit chamber by the magic of the Skeleton Key that you possess. Insert the key into the central lock on the floor to summon Nocturnal. Speak with Karliah after Nocturnal departs, then watch her reunion with Gallus. Afterward, decide which portal to enter—each grants you a different (and substantial) bonus to a certain thieving discipline.

The entrance to this cave lies just off the east-west road that runs across the southern Tundra. Kill the predators that lurk just inside, then hop onto the low ledge on the south side of the first clearing to discover a locked chest. Dive into a pond near the waterfall to discover another chest at the bottom.

You must next take one of two paths: for the purposes of this walkthrough, proceed along the trail closest to the pond, dispatching another predator and a Spriggan who emerges from a tree as you pass. Scale the stone steps that follow to locate a quiet shrine, where a large chest is found. Pray at the Shrine of Talos for a blessing. Then inspect the pedestal at the base of a statue for a note and a unique Blades Sword.

Descend the following stairs, slaughtering more animals and Spriggans as you proceed along the path. When you reach the clearing with the dead deer, look up to spot a rocky promontory. Scale the rocks here if you can (you may find it easier to backtrack and climb up the central ridgeline first) to claim a chest in a small nook behind the promontory.

Then continue down the path, and you'll find that you have come full circle, returning to the waterfall pond with the cave fully explored.

Sprint past the trap afterward, then quickly pull the wall chain on the opposite side to deactivate it—this lets you safely retreat as the undead begin to swarm.

Next, inspect the Golden Claw that you found on poor Arvel, and notice the three glyphs that run down its palm. ◊ [8.K] Alchemist's Camp: Evergreen Woods

On the higher ground above Evergreen Grove near a small waterfall is a deserted Alchemist's Camp. Check the Skill Book and read the journal; it gives clues to the whereabouts of the Alchemist. Follow the stream down to a pool where you'll find his corpse, a second Skill Book, and two Spriggans.

◊ [8.O] The Silvermoon: Lake Ilinalta

A sunken trading vessel named Silvermoon has been resting at the bottom of Lake Ilinalta for as long as the inhabitants of Riverwood can remember. Dive down where the mast is jutting out of the water. Among the clams and Nordic barnacle clusters is a chest that's still intact.

At the fork in the main road, close to the shore of Lake Ilinalta, is a pauper's burial stone with six graves surrounded by Nightshade plants. Two skeletons are guarding these unknown graves.

◊ [8.Q] Fisherman's Island: Lake Ilinalta

Directly south of South Brittlechin Pass on the opposite (south) side of the lake is a small island with a fisherman's camp. Expect a boat, a tent, and some drying fish, as well as the fisherman, usually resting near the indigenous flowers.

- ◊ Knapsack

[8.R] Sunken Barrow: Lake Ilinalta

Southeast of South Brittleskin Pass on the lake's northern shore are three moss-covered standing stones that just break the lake's surface. Dive down, and you'll discover that they surround a submerged barrow with a chest at the bottom.

- ◇ Chest

[8.S] The Indigestible Emerald

Southeast of Anise's Cabin, on a narrow grassy alcove among the rocky banks of White River, close to a single pine tree, lie the skeletal remains of an elk. It died with an extremely valuable Emerald, which can be picked from behind its rib cage.

[8.T] Riverwood Folly

◊ [8.AA] Bandit Bridge: Pinewatch

A little farther southwest along the main road from Pinewatch, two bandits stand atop a rickety wooden bridge, attacking you as you approach. ◊ [8.AG] Khajiit Caravan Massacre

Five Khajiit caravaneers have been murdered on the steep snowy road just south of Orphan Rock. As you approach the fallen tree blocking the path, three or four bandits attack; beware of the bowmen! Massacre them, then gather any loose gear you wish (check the lead wagon). Note that if the Falkreath Stormcloak Camp [8.36] is present, the Stormcloaks have cleared the bandits from the road.

- ◊ Skill Book [Speech]: The Buying Game
- ◊ Chest
- ◊ Loose gear

◊ [8.AH] Wild Animal Den: Orphan's Tear

Not far from the site of the Falkreath Stormcloak Camp [8.36] is an overhang where two snarling woodland predators (usually wolves) make their den. Interior

A Exit to Skyrim

This is the entrance and exit to this area.

1 Spriggan Rockery

A narrow and plant-filled entrance greets you. If the quest for this area, Unseen Visions, isn't active, expect some sizable Spriggans to attempt to halt your progress. Cross the fallen tree trunk to head deeper toward the glade.

2 Glade Henge and Moth Priest Pedestal

There is a winding pathway throughout this glade to follow. Fluttering throughout are Ancestor Moths (which are harmless and not attracted to you unless the quest is active). Dotted about are Canticle Trees (with pink blossom) and special bark to remove if you have the Draw Knife (available from the pedestal only during the quest). The henges and pedestal serve an important role in the quest, as you read the Elder Scrolls here. Beware of your rivals; on your way out (during the quest only), there's a contingent of foes to face.

Perched between the Shriekwind Hills is this bright and sunny woodland glade. With ample clay and stone deposits, a good amount of iron ore to mine, and a bounty of woodland animals to kill and skin, this place is a huntsman's paradise! Overlooking Lake Ilinalta, and only a short romp from both Falkreath and Riverwood, this is a prime spot to make yourself at home. Note this picture is but an example of the type of property you could build here. This is the only buildable dwelling with an apiary.

HOLD 9: THE RIFT

TOPOGRAPHICAL OVERVIEW

Nestled in the Autumnal Forest, high above the volcanic Tundra known as Eastmarch and bordering Cyrodill to the south and Morrowind to the east, is the prosperous and magical Hold known as the Rift. This is one of the four "old Holds" mentioned in history, and the majority of the Rift's population live and work around the lake port of Riften. The large forest of deciduous birch trees, interspersed with pine and smoother rocks (the result of a gigantic prehistoric glacial movement northward) makes the Rift habitable year-round; indeed, many Nords make their living on and around Lake Honrich. Two small towns lie within the Hold's borders: Shor's Stone, which is a small mining village north of Riften, and Ivarstead, which lies to the west, at the base of the towering Throat of the World.

Routes and Pathways

The Great Riffen Road descends from the rugged mountain border with Falkreath to the west and winds east along the southern banks of the Treva River and Lake Honrich to Riften itself. Spurs from this road stretch north, connecting Riften to Ivarstead and Shor's Stone and beyond, descending the nearly sheer cliffs that form the border between the Rift and Eastmarch. To the east are the gates to Cyrodill, which are currently sealed. Along the eastern edge of the Hold lie the Velothi Mountains, with a number of caves and secret retreats. The peak towering above Riften to the southeast is home to Forelhost, an ancient and vast Nordic temple. To the west are the steep and treacherous mountains that connect the Rift to Falkreath, and the town of Ivarstead where pilgrims begin their journey up the 7,000 steps that lead to High Hrothgar, high on the steep slopes of the gigantic Throat of the World. Delve into the Autumnal Forest of the Rift, and you'll find water mills, farms, and other more unseizable places.

Lore: City Overview

Riften is situated in the southeastern corner of the Rift, at the eastern end of Lake Honrich, with a good portion of the city actually spilling over the water atop large wooden piers. The entire city is bisected by a large canal that used to serve as access for small cargo boats but has lately fallen into disrepair and decay thanks to the lack of trade during the Civil War. But don't think that Riften isn't a bustling center of commerce; the Black-Briar Meadery has almost a monopoly on the sale and distribution of a Nord's favorite pastime: drinking.

However, the city of Riften is a paradox. The city is located in the beautiful Autumnal Forest region of Skyrim, and that beauty has encroached upon the city, in the form of wondrous foliage and generally pleasant weather. But most of the structures in Riften are wooden, and the city has a sort of old, run-down feel, which often takes visitors by surprise. Not that this bothers the people who live there, who see Riften for what it truly is—a bustling, energetic city with a strong economy fueled by hard-working fishermen and mead makers. The residents also understand that the city is, for all intents and purposes, owned and operated by the Maven Black-Briar, and in order to survive and thrive, everyone needs to adhere to her rules.

Important Areas of Interest

Dryside

of Riften's shops and the marketplace are located on the western side. The southern portion of the city is dominated by Mistveil Keep and the jail.

The eastern edge of the city (which isn't built over the waters of Lake Honrich) is called Dryside. The bulk of the town is located on Dryside and is split by Riften's canal. Most of the more affluent homes are located on the eastern side of the canal, while most

A North Gate

The main gate of Riften, located along the northern wall, sees the most traffic of the city's three entrances. Foil the Riften guard's feeble attempts at shaking you down for money. Then speak with Maul, a gruff man waiting just inside the gates.

TIP Talk to Maul. Afterward, the gates in this area are unlocked, once you enter an interior and return outside.

1 Bolli's House

Bolli Trout-Purse Nivenor

This three-floor structure is one of the more impressive houses in Riften, which speaks to Bolli's station. The Note you'll find on the bedside cabinet reveals Bolli's marriage isn't as successful.

2 Aerin's House

Aerin's home is small but tall, featuring three floors.

3 Snow-Shod Manor

Vulwulf Snow-Shod
Nura Snow-Shod
Asgeir Snow-Shod

This three-floor wooden structure is the house of Clan Snow-Shod, a wealthy and influential family of Nord that owns the Snow-Shod Farm outside Riften. But even though the Clan has direct ties to the city's economy, it's their interest and involvement in the Civil War that really has people talking....

4 Riftweald Manor (Locked: Special)

This property is owned by the current Guild Master of the Thieves Guild and is a fine structure. Mercer has cleverly integrated an isolated section of the Ratway into the sublevels of his home, which contains his private valued possessions. This hideaway includes a minivault, a study, and escape routes. Mercer Frey has paid several bandits to act as guards here and has given them the order to kill intruders.

Outside, the front and back doors are barred from the inside, and the back grounds are locked by three gates, two requiring a key and the other locked (Expert). You usually enter here during Thieves Guild Quest: The Pursuit and must shoot a mechanism to release a wooden ramp leading to an upper entrance (Expert). This cannot be done at any other time; exploration inside occurs only during or after this quest.

Riftweald Manor (Interior)

Upper Floor: A storage room leads to a landing, a smaller storage closet, and Mercer's bedroom. The door's bar in the landing can't be budged.

Ground Floor: A large living and dining room dominates this area, along with an adjacent foyer. The doors' bars here can't be removed either. The foyer table has a note mentioning the mechanism construction that has recently taken place outside.

It is next to the front door (barred and sealed) that you find a suspicious cabinet leading to Mercer Frey's secret chambers.

Cellar: The cellar, accessed from the dining room, is a small area filled with foodstuffs.

- ◆ Note: To the Owner ◆ Potions
- ◆ Chest

Secret Cellar: Accessed via the false back panel of the suspicious cabinet on the ground floor (which can be closed using the pull bar on the other side). Watch for numerous traps as you navigate the sewer passages; there's a spear trap in front of you, triggered by a pressure plate. The next room has fire traps blasting up from the floor.

Puzzle Solution: Look at the floor and the nozzle holes where the fire blasts up from. These are divided into tiles. Each tile has a diamond shape; the fire traps that are activated are darker than those that are empty; simply step on the lighter-colored diamonds to avoid all fire damage.

There's a dart trap in the water-logged corridor (pressure plate) leading to a chest. At the corridor with the swinging blade and battering ram traps, dash between the blades and step left into the alcove. Wait for the battering ram to swing, then sprint to the left of the low chandelier, dodging the remaining blades. At the door, look down and unlock the trap trigger (Expert) or face darts when you open the door.

- ◆ Danger! Battering Ram Trap, Dart Trap, Fire Trap, Spear Trap, Swinging Blade Trap
- ◆ Chest

Mercer's Secret Study: There is a wealth of loot here, including an excellent weapon in a display case (Expert). The note from "R" is likely to be from Legate Rikke in Solitude. The exit tunnel leads to the Ratway Vaults, which connects back to the Warrens and the Ragged Flagon. Note the Shadowmark before you drop down into the Vaults.

5 Temple of Mara

Maramal Dinya Balu

The Temple of Mara offers services to the people of Riften and is devoted to the worship of Mara, one of the Nine Divines and the recognized goddess of love. It is here that weddings are held (Side Quest: The Bonds of Matrimony). You can get a Blessing at the altar or at two smaller shrines on either side of the main chamber. The first Note is from Anuriel warning of disturbances in the Hall of the Dead. The second Note is from Talen-Jei, regarding his forthcoming wedding. The cellar has some food and drink, and an entrance to the Hall of the Dead.

6 Hall of the Dead

Alessandra

The Riften Hall of the Dead has two levels, underneath the Temple of Mara. The ground floor serves as a Shrine of Arkay; the bottom, underground level is actually a series of catacombs that contain some of Riften's most important dead. Connected to the mausoleum is a graveyard, containing even more of the city's departed. There are two entrances: from the outside under the Temple of Mara balcony and via the cellar inside the Temple. Inside, there are numerous skeletons from which you can remove a few coins, bone meal, and skulls.

- ◆ Unique Weapon: Alessandra's Dagger [62/80]

8 The Ragged Flagon: Cistern Entrance

The secret entrance to the Ragged Flagon, Cistern, becomes available during the Thieves Guild Quest: Loud and Clear and becomes a world map marker (making it simple to return to the Guild). It can't be opened until then but provides a quicker return route to Brynjolf and Mercer Frey, instead of navigating the Ratway. Note the Shadowmark on the coffin (which you press to open) and on the surrounding Hall of the Dead entrance walls. If you're exiting from the Cistern, use the pull chain to open the coffin.

The Black-Briar family are the owners of the Black-Briar Meadery, and as such control much of Riften's economy. It is accessed via the front door (note the Shadowmark), a leap over the garden fence, and through the back gate (Expert). Inside, the foyer end table has a Note regarding the loss of a mead shipment, and the rest of the ground floor has a dining table full of food and other stored items.

8 Shrine of Talos

9 Dead Gate

The Dead Gate is so named for the number of people who died there thanks to repeated bandit raids of the city. The gate is now completely boarded up and no longer in use.

10 Mistveil Keep

The following leaders of Riften are loyal to the Stormcloaks at the start of the Civil War.

Jarl Laila Law-Giver

Laila is a fervent supporter of the Stormcloaks, strongly believing that the Empire can do nothing but steal the heritage of their city away if they come to power. She firmly believes in the old ways of Skyrim and is steeped in its traditions and mannerisms. Even though she rules quite a corrupt city, she is blissfully unaware of the more nefarious goings-on in town thanks to her Steward, Anuriel, who has been known to accept bribes and payoffs from the seedier inhabitants of Riften.

Harrauld

Harrauld is the youngest son of Laila Law-Giver. He is largely indifferent to the events of the Civil War but sides with the Stormcloaks because his mother does. This situation has driven a wedge between Saerlund and Harrauld, who constantly chide each other for their stances on the situation.

Saerlund

Saerlund is the oldest son of Laila Law-Giver. When he publicly spoke in favor of the Imperial forces in the Civil War, Laila refused to recognize him as heir. There is a great deal of hostility between the two now, although Saerlund still lives in the Keep. Should Laila ever become exiled due to the Empire gaining control of Riften, Saerlund will remain behind and live in the Keep in defiance of his mother's beliefs.

Anuriel (Steward)

Anuriel's devotion to her Jarl is a guise for her true nature as a corrupt and greedy individual. She readily accepts bribes from influential people in the city and is extremely clever at covering her tracks (even if it means making loose ends disappear). She has no desire to actually become the Jarl, seeing her position as a stronger link to her corrupt ties. She has gained some reputation as someone not to be trifled with.

Unmid Snow-Shod (Housecarl)

Unmid is the second to youngest child of Vulwulf Snow-Shod. He has dedicated his life to the art of combat, becoming highly adept at all sorts of martial weaponry. Due to this incredible talent, he was hired as the Housecarl. On more than one occasion, Unmid has proved he cannot be bested in combat and has even put down several attempts on the Jarl's life. Unmid's single weakness is his infatuation for Anuriel, the Jarl's Steward.

Wylandriah (Court Wizard)

She spends most of her day in her laboratory performing experiments and only makes herself available to the Jarl when specifically summoned. She seems always scatterbrained, but this is an act, as Wylandriah would prefer to be doing her experimentation rather than matters of court. By acting this way, she believes people leave her to herself most of the time (which is true).

Gonnar Oath-Giver

The following residents of Riften arrive to take control of this city, once this Hold has fallen during the Civil War.

Maven Black-Briar, Imperial Jarl

As matron of the Black-Briar family and a powerful businesswoman, Maven is virtually unapproachable and elitist. She's cold, ruthless and calculating—and also well connected within the Empire and Skyrim alike. If the Empire takes control of Riften in the Civil War, Maven (thanks to powerful friends in Cyrodill) is installed as the Imperial Jarl. She will also fill her court with family and allies.

Hemming Black-Briar, Imperial Steward

Hemming Black-Briar is the only son of Maven Black-Briar, and heir to family fortune. He is being groomed by Maven as a sort of protégé... someone to eventually take her place not only running the Meadery, but to also dabble in the same corrupt activities. Hemming is often an errand-boy, and has come to admire his mother's ways and fervently defends her whenever a family squabble should arise.

Maul (Housecarl)

Maul is a close friend of Hemming Black-Briar; when he was ambushed by bandits, Maul dove into the fray to save him. Ever since then, they have been partners in crime, with Maul assisting Hemming in his more nefarious activities assigned by Maven Black-Briar. He does not live within Riften, as he wants his identity to remain anonymous. Maul's brother is Dirge, part of the security at the Ragged Flagon.

Inside, the small shop front has a couple of Notes revealing a no-nonsense attitude to working here and some coin under the bed. Head into the back, along the two-floor high balcony above the mead distillery, to Indaryn's bedroom, which has a note from Maven to read.

Descend to the next balcony level, where the workers eat. The door at the far end of the lower balcony leads to Plankside. Down on the distillery floor are two large vats and a chest. You can also spend 10 gold for each bottle of Black-Briar Mead you want to purchase from the underhanded Romlyn Dreth. As these are worth 25 gold, you can make a little money selling it on. 18 Haelga's Bunkhouse

Haelga

Fastred

Svana Far-Shield

Bassianus Axius

Haelga's Bunkhouse provides long-term lodging for anyone who can keep up the rent and mostly caters to the fishermen and mead makers of Riften. There's something of a theme with many of the people who reside at the Bunkhouse: they do brutal, backbreaking work, and they're prone to abusing either alcohol or Skooma. It is a large building and has private rooms as well as a larger barracks-like common area with food on the tables. During Thieves Guild Quest: Taking Care of Business, a Statue of Dibella is on display on the bookcase in the main room. On the counter is a Note regarding an "experience" an anonymous patron had with Haelga. Behind the counter is Haelga's room, where she takes "clients" and writes in her ledger. Upstairs is a Skill Book, near the dormitory-style bedrooms, smaller bedroom, and storage room. More importantly is a Shrine of Dibella in Haelga's bedroom.

- ◇ Skill Book [Pickpocket]: Beggar [B1/10]
- ◇ Business Ledger
- ◇ Shrine of Dibella [8/8]
- ◇ Note: Until Next Time

► Dryside: Canal Level

Aside from an old Alchemist's shop tucked away under the main thoroughfare, this less-desirable and impoverished part of town is damp, dark, and the entrance to the Ratway. It isn't plagued by violence, just those down on their luck.

19 Beggar's Row

When the beggars of Riften aren't hanging around the marketplace, they rest here. There's little to entice you, unless you like collecting cabbage.

- ◇ Shadowmark: "Empty"
- ◇ Skill Book [Speech]: A Dance in Fire, v7 [C2/10]

20 Elgrim's Elixirs

Elgrim Hafjorg

Elgrim's Elixirs is Riften's lone apothecary. As it is located in the cramped and dangerous confines of the Canal Level, Elgrim's Elixirs usually caters to the members of the Thieves Guild and other unsavory types and specializes in poisons. The shop is filled with potions and ingredients. Find a Skill Book hidden inside a woven basket that sits atop the tall shelf near the fireplace. Behind the store is a bedroom, along with an alchemy chest belonging to Ingun Black-Briar, a strongbox, and a ledger. Favor Quest: Few and Far Between (given by Ingun) must be completed in order to open the Alchemy Chest here.

- ◇ Shadowmark: "Loot"
- ◇ Crafting: Alchemy Lab
- ◇ Trader (Apothecary): Elgrim [12/12]
 - ◇ Potions, Food, Ingredients, Books
- ◇ Skill Book [Alteration]: Reality & Other Falsehoods

- ◇ Strongbox (Adept)
- ◇ Potions aplenty

21 Marise Aravel's House

A homely hovel, with a good amount of food, this is where Marise the marketplace trader makes do.

- ◇ Shadowmark: "Loot"

22 Valindor's House

This is the dwelling of Valindor, who works part-time at the Meadery. This modest two-room chamber has little but food and a couple of books to steal.

- ◇ Shadowmark: "Loot"

23 Romlyn Dreth's House

The home of another Meadery worker, Romlyn's residence remains drab, even with a roaring fire.

- ◇ Potions

E Ratway (Entrance)

This is the initial entrance to the large underground sewer system where the Thieves Guild's tentacles have contracted to.

► Plankside

The western edge of the city, known as Plankside, is actually built on the waters of Lake Honrich and serves as the city's center of mead production and distribution (which is, in fact, integral to Riften's economy) and its fishing industry (Riften's secondary economy). The buildings here have been built on wooden docks, and the district is very old and ramshackle. There are three main docks projecting from Plankside, one owned completely by Black-Briar Meadery and the other two used for general commerce and fishing boats.

F Honeyside (East Entrance)

This is the entrance to the House for Sale. Once you purchase Honeyside, you can enter and exit from this location instead of using any of the Dryside gates.

24 Ripten Fishery

Tythis Ulen

Wujeeta

From-Deepest-Fathoms

Exterior: The structure has two entrances, locked during the night (Adept). There are fishing boats moored at the adjacent docks too; one has a tanning rack, and there are a number of fish barrels you can steal from.

◇ Crafting: Tanning Rack

Interior: The Ripten Fishery is owned by Bolli Trout-Purse and is the center of all fishing in and around Ripten. Inside, sections of the floor have been removed, allowing direct access to a salmon hatchery where the cellar used to be. But the fishery also serves as a general cleaning, storing, and processing area for all the fish that are caught on Lake Honrich. Most of the people who work in the Fishery reside at Haelga's Bunkhouse. There's an office off the balcony surrounding the hatchery with the following items:

- ◇ Business Ledger
- ◇ Note: Things to Do
- ◇ Strongbox (Apprentice)

G Black-Briar Meadery (East Entrance)

This entrance is used by the Drystide Meadery for loading and off-loading. It is an alternate entrance into the establishment.

D Dock Gate (East Entrance)

This allows quick and easy access to and from the blacksmith's and the marketplace; it is an often-overlooked gate.

25 Ripten Warehouse (Locked: Requires Key)

Sarthis Idren

Orini

The large wooden building served as a warehouse and general storage facility for the Fishery but hasn't been used in years. It is firmly sealed. Instead, the main floor is musty, with old furniture scattered about. Another locked door (requires Key) down in the cellar leads to a Skooma and Moon Sugar den. To enter the Warehouse, consult the Jarl of Ripten and begin her Favor: The Raid. Sarthis Idren and his accomplice Orini guard their makeshift Skooma lab. It can only be accessed by key during this quest (obtained from the Jarl)

◇ Sarthis's Satchel

H Sewer

This is where you arrive if you decide to escape from Ripten Jail using the sewer escape route detailed at that location.

Ratway

The Ratway is the area that runs beneath all of Ripten. Comprised of interconnected basements and half-flooded sewer tunnels and dominated by a huge cistern in the center, the Ratway is a small city within a city. It is here that Ripten's Thieves Guild plies its trade and the riffraff make their home.

The Ratway

A Door to Ripten

1 Muggers' Tunnel

A pair of thugs prowl this initial tunnel (which has two side grates so you can peer down to Location [2]). Dodge or slay Hewnon Black-Skeever and Drahhf.

2 The Bridge

The lever to lower this bridge is on the opposite (south) side, on the upper balcony. Approach it once you've finished initial explorations. Look up in the tunnel to the west, and you can see the tunnel grates from Location [1].

B Locked Gate (Expert)

Unlock this for a shortcut to the Ragged Flagon entrance (Location [7]), and the bridge balcony.

C Trapped Door (Apprentice)

The door at the end of the tunnel to the west is trapped. Unlock the trap trigger or face two spears in your chest from the left. Back up to avoid them just after opening the door, if you didn't disarm the trap.

D Door to the Ragged Flagon

The Ragged Flagon (Map Not Shown)

The following notable inhabitants of the Ragged Flagon and Cistern arrive during the Thieves Guild Quests:

Guild Master: Mercer Frey

Guild Second: Brynjolf

Guild Third: Delvin Mallory, Vex

Guild Member: Dirge, Vipir the Fleet, Niruin, Sapphire, Cynric Endell, Thrynn, Rune, Garthar, Ravyn Imyan

Guild Vendor: Vekel the Man, Syndus, Herluin Lothaire, Arnskar Ember-Master, Vanryth Gatharian

Guild Fence (Riften): Tonilia

The Ragged Flagon is the seediest, most dangerous tavern in all of Skyrim. It is located beneath the Riften city streets and serves as a meeting place for the province's criminal element. Strangers are not usually welcome, fights and even deaths are not uncommon, and most people in the place on any given night are involved in criminal activity in some capacity. It would be wise to enter here once you've befriended a thief named Brynjolf. One of the tables also contains a couple of notes, and there are two exits—one into the Vaults and a secret storage cabinet with a false back that opens up into the entrance to the Cistern. There's limited loot. The storage cabinet (requires Key) is opened by Brynjolf when he walks you into the Cistern.

NOTE The quality of furnishings and frequency of items, banners, Guild members, and traders appearing in the empty alcoves opposite the Ragged Flagon bar area actually increases as you restore the Guild to its former glory by completing the City Influence Quests (see Thieves Guild Quests for more information). Aside from additional traders, this also occurs in the Cistern too.

The Ragged Flagon: Cistern

This more secretive and expansive main sewage hub is the stronghold for the Thieves Guild. It is only accessible once Brynjolf leads you here during Thieves Guild Quest: Loud and Clear.

A Door to Ragged Flagon

B Ladder to Riften

This brings you up and through the mausoleum and into the small graveyard attached to the Hall of the Dead. When you first access this location, it is added to your world map, allowing quicker Fast-Travel back here between Thieves Guild Quests.

1 Main Cistern Chamber

Once you're a member, Guild chests are free for the opening. Otherwise they are inaccessible. These containers are also safe to store items in; deposit inventory items you wish to keep and return for them later. You should also read up on Shadowmarks by taking one of the books in this area. On Mercer Frey's table is a note regarding a tense relationship between the Guild and the East Empire Company. Near the ladder exit is a cupboard with another note, concerning the search for Rune's parents.

- ◇ Ability: Blessing of Nocturnal

5 Guild Leader's Office

This area of the Cistern contains two trophy shelves that help you track how many Radiant Quests you've completed. They also display all of the Larceny Targets you've found (see the Thieves Guild chapter for the details). The Crown of Queen Barenziah also appears here once all of the gems have been found and the crown located (Thieves Guild Side Quest: No Stone Unturned). Once you become Guild Leader (by completing the Thieves Guild quest line and all of the City Influence Quests), the Tribute Chest will appear at the base of the desk.

6 Your Bed

This idyllic logging and fishing village sits along the west bank of Lake Geir, right near the foot of Skyrim's towering mountain, the Throat of the World [6.38]. Interesting things are occurring at Ivarstead, not the least of which being the supposedly haunted barrow that's just outside of town.

Exterior

Speak with Klimmek, Narfi, and Temba Wide-Arm to obtain a set of Miscellaneous Objectives. Temba will also pay you for any firewood you happen to chop outside, and you can gain the Gift of Charity by giving poor Narfi a gold piece.

1 Vilemyr Inn

Bring the informative journal you discover within Shroud Hearth Barrow [9.02] to Wilhelm, and he'll hand you a special Sapphire Claw that lets you explore more of the place.

Lynly Star-Sung is also here. You can ask her to play an instrumental song for 5 septims (unless you can persuade her to play for free). Lynly is the woman who Sibbi Black-Briar is searching for in the quest "The Lover's Requital." Temba Wide-Arm and Gwilin both reside at the inn as well.

A Exit to Skyrim

1 Lever Puzzle Passage

Obtain a bit of loot from a shelf on your way into this passage, where the ghost of Wyndelius Gatharian urges you to leave, then vanishes. Enter the nearby alcove, grab a Skill Book off the stone table, then face west, toward the far portcullis, so that two pairs of wall levers are visible. Looking at the portcullis, pull the leftmost lever, followed by the "inside" right lever, to manipulate the gates so that you may progress. Don't touch the far-right lever—it triggers a trap. Pull the wall chain that follows to raise the next few portcullises, and optionally unlock an Adept-level iron door to access a dangerous nook with a trapped chest and a pressure plate trap.

3 Hall of Stories

Bring the journal that you find at [2] back to Ivarstead's innkeeper, Wilhelm. In thanks, he'll give you the Sapphire Claw, which you need to open the Nordic Puzzle Door here. Beware of gout of flame as you open the door and enter the passage (or look to the floor and disarm that particular trap), then inspect the Sapphire Claw and notice three symbols etched on its palm (Moth, Owl, Wolf). Rotate the door's three concentric rings to form the same pattern of symbols, then inspect the central keyhole to insert the claw and open the way forward.

- ◇ Danger! Flamethrower Traps (trapped door)

4 Draugr Ambush

- ◇ Loose gear

5 Spiral Stairwell

A trapdoor plunges you into shallow water at the foot of this winding stairwell. Nab some gear from the bottom of the pool, then swim up and climb out (or pull the lever to lift yourself out). Go all the way upstairs to locate a Master-level locked door. If you can pick this tricky lock, you should have no trouble opening the large chest in the nook beyond.

6 Oil Pit Chamber

Leap two pressure plates and slay a skeleton as you descend into this chamber, where a mob of skeletons are gathered in the center of the room below. Quickly knock down one of the central hanging lamps to ignite the oily floor beneath them and decimate all of the skeletons at once. Before going downstairs, spy a handle near a sarcophagus and pull it to allow you to enter the treasure room. More Draugr awaken when you reach the room's far side. Deal with them, then proceed through the northeast door. Beware of the trip wire stretched across the passage beyond.

7 Trapped Passage

Avoid triggering a trip wire and pressure plate as you battle a bow-wielding Draugr here. Jump the trip wire and sneak around the plate to avoid stirring more undead. Once again, you find yourself locked in the room. Pick the lock on the far door, or take it from the corpse of the Draugr near the door once you kill it—again.

- ◇ Danger! Swinging Blade Trap (trip wire/wall chain), Swinging Wall Trap (pressure plate)

8 Drawbridge Chamber

A waterfall pushes a gentle stream through this long, enemy-free chamber. Pull a nearby wall chain to open the portcullis at the end of the stream, then claim a coin purse from the bottom of the small pool beyond. Find some gear behind the waterfall as well, then go upstairs and open the large southwest door to enter a chamber with a lone Draugr guard. Step on the pressure plate here to rotate the walls and catch glimpses of four glyphs. Spin the four glyph pillars outside the room to mimic the same pattern (Whale, Hawk, Snake, Whale), then step on the central pressure plate to lower a drawbridge.

- ◇ Potion
- ◇ Loose gear

9 Path to the Depths

Avoid the pressure plate just inside the door, then deliberately hit the trip wire to trigger a rockfall trap that smashes the Draugr in this passage.

2 Spiderweb Hall

Slay a couple of Frostbite Spiders in this webbed corridor, and unlock an Adept-level iron door to access a small nook with some potions and gear. Disarm the trapped chest on the shelf, or stand off to one side as you open it to dodge the flamethrower trap. Then skirt a nearby pressure plate as you head toward [3].

◇ Danger! Dart Trap (pressure plate), Flamethrower Trap (hinge trigger)
◇ Chest

3 Flooded Catacombs

Cut down the Draugr that arise from these waterlogged burial passages, note the four glyphs on the walls near the stairs as you enter, two on each wall. Spin the four pillars in the passage ahead so that their glyphs match the ones near the stairs (Hawk, Whale, Snake, Whale). With the pillars properly rotated, pull the lever near the far portcullis to open the way forward. Beware of taking the Soul Gem from the table here—removing it causes the giant mammoth skull to swing at you like a battering ram!

◇ Danger! Mammoth Skull Trap (pressure pedestal)
◇ Potion

4 Lord Geirmund's Tomb

This tall chamber features plenty of Draugr and multiple tiers of walkways. Fight your way up some wooden stairs and collect an important key from the withered hand of Lord Geirmund on the altar. Inspect the nearby epitaph before using the key to open the nearby door and advance.

5 Crafty Passages

Slay a powerful Draugr and his animal companion here, then search around to find a couple of potions. Take the west passage and go upstairs to battle another mighty Draugr. Don't pull the lever by the bridge—it triggers a trap. Instead, turn around and pull a different lever that's mounted on the wall to lower to lower the bridge.

Back out on the upper level of Lord Geirmund's Tomb [4], look to your right to see a small ledge. Jump down and disarm the trap on the door, then enter the small alcove to find a locked chest.

Cross the bridge (pulling another lever on the far side of the central platform), then carefully avoid the pressure plate as you move on to the next chamber. It activates a nasty set of swinging blades that are difficult to dodge once triggered.

◇ Danger! Magic Caster Trap, Spear Trap (lever), Swinging Blade Trap (pressure plate)

6 Sigdis Gauldurson's Tomb

An incredibly powerful undead archer rises to combat you in this flooded chamber. Throughout the battle, Sigdis Gauldurson summons two illusory duplicates of himself to confuse you. The "real" enemy is the one that wears a horned helmet. Attack this version of the Sigdis to inflict damage, eventually slaying the fiend to attain two powerful items from its remains. When Sigdis falls, a secret door opens, allowing you to take the east passage to locate a giant chest and other valuables, including a Skill Book found on the top of the nearby bookshelf. Follow the passage to its end and pull a lever to open a secret door that connects back to [1].

This small collection of open-air ruins lies in the Rift's southwestern wilds. Cut down a handful of bandits here, then scale the narrow northern wooden stairs to locate a chest on a ledge. If Side Quest: Lost to the Ages is active and you have all four Aetherium Shards, Katria will meet you here. Insert the four Shards into the Dwarven Mechanism, forging them into a single crest.

◆ Aetherium Crest

Take the Crest and retreat from the platform, and the flagstones rise up, forming the roof of a giant, circular tower and elevator entrance. This is the entrance to the Aetherium Forge.

Interior: The Aetherium Forge

A Elevator to Skyrim

As you emerge from the elevator, jump over the railing to your right and skirt around the rubble to locate a chest. Then pull the lever to open the gate leading out to the Lantern Chamber.

◆ Chest [Locked: Apprentice]

1 Torchlit Chamber and Juniper Tree Treasure

This giant subterranean chamber is deeper than any other dwarven structure in Skyrim. Stay on the path as the torches alight ahead of you. Cross the first rock bridge out to the main "island" in the center of the lake.

If you like, you can take this opportunity to go hunting for treasure. Peer over the ledge behind the low wall on the island, and you can spot a lower ledge with a chest. Drop down to claim it, then dive into the water and swim behind the waterfall to find another small chest on a ledge. When you're done, return to the island and continue across the second bridge leading up to the main ruin.

Before heading up the stairs, climb out onto the narrow ledge to your left, where a lone tree has found purchase among the rocks. There's an enchanted battleaxe on the rock shelf behind it.

◆ Chest [Locked: Adept] ◆ Loose gear ◆ Chest [Locked: Apprentice]

2 Torchlit Ruins

Climb the grand staircase and enter the plaza in the center of the ruins. The gate ahead of you is sealed; to open it, simply fire an arrow at both of the resonators in the alcoves above (the order in which you shoot them doesn't matter). If you forgot your bow or arrows, a Dwarven Bow and small quiver rest on the stone table to one side of the plaza.

Before heading down the passage and into the forge proper, there's some more treasure to grab. The rubble-filled passage (to your left as you face the door) contains a chest. The archway opposite it leads out to the river that feeds the falls, where you can claim another chest and some loose Soul Gems in the streambed. And finally, there's some silver to be mined on the rocky ledge that separates the streambed from the ruins.

◆ Chest [Locked: Adept] ◆ Chest [Locked: Expert] ◆ Loose gear

3 Forge Entryway and Aetherium Forge

When you're ready to continue, head through the gate you opened earlier and continue down the stairs. Before opening the door at the end of the passage, make sure to claim the potions and loose gear on the low platform to the left.

◆ Loose gear ◆ Potions

The Forge proper is guarded by numerous Dwarven Automaton and the giant Forgemaster himself. Tactics on dealing with the enemies you will encounter here are detailed in the quest, on page 449. When combat is done, you have just enough raw Aetherium to forge one of three unique items. Hunt through the rest of the chamber for additional items:

◆ Chest [2] ◆ Loose gear ◆ Potions ◆ Unique Item: The Aetherial Crown [DG1/17] ◆ Unique Item: The Aetherial Shield [DG2/17] ◆ Unique Weapon: The Aetherial Staff [DG7/7]

4 and 5 Hidden Lava Passage (East and West)

You may have noticed two inaccessible gates set high in the wall of the forge chamber, overlooking the two chests. Both of these are at the end of a U-shaped corridor whose entrance is out over the lava, at the extreme east and west ends of the forge cavern. To enter these passages, you'll need some special skills.

The Ethereal Form Shout is the easiest way to reach them. Simply use the Shout to protect yourself from the lava, then swim out to the gates and head up the passages beyond. If you lack Ethereal Form, you may still be able to make it with a bit of luck and careful aim. Use your Bats (Vampire Lord) or Whirlwind Sprint (Shout) powers to dash out onto one of the low-lying rocks in the lava, then turn and dash again to reach the gate. Use any Resist Fire potions or similar gear you may have before trying this, as failure is usually fatal.

If you manage to reach these passages, you'll find that each contains a chest and some dwarven scrap.

◆ Chest [2]

6 Molten Forge Chest

A large chest is hidden behind a pillar in the far left (southeast) corner of the lava pool. Use the Ethereal Form Shout or your Bats or Whirlwind Sprint powers to reach it. The latter is especially tricky, requiring extreme precision as you try to land on the rocky outcroppings along the way.

This sizeable cave lies northeast of Shor's Stone [9.25] and runs deep into the Rift's eastern mountains, eventually giving way to ancient dwarven ruins. After collecting all of the Unusual Gems that are scattered throughout Skyrim, you're told to visit Tolvald's Cave in search of a special crown, to which the gems belong.

A Exit to Skyrim

1 Entry Cavern

Slaughter a few angry predators in the first cavern, then loot a locked chest near the central fire pit and flip through an informative journal that sits on a nearby stool. Beware of bear traps, hanging rattles, and many more predators as you make your way to the next room.

An ornate metal door leads into this small, stone room. First, pull the chain on the west wall to open two side passages and slay a few Falmer. These villains would have ambushed you when you opened the room's tantalizing trapped chest. If you can't unlock the chest's trap hinge, stand atop the chest when opening it to avoid being shot by arrows. Then use the Falmer passages to visit a higher chamber, where you find an Alchemy Lab and several potions.

The bandits are quick to open the stronghold's front gate when they see you approach, but it isn't a warm welcome. They release vicious pit wolves to maul you! Secure the room afterward, then optionally pick the Adept-level cages to free (and fight) a number of pit wolves. If you're swift, carefully step on the pressure plate to trigger a swinging wall trap, then deftly slip around the spiked gate to reach a locked chest in the small nook beyond. This Orc stronghold stands in the Rift's southern mountains, to the southwest of Lake Honrich. The Orcs here have fallen under a dreadful curse and will reluctantly accept the aid of an outsider.

Exterior

The first time you visit Largashbur, you'll witness the Orcs defending their stronghold from an enraged giant. Speak with the Orcs after the battle to learn of their current plight with the giants and gain a new Side Quest. The Orcs won't allow you to enter Largashbur until you've gathered several items that Atub needs to cure his cursed chief, Yamarz. (See the quest walkthrough for "The Cursed Tribe" for help in tracking these down.) Once you're granted entry, you can utilize a number of crafting stations and locate a locked chest near the entrance to the Largashbur Cellar.

This stronghold, which stands nestled against the Rift's southern mountains to the southwest of Riften, derives its name from its tall central tower, which can be observed from a great distance. With the keep's outer wall in ruins, breaching the tower isn't nearly as challenging as it might have been in days of yore—simply scale the outer steps and head inside.

NOTE This location replaces Secondary Location [9.J] Bandit's Shack: Autumnshade.

A ruined shack is home to a couple of Redwater Lookouts and their dog. Don't try a frontal assault, as the lookouts are usually friendly and ask whether you're interested in "a fix." The front door is boarded; enter from the holes in the side walls. Explore the building to find a few items, then locate the trapdoor to descend into Redwater Den proper.

Redwater Den

A Trapdoor to Skyrim

A doorman requests you sheathe any weapons before he opens the door down to the Den. Check the alcove for the following:

- ◆ Chest
- ◆ Loose gear

1 Redwater Skooma Den

This murky bar is where deserters and bandits lie in small alcove rooms, feeling the aftereffects of Skooma consumption. The dealer can be persuaded to give you some Redwater Skooma, or you can pay to try some. If you'd prefer to fight, she is hostile, as is an attendant. The dealer, attendant, and vampires in the distillery all carry a Redwater Den Backrooms Key, which unlocks the hidden storeroom behind the bar, and the locked doors throughout this immediate area. The hidden storeroom to the north is the exit from this dungeon.

C Locked Door [Adept]

Behind the door, a passage leads past a bookcase with potions and a chest, to a balcony overlooking the distillery.

2 Skooma Distillery

This is where Redwater Skooma is fermented and distilled. The place is run by vampires, who use the potent magic of Redwater Spring to taint their Skooma. This is the first sign of their presence. If you consume Redwater Skooma in the den, you wake up in the cell in this chamber. The raised center of the ground floor has some Moon Sugar, other ingredients, and an Alchemy Lab. To the southwest is a tunnel up to a bridge that must be lowered via the nearby lever in order to continue forward. Watch for vampires and their thralls throughout.

3 Mine and Draugr Tomb Entrance

Follow the path down to a mine and into a Draugr tomb as it turns back on itself to the south. Watch for the floor trigger in the small chamber with the fallen walls and half-buried urns. 6 Draugr Crypt and Death Hound Pen Defeat the two thralls in here, but watch your step—the entrance has a trapdoor down to a spiked pit. The pit has a lower corridor with swinging blade traps to a chest and steps up and out to the main floor, which houses two Death Hounds in a cage. Climb the spiral step column to an inaccessible chest alcove in the northwest corner (you can reach this only after using your Bats or Whirlwind Sprint abilities). NOTE If you haven't activated this quest, or you're following the Dawnguard alliance, there is only the pool to inspect.

After drinking from the Bloodspring directly:

If you are a vampire, you receive the Tainted Blood of the Ancients ability. For one day, your Vampiric Drain will absorb Magicka and Stamina, but your maximum health will be reduced by 30.

If you are not a vampire, you have a chance of contracting Sanguinare Vampiris or another disease. Keep drinking from the spring, and you can contract any number of unpleasant poxes: This isn't exactly sanitary!

2 Dawnguard Gorge

Vampires sometimes attack from this point, later into the Dawnguard Main Quests. Otherwise, expect wildlife such as rabbits, deer, and butterflies in this small gorge where you can see the first of the buttress towers of Fort Dawnguard.

3 Mossy Glen

This area offers a good view of the exterior of Fort Dawnguard, if you look back as you climb this embankment. The overlook has one of the entrances to Mossy Glen Cave.

B Cave Entrance to Mossy Glen Cave

The interior of Mossy Glen Cave is detailed below. This is one of two entrances/exits to this cave.

4 Outer Wall Barricade

This location, around the base of the first Dawnguard tower buttress, is erected around the time of Dawnguard Main Quest: Bloodline, as the vampire attacks increase, before you return from meeting Harkon. It isn't here when you first discover the area. A watcher named Ollrod guards these defenses from his platform behind and above the thick wooden wall.

5 Inner Wall Barricade

This defensive point, around the base of the second Dawnguard tower buttress, is completed around the time of Dawnguard Main Quest: Prophet, after vampire attacks occur close to the main fort entrance, while you're out finding the Moth Priest. Only a simple wall is here when you first discover the area. Guards named Tilde, Mogrul, and Vori all patrol this area. Note the upper wooden platform just below the stone arch of the second tower buttress; this is another lookout spot.

6 Refugee Camp

Prior to Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death, this is the small clearing where Durak practices with his crossbow (he gives a spare to you if you ask him). After the quest, a refugee camp is set up here, along with two tents. Alvide, Barknar, Jayri, and Sern all have their reasons for being here. Check the area for a book (which begins Side Quest: Lost to the Ages when read) and the following:

- ◇ Book: The Aetherium Wars
- ◇ Cooking Pot
- ◇ Wood Chopping Block

7 Dayspring Path

Vampires have been known to attack in this area, especially later in the Dawnguard Main Quest. The gap in the wooden wall leads to the second entrance (B) into Mossy Glen Cave.

8 Fort Dawnguard: Main Entrance

Expect to see Celann guarding this entrance on occasion, or another member of the Dawnguard. The imposing entrance is the only way into Fort Dawnguard.

Lore: Fort Dawnguard Overview

Tucked away in the southeastern Velothi Mountains of the Rift, in the hidden mountain valley called Dayspring Canyon, towers the old fortification of Fort Dawnguard. Long fallen to disrepair, this massive fortress will become home to a new faction of vampire hunters born from the ashes of the Vigilants of Stendarr. It is here where the agents of the Dawnguard, led by Isran, have begun to gather, where new recruits dedicate themselves to the eradication of vampires, and where a solution to the growing menace must be found.

Fort Dawnguard's interior is upgraded in stages throughout the Dawnguard Main Quest:

Initially, the fort is filled with cobwebs and clutter, but it does have a few amenities, including a smelter and a workbench.

After Dawnguard Main Quest: A New Order, Gunmar and Sorine settle in and set up full smithing and enchanting stations. You can now accept their Radiant Quests, purchase items from them, and acquire the Armored Troll and Dawnguard Husky animal companions. The barracks area fills out to house the Dawnguard's new recruits.

During Dawnguard Main Quest: Prophet, several Dawnguard Agents return to the fort. You can now ask the members of the Dawnguard to join you on your missions.

Once you complete Dawnguard Faction Quest: Bolstering the Ranks, Florentius moves in, adding an Alchemy Station.

During Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death, a refugee camp is set up outside the fort.

After Dawnguard Main Quest: Kindred Judgment, you receive a private room on the fort's upper level.

Dead Drop Falls

This series of increasingly impressive natural caverns starts with a plunge down a waterfall hole. There are numerous ways to test your Crossbow-aiming throughout this location, which is one of the ways the Dawnguard utilize this cave complex.

A Exit to Fort Dawnguard

This leads back into the natural cavern and the Armored Troll pens area of Fort Dawnguard.

I Drop Dead Falls Cavern and Grotto (Upper and Lower)

Upper: Water from the Velothi Mountains tumbles down a subterranean waterfall that dominates this cavern. The only way forward, is down, into the hole the cascading water has formed. Note the chest on the raised bank to the west, close to the exit door (D); scramble up or grab the chest on your way out.

- ◆ Chest

Lower: The lower grotto area is a large pool of water with natural pillars supporting the cavern above. There are two exits (to the north and west), but to fully explore this cave system, head north (as you'll find your way blocked at the top of Location 8 if you go west).

2 Isran's Cathedral: Eastern Walkway

Known colloquially as Isran's Cathedral (after the leader of the Dawnguard who discovered this cavernous chamber), the ground level is comprised of a winding natural path of bridges up from a ruined jetty. Note the chest behind the massive columns at the water's level, over on the western perimeter of this chamber. Watch for a bear trap (a Skeever didn't)—the pressure plate and dart trap on the top of the first bridge as you head northeast. Turn right (south), watching for a trip wire near the table with the empty chest on it (which launches spears at you). There's a second trip wire to the left (north) that triggers more darts.

- ◆ Chest
- ◆ Danger! Dart Trap (2)
- ◆ Danger! Bear Trap
- ◆ Danger! Spear Trap

3 Isran's Cathedral: Northern Bridge

Farther along the ascending natural bridges is a group of wooden bridges that test your elementary puzzle-solving skills. There's a lever on the left that raises one of the bridges but not the other; either way you're left with a gap you can't cross.

Puzzle solution: Take the steel bolts (or use your own arrows), and fire at the target hanging from the huge stalagmite to the south. This raises (or lowers, depending on where the lever is positioned) both bridges. If both bridges are raised, use the lever to lower them before crossing.

Puzzle solution: At the second, ramped bridge, pull the lever to lower it, which also lowers the exit portcullis to Location 4. Move to the portcullis, turn around to face south, and fire an arrow or bolt at the second target to the south, raising both bridge and portcullis so you can escape. But wait! Step under the first open portcullis to a second one. Turn around and fire at the target again, raising the second portcullis and lowering the first. Then step into Location 4.

◆ Loose gear

4 Portcullis Puzzle Cave

Ahead (north) of you is a closed portcullis, three pressure plates on the floor (one with the book Uncommon Taste on it), and one above the portcullis. There's steel bolts on the barrel if you're running low on crossbow ammunition.

Puzzle solution: All four pressure plates need to be pressed in. For this to happen, simply place any object (such as the food from the barrel or large sack in the room) on each of the two pressure plates you can't stand on. Then fire an arrow at the fourth plate above the portcullis (while standing on the third, or positioning another item on it) to open it.

Three Khajiit caravans wander Skyrim, traveling from town to town and offering various goods and services. Each caravan is made up of an owner and his entourage, and each caravan travels its own route between two major cities. Caravans will pause to do business with you while on the move but are more commonly found outside of Skyrim's larger capital cities, where they make camp for brief periods. Befriending each of the three savvy caravan owners can lead to special benefits!

Ri'saad's Caravan

Ri'saad is the patriarch of the Khajiit caravan merchants. He's the richest of the three and enjoys the best trade route, with exclusive contracts among Skyrim's wealthiest cities. Ri'saad's route takes him from Markarth [5.00] to Whiterun [6.00] and back again. Ri'saad offers a fine selection of wares, and Khayla can train you to be more stealthy.

- ◆ Crafting: Tanning Rack

Ahkari's Caravan

Ahkari has the monopoly on the north-south Dawnstar [3.00] to Riften [9.00] run—a very profitable passage. Speak with Ahkari to buy and sell a variety of goods or to receive training lessons in Pickpocket. Dro'marash can help you hone your Speech skill, while Kharjo will offer to serve as a Follower after you do him a special favor.

Ma'dran's Caravan

Ma'dran used to be the poorest of the three Khajiit merchants. Now, with the advent of the Civil War, his business is booming. Ma'dran's primary goods are weapons and armor, which are in high demand. Speak with Ma'dran to purchase some fresh gear, or pay Ma'jhad to help you improve your Lockpicking skill.

- ◆ Ma'dran's route is unique in that he shares a common stop with Ri'saad's caravan: Windhelm [7.00]. However, Ma'dran's route runs from Windhelm [7.00] to Solitude [1.00] instead of to Markarth [5.00].

It is, in fact, the interior of the Star of Azura, the Daedric artifact you seek to recover during the quest. The person you seek out to assist you in repairing the Broken Star of Azura determines the reward you'll receive at the quest's end: You get Azura's Star (an infinite Grand Soul Gem) if you turn to Aranea lenith, and you get the Black Star (an infinite Black Soul Gem) if you seek out Nelacar. Regardless of which person you turn to, you'll end up entering the star and chasing the nefarious Mayln Varen down a winding, crystalline pathway. Dremora will attempt to intercept you along the way. Defeat Varen when you reach the bottom to purify the star and claim a very valuable keepsake.

The dwarves' capital city of Blackreach has been abandoned for ages and now serves as home to vicious Falmer. This great subterranean metropolis houses many secrets for those brave enough to probe its depths. Blackreach features multiple access elevators, but your first visit occurs during Daedric Quest: Discerning the Transmundane, in which you will likely travel through Altland [4.13]. Therefore, the first time you enter Blackreach, you'll find yourself at [B], unless you chose one of the alternate routes.

Once you've accessed Blackreach, you may use any of the city's elevators to return to the surface. Some elevators connect to major dwarven ruins across Skyrim, such as Raldbthar [3.32] in the Pale. Others simply lead to lone elevator towers that stand in the wilderness. Ride each of Blackreach's elevators to open more and more surface connections to Blackreach—this makes moving to and from the great hidden city much easier.

The terrain of Blackreach becomes tumultuous around the edges of the cavern but is otherwise quite level and easy. Expect to face a blend of dwarven security units, Falmer, and various cave dwellers like the Chaurus and Frostbite Spider. Encounters with other, more powerful creatures such as trolls and giants are rare.

Aside from exploring the Tower of Mzark [10] as part of the "Discerning the Transmundane" quest, you may also collect special Crimson Nirnroots as part of Side Quest: A Return to Your Roots. Around 50 of these special red plants grow throughout Blackreach. Many are labeled on the map provided here in this guide, while others are found inside of Blackreach's interior points of interest. Use this resource to track them down, then pinpoint their locations by the soft ringing sound each plant produces. Collect the requisite number of Crimson Nirnroot plants to advance the quest.

Scale a rocky slope to reach this tall northern tower, then circle around to locate its door. Enter and slay a handful of overgrown Frostbite Spiders on your way to the far elevator, which takes you back out to Blackreach. You'll find yourself standing near a neighboring tower to the one you entered. Slay a few more spiders out here to cleanse this place.

2 Sinderion's Field Laboratory

This small lab is likely to be your first stop in Blackreach. Claim plenty of loot here and use the crafting stations to prepare yourself for the dangers that lurk in the dark. If you are planning on a long exploration of Blackreach, this is a great place to use as a base camp. Pull a lever on the balcony to the east of the gate to open it, but head through the nearby east doors first to secure a sleeping area and a room with a chest. Proceed until you reach a watery chamber, then dive underwater to locate three submerged chests. Proceed through the next passage and slay another Falmer to obtain a useful key. Insert the Blank Lexicon into the Lexicon Receptacle, then press the third button from the left until the second button from the left becomes active. Now press the second button from the left until the first button on the left becomes active. Press this button until all of the buttons deactivate. Other Blackreach Locations

The following sites don't have quite as much going on as the aforementioned locations but are still worth exploring:

i Overpass

This overpass was presumably used to monitor the travel of workers to and from the city.

ii Wispmother Encounter

Beware of this clearing, where wisps flutter about. A dangerous Wispmother will attack if you draw near. Crimson Nirnroot grows by the planks that span the nearby stream to the east.

◇ Crimson Nirnroot

v Sleeping Chaurus

Get the drop on a pair of giant, snoozing Chaurus by sneaking up to this site.

vi Blackreach City: Main Gate

vii Blackreach Arena

It is assumed that Falmer would have been made to fight at the small arena located here. Pulling the nearby lever causes a lethal spinning blade to stick up from the arena's floor. Collect the Skill Book that rests on the nearby stone table.

After a brief exploration of the long-unused wing, you're soon whisked away to unfamiliar surroundings—the deceptively verdant mind of Emperor Pelagius III! Speak with Sheogorath to advance the quest and receive a unique weapon called the Wabbajack—this is the only thing you can take with you when you leave this unusual place.

Travel down each of the three paths to encounter three very unusual situations, each a reflection of Pelagius's warped psyche. Use the Wabbajack to solve each of the situations as follows:

Arena: Shoot the spectating soldiers on the arena's far side, not the combatants.

Pelagius the Tormented: Shoot the sleeping Emperor to spawn a series of progressively more dangerous foes. Defeat them all.

Pelagius vs. Pelagius: Shoot the smaller version of Pelagius (named "Confidence") to make it grow. Shoot the Imperial Soldier named "Anger" to shrink it. Ensure that Pelagius's Confidence is as large as can be, then shoot the two specters of Self-Doubt that eventually appear to vanquish them.

Once you've returned from Pelagius's frightening mind, continue your search of the Pelagius Wing to discover a Skill Book on some crates downstairs.

Topographical Overview

Among the countless planes of Oblivion, the Soul Cairn has a particularly grim reputation. The plane of undeath is filled with lost, trapped, or accursed souls, bound to wander this place of despair and anguish for all eternity. The plane is ruled by mysterious beings known only as the Ideal Masters and is protected by their endless legions of undead Soul Guards. It is here that a powerful vampire named Valerica—Serana's mother and the wife of Lord Harkon—has dwelt for centuries in the colossal coliseum-like structure known as the Boneyard.

For the purposes of this guide, we have divided the Soul Cairn into three Parishes. The boundary lines are invisible and don't show up during your adventure; they have been created to aid you in locating the many small points of interest and secrets that the Soul Cairn holds. Here's what to look for:

3.2 Major Location: This is an area of the Soul Cairn that is critically important to Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death. These are larger-scale locations and usually house a particularly hardy foe or impressive revelation.

3.A Minor Location: A section of the Soul Cairn that is optional to investigate. These may be as simple as waypoints to use as landmarks or buildings containing one or more of the many secrets that the Soul Cairn holds.

In addition to flagged locations, the following areas and items are shown on the map and are listed here (along with the number available):

Arvak's Skull (1): The skull of a spectral horse you can save as part of Regional Activity: Arvak the Spectral Steed.

Ideal Master Crystal (8): A strange, floating crystal that saps your energy as you enter its sphere of influence. These crystals are unbreakable and dangerous. Combat them with potions made by Valerica (Regional Activity: Valerica's Concoction) or by consuming Soul Husks (see below), and look for a chest under each one.

Jiub's Opus (10): The scattered pages of a renowned hero known as Saint Jiub. Gather them all as part of Side Quest: Impatience of a Saint.

Lightning Attractor (4): Place a Grand or Greater Soul Gem into the receptacle at this point, and a lightning strike transforms it into a Black Soul Gem.

Reaper Gem Fragments (3): Three locations where you may find fragments of the Eldritch Reaper Gem.

Reaper's Lair (1): The summoning place where you can call and fight the Reaper, as part of Regional Activity: (Don't Fear) the Reaper.

Spell Tome (3): The Spell Tomes needed to conjure Bonemen, Mistmen, and Wrathmen are scattered throughout the Cairn. Their locations are shown here.

Teleporter (9): A small circle of twisting purple light transports you to a nearby location (usually a rooftop).

In addition to the enemies you encounter and collectibles to find, there are three other items of interest:

Arvak: From time to time, you may see a skeletal horse with a spectral mane galloping in terror across this realm. This is Arvak, the lost but loyal steed. Find and ride him as part of Regional Activity: Arvak the Spectral Steed.*

Soul Husks: Dotted throughout the Soul Cairn (and also found in some chests) are Soul Husks. These desiccated growths are edible and are found in your Food menu. For ten seconds, you gain 10 percent Magic Resistance and are protected from Soul Drain effects (such as those of the Ideal Masters). Check the Regional Activities for more uses.

Soul Fissures: Throughout the Soul Cairn, you can also find several gaping cracks in the earth with a strange energy seeping from them. If you have an empty Soul Gem in your inventory, interact with these fissures to instantly fill the gem. Each fissure can be used only once.

Parish 1: The Threshold

This pathway leads from the portal to a large barrier wall that separates the inner and outer parts of the Cairn. This area has fewer foes and less danger, so explore it first, then search for the gap in the Barrier Wall to proceed. For quicker, less terrifying results, stay on the path!

Major Locations

[SC1.1] Portal to Volkihar Ruins

Related Quest: Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death

This set of floating stone steps leads to a pulsating portal that leads back to Valerica's Laboratory, back in the Volkihar Ruins section of Castle Volkihar. This is the only entrance and exit to the Soul Cairn, and you can return here at any point once Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death begins. Once opened, it will not close, so you can return to complete optional quests at your discretion.

Minor Locations

[SC1.A] Path of Souls

This winding pathway stretches out in a northeasterly direction, all the way to the Boneyard in Parish 2. The start of it has a baleful, ghostly figure standing on either side, among the dirt and stones. Speak to them and listen to their confused cries if you wish.

[SC1.B] The Black Chapel

Related Quest: Side Quest: Impatience of a Saint

The first charcoal structure you'll come across is this chapel, with tattered banners flapping and a mournful soul standing at the bottom of the steps. Shoot an arrow into each turquoise orb so the bars at the chapel entrance recede. Then head inside, looking for one of Jiub's pages, as well as the following:

- ◆ Chest
- ◆ Loose gear
- ◆ Jiub's Opus (Page 8) [1/10]

[SC1.C] Mournful Soul

Farther along the Path of Souls, you'll periodically encounter more trapped souls that are expressing sorrow, anger, and bewilderment. There are many scattered throughout the Cairn; speak to any you wish, but from this point on, the important ones are flagged. The two sitting on the side of the road are of no help to your cause.

[SC1.D] The Black Church

Related Quest: Side Quest: Impatience of a Saint

This ornate structure houses a Boneman on the ground, guarding a chest with another of Jiub's pages. Outside is a small, circular pool of light. Step into it, and you're whisked to the rooftop. Step around the grating (so you don't fall through) and claim a book and items from a second chest.

- ◆ Chest (2)
- ◆ Jiub's Opus (Page 6) [2/10]
- ◆ Teleporter [1/9]

NOTE This is the first teleporter you may find in the Soul Cairn. All are flagged on the main map and are listed throughout.

[SC1.E] Arvak's Rider

Related Regional Activity: Arvak the Spectral Steed

The soul standing ankle-deep in the mist along this part of the pathway pleads with you to find his horse, Arvak. This steed is frightened, loyal, and must be rescued. Agree to help to begin the quest.

[SC1.F] The Barrier Wall

Bisecting the Parishes of the Soul Cairn is a giant black wall constructed by unknown hands. The steps and gap here is the only way through to the larger expanse of land beyond.

[SC1.G] The Black Gatehouse

This structure protrudes from an area of the Barrier Wall and provides an entrance to the small, self-contained area where the Crystal Folly stands. Pry open the chest along the way.

- ◆ Chest

[SC1.H] The Crystal Folly

Related Quest: Side Quest: Impatience of a Saint

Guarded by Bonemen, this small hillock has a folly to the Ideal Masters built on it. Deal with the bony foes before you close in, as the giant crystal floating above the chest atop the structure severely damages your energy. One of Jiub's pages is up here too.

- ◆ Chest
- ◆ Ideal Master Crystal [1/8]
- ◆ Jiub's Opus (Page 3) [3/10]

[SC1.I] Steps of the Barrier Wall (South)

Related Quest: Side Quest: Impatience of a Saint

Farther along the Barrier Wall to the east is a set of steps to a lost soul waiting near a book, a potion, and another of Jiub's pages. Through the window, you'll see a chest, on the north side. You can reach it only by trekking around to the wall's other side.

- ◆ Jiub's Opus (Page 1) [4/10]

[SC1.J] Totem to the Ideal Masters

A pile of bones arranged to form a strange totem is found among the gnarled trees here. Take the Black Soul Gem if you wish (there are three Bonemen to face if you do).

- ◆ Black Soul Gem

[SC1.K] Heaven's Arc Point

This stone pavement holds a strange altarlike collection of stones in its middle. Nearby is a Greater Soul Gem. Pick it up and place it in the receptacle of the Lightning Attractor. A crackle of lightning and a clap of thunder echo through the Cairn, transforming the gem into a Black Soul Gem. You'll find a Soul Husk here too (these aren't listed but can be collected for the quests listed previously).

- ◆ Greater Soul Gem
- ◆ Lightning Attractor [1/4]
- ◆ Soul Husk

[SC1.L] The Black Sanctuary

A set of half-buried stairs leads up to a teleporter. Check the ground level of the sanctuary structure first (there are Soul Gems among the skeletal rubble). You may wish to attack the Boneman patrolling the roof with a long-range attack, as the teleporter transports you there, to a chest and combat with a Wrathman.

- ◆ Chest
- ◆ Teleporter [2/9]

[SC1.M] The Black Monastery

This sizable structure dominates the southern part of the Cairn. Below the imposing tower is an interior courtyard with a wretched soul and steps to the roof area. Work your way around, past another prone soul, then head down the steps to the southwest and go to the tower. Fight fatigue from an Ideal Master Crystal, above a third soul and a chest.

- ◆ Chest
- ◆ Ideal Master Crystal [2/8]

TIP You can try using Whirlwind Sprint (Shout) or your Bats (Vampire Lord) powers to dash through the gap to the tower from the upper promontory.

Parish 2: The Cemetery

A large part of the Soul Cairn is given over to the countless piles of bones that have accumulated here throughout the centuries. These piles are everywhere, as are the wandering souls of the banished. This area is dominated by a cluster of large buildings to the northwest, where a Keeper lurks. However, to the north is the largest structure of all: the Boneyard where Valerica is imprisoned.

Trapped behind a barrier of energy, Valerica spends her time perfecting her alchemy and staving off the madness of loneliness. She is a font of knowledge about this place; speak to her if you want to learn more about her life, the Ideal Masters, and the origins of the Soul Cairn.

- ◆ Alchemy Lab

Boneyard (Interior)

The interior of the Boneyard is accessible only after all the Keepers have released their grip on Valerica, as part of the quest. Once inside, you face a troublesome dragon named Durnehviir, along with several Bonemen called upon by the Ideal Masters.

A Exit to Soul Cairn

1 Boneyard Arena

The battle begins here. Note the five clusters of standing stones around the arena, where four Bonemen (or other foes) are summoned during combat. Deal with them and the dragon.

2 Dragon Perch

Durnehviir begins his attack from this launching point. You can use the steps on either side to reach cover (away from the Bonemen) if combat isn't going your way.

3 Outer Battlements

Surrounding the boneyard (on all five sides) are steps to the upper battlements, where you are afforded some cover. Move up here if the battle in the arena is too hectic.

4 Valerica's Alcove

Between the steps to the arena's east is an alcove where Valerica stores her most precious items. Aside from the books and potions, there is a case containing the most valuable item of all: an Elder Scroll!

[SC2.2] Keeper 1: Tabernacle of the Ideal Masters

Related Quest: Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death

This sprawling structure is perhaps the largest outside of the Boneyard. Flanked by two adjoining wings, you can approach from the southeast (heading northwest) after navigating the cemetery, or move through the many gaps around the sides and rear of the structure. This is important, as a Keeper resides here, so cautious maneuvering is advisable.

To the northeast is a sunken courtyard with a teleporter that transports you to the roof. Here you find a Lightning Attractor (and a three-strong Boneman ambush) and a chest. To the southwest is a barred gate (to open it, fire at the two turquoise orbs above and to the right of the gate from the interior courtyard near the Keeper).

leading to an exterior foundation area, where two Bonemen guard a chest and an Ideal Master Crystal. Finally, don't forget the teleporter to the northwest among the standing stones: It transports you to a section of roof you can't otherwise reach. Here, you'll find the skeletal remains of an adventurer, along with his gear and potions (and a Boneman to surprise you).

The Keeper sits on a massive throne in a large courtyard in the middle of this place. However, there are plenty of hiding places among the various pillars and structures surrounding him. Or you can attack and use the space provided by the courtyard to avoid his incredibly damaging weapon swings. Defeat the Keeper, claiming a Black Soul Gem (Grand) from the dust he leaves behind.

◇ [SC2.A] Black Gatehouse 1

Located on the Soul Path, with a damned spirit waiting at one of the entrances, this provides a landmark and cover as you explore.

◇ [SC2.B] Black Gatehouse 2

This empty gatehouse has a pointed roof. Pass through it on the Soul Path, using it as a visual marker.

◇ [SC2.C] Lost Structure

The unofficial "center" of the Soul Cairn, souls were placed here, at these crossroads, so they couldn't return to seek revenge on their captors. Now only the foundations and a few bone piles remain. Use this to situate yourself, as all the major roads lead from here.

◇ [SC2.D] Black Gatehouse 3

Located at the foot of the hill on which the Boneyard is situated, you begin your climb up the hill from here. Watch for a few Bonemen to rise up and attack from the bones scattered near the structure to the south.

◇ [SC2.E] Durnehviir's Rooftop Perch

Related Side Quest: Durnehviir

An enslaved dragon named Durnehviir stops you as you exit the Boneyard. Listen to what he says, and agree to his requests.

- ◇ Word of Power: Curse, Summon Durnehviir
- ◇ Word of Power: Dying, Summon Durnehviir
- ◇ Word of Power: Never, Summon Durnehviir

◇ [SC2.F] The Black Folly

Related Quest: Side Quest: Impatience of a Saint

The occasional home of the enslaved dragon Durnehviir, this area has several crenellations and stairs to explore, but none lead to anything valuable. In fact, the only area of note is a partially destroyed Word Wall (that grants no Words of Power) that Durnehviir sometimes sits on. Below it, you'll find the following in the ankle-deep mist:

- ◇ Chest
- ◇ Jiub's Opus (Page 2) [5/10]
- ◇ Lots o' Gold

◇ [SC2.G] Black Gatehouse 4

Don't confuse this with Location SC2.D, as the pathway this gatehouse marks takes you toward the second Keeper and into the main cemetery area.

◇ [SC2.H] The Black Bethel

The reward for exploring this dangerous location is a chest guarded by the only Ideal Master Crystal hidden inside a structure. Heading north, approach from the south, past the two columns, and use the subterranean stairs and short tunnel for a fight with two Bonemen; then head inside. Or, clamber in from ground level, ignoring the tunnel. Alternatively, approach from the north (heading south), using your Bats (Vampire Lord) or Whirlwind Sprint (Shout) power to dash across the gap between the stone step slabs and the windowed interior.

- ◇ Chest
- ◇ Ideal Master Crystal [3/8]

◆ [SC2.I] The Dark Battlements (Main)

If you're using the rudimentary pathway in your exploration, the entrance to the cemetery is via this ruined entrance, now merely half-sunk battlements silent in the stale air. Enter from either the north or south, moving quickly to step out of the Ideal Master Crystal's range. Engage the Boneman and Wrathmen that rise on the main platform. Remove the bars in the small spire that holds a soul and a chest by firing an arrow or bolt at both of the turquoise orbs (one above the bars, the other half hidden in an inaccessible alcove in the south corner of the platform).

◆ Chest

◆ Ideal Master Crystal [4/8]

◆ [SC2.J] The Dark Battlements (Skeleton and Soul)

The edge of the battlements holds a soul watching over sprawled skeletal remains and a coin purse.

◆ [SC2.K] The Dark Battlements (Wandering Soul)

If you speak to it, a soul babbles incoherently. It lives out eternity by wandering close to the battlements.

◆ [SC2.L] The Black Mausoleum

A larger, tall structure close to the cemetery, this place coaxes you in with a barred entrance at the top of some steps, which can be removed by firing at the two turquoise orbs within the structure (or you can leap onto the soul pool and circumvent it entirely). The interior has nothing of value, except for a Boneman battle. But unlike the restless souls, only a moment of your time has been wasted.

◆ [SC2.M] The Cemetery Gatehouse 1

One of five gatehouses that surround the cemetery. This is close to the rocky perimeter of the Soul Cairn, to the southwest.

◆ [SC2.N] The Cemetery Gatehouse 2

The second gatehouse offers a path toward the domain of the second Keeper.

◆ [SC2.O] The Cemetery Altar

◆ [SC2.S] The Black Minster

Along the northern edge of this Parish is an ominous maze with an Ideal Master Crystal visible from the perimeter. A quick walk around this place reveals only one entrance, close to a barred section. Keep your wits about you as you work your way through the short maze, pausing to slay any Wrathmen that clamber out of bony piles. There's a chest in the southwest corner and a foe to face in the dead-end passage to the west.

Pass the Daedra Heart and Soul Husks to reach the middle thoroughfare, then head south and east into the second part of the maze. Follow the corridor until you notice a sack to the east. Then check that corridor for a chest to the south, along with a foe guarding a chest and a book. Find the next enemy near a teleporter. This transports you directly up onto the battlements. From here, sprint to the chest guarded by the Crystal and take another of Jiub's pages lying by the foot of the chest.

◆ Parish 3: The Blasted Heath

A mist-filled twisting path cuts more scars through this parched and rancid land, where the remnants of forgotten buildings and the spirits of malevolent foes still linger. A shriveled forest dominated by a Keeper's spire gives way to more rocky ground and a collection of imposing structures to the northeast, dominated by a floating spire where the third Keeper watches over this realm.

◆ Major Locations

◆ [SC3.1] Keeper 2: The Shriveled Forest

Related Quest: Dawnguard Main Quest: Beyond Death

Fight through the low hills of scrub and deal with any Wrathmen that appear along the path leading to this location, an imposing spire slowly sinking into the shriveled forest. There are a few structures to hide behind, and the Keeper is visible at a good distance; this is helpful for ranged attacks.

The final Keeper resides in an ominous floating citadel offering the most impressive views and deadly plummets available in the Soul Cairn. Expect Boneman and Wrathman combat as you reach a teleporter under the hovering rock; this is the only way up to it. Climb the spire counterclockwise, and face down the third Keeper, who carries a bow that can drop you with a single arrow. Time ranged attacks to strike before the Keeper can fire his bow, or use the scenery as protection. The teleporter to return to the ground is on the uppermost ledge.

This is a smaller but imposing structure close to the two gatehouses in Parish 2. Access the barred entrance to an interior with a chest by firing an arrow or bolt at the turquoise orbs set into the building on either side. Next, climb the exterior steps to the south, leading to a teleporter up onto the roof. It is empty, but you can drop to the lower roof on the northern side and claim items from a second chest.

- ◆ Chest [2]
- ◆ Teleporter [7/9]

◆ [SC3.D] Heaven's Wand Point

- ◆ Lightning Attractor [3/4]

◆ [SC3.E] The Keeper's Chapel

East along the path, past a giant unnatural pillar, is a cluster of three buildings near location [SC3.1], the Shriveled Forest. Dominated by the second Keeper's domain, this side building holds little value, except as a place to hide or snipe from when fighting the Keeper.

Topographical Overview

Thousands of years before the events in Skryim, this valley was the nexus of the Snow Elves' religious practices, which centered around the worship of Auri-El (also known as Auriel, or Akatosh among men). They called this place "the Great Chantry of Auri-El." It was here that the Snow Elves believed one could reach such a level of enlightenment they could "become one with Auri-El." The vale featured a mighty temple dedicated to their god and was dotted with small structures known as Wayshrines, which pilgrims would visit during their search for enlightenment. The entire vale was ruled by the Arch-Curate Vyrthur, assisted by his Prelates and Paladins.

Prospective pilgrims and those seeking enlightenment began their journey by being given an empty ornate vessel called the Initiate's Ewer and told to visit a shrine, learn the mantras, and then add some of the pure water from the shrine's font to that vessel. Once the vessel was full, it was carried to the temple, and the initiate would pour the water into a basin, representing that they had reached a level of enlightenment worthy enough to enter.

For the purpose of this guide, the Forgotten Vale is divided into six areas. The boundary lines are invisible and don't show up during your adventure; they have been created to aid you in locating the many secrets and hidden remains that the Forgotten Vales shrouds. Here's what to look for:

3.2 Major Location: This is an area of the Forgotten Vale that is critically important to investigate as part of Dawnguard Main Quest: Touching the Sky. These are larger-scale locations and usually house an impressive revelation.

3.A Minor Location: A section of the Forgotten Vale that is optional to investigate. These may be as simple as waypoints to use as landmarks or buildings containing one or more of the many secrets that the Forgotten Vale holds.

In addition to flagged locations, the following areas and items are shown on the map (along with the number available):

Paragons (5): The location of a Frost Giant. Each Giant holds one of the fabled Snow Elf Paragon Stones, which you collect and use during Regional Activity: Paragons of the Frost Giants.

Unknown Books (4): The location of a book written in the ancient Falmer tongue. As part of Regional Activity: Ancient Falmer Tomes, you can take these books to the archivist at the College of Winterhold, Urag, who will buy them from you for a sizable sum and give you a translated copy as well.

In addition to the enemies you encounter and collectibles you can find, there are a couple of other items of interest:

Gleamblossom: This herb is potent when used in Alchemy. The Forgotten Vale has numerous clumps of this plant. Seek information on the properties of the Gleamblossom on page 147.

Shellbugs: Hidden inside the two Falmer Caves, giant docile Shellbugs (usually guarded by smaller hostile Falmers or their Chaurus pets) can be mined for their Shellbug Chitin if you have a pickaxe. You can then use the Chitin to construct the unique Shellbug Helmet. See page 81 for more information.

Area 1: Hidden Vale

Your first glimpse of the Forgotten Vale occurs after ascending a pit from Darkfall Passage. A misty glen to be sure, this area has strange wildlife, some common Falmer, and a Wayshrine off the beaten path. Once your ewer is filled with water for a second time, you will need to find a narrow, spider-infested crag where the true majesty of the Forgotten Vale is soon revealed.

Major Locations

[FV1.1] Portal to Darkfall Passage, and Cave Entrance

Related Quest: Dawnguard Main Quest: Touching the Sky

A portal back to Darkfall Passage is accessible here. Unless you wish to retrace your steps, follow the narrow cave tunnel as it winds to a curved ledge ascending the rocky pit you started in. Climb out of the rocks and into open air, and take in your first view of the Forgotten Vale.

[FV1.2] Wayshrine of Sight

Related Quest: Dawnguard Main Quest: Touching the Sky
Prelate Athring

Prelate Athring welcomes you to this Wayshrine (the second of the five to find), where you fill your ewer and continue your pilgrimage. Eventually, you can teleport to five locations from here, depending on the other Wayshrines you have opened. Here's where you can journey to:

- ◆ Darkfall Passage
- ◆ Shrine of Learning
- ◆ Shrine of Radiance
- ◆ Shrine of Resolution
- ◆ Temple Balcony
- ◆ Wayshrine [2/5]

Minor Locations

[FV1.A] Forgotten Vale: Pilgrim's Path

After centuries of neglect, only a few fragments of Snow Elf masonry remains, forming a faint path northwest through the Vale. Watch for Vale Sabre Cats attacking from the sides as you head through the arch and up the steps.

[FV1.B] Vale Sabre Cat Lair

Above the frozen pond along the rocky outcrops on the Vale's eastern side is a shallow cave with a Vale Sabre Cat watching your progress, ready to pounce. Just beyond is a small vein of silver.

- ◆ Silver Ore Vein

[FV1.C] Frost Troll Den

Clamber up a steep rise to the southwest to engage a Frost Troll, the blood of his last Vale Deer meal still smattering his lips. He's standing near a Silver Ore Vein (and a collection of carcasses).

- ◆ Silver Ore Vein

[FV1.D] Southwest Vale Scar

You may wish to maneuver along the ridge above the Vale floor to negate a Vale Sabre Cat ambush. If you do, bring a pickaxe with you:

- ◆ Silver Ore Vein (2)
- ◆ Gold Ore Vein

[FV1.E] Forgotten Vale Cave

Expect a brief battle with a Falmer on the glade slope outside this cave entrance. Once inside, navigate past the bone trap that alerts the Chaurus in the pen, and slay them. Head to the back of the cave, pausing to step onto the deck and pull a rope release. This reveals a hidden chamber in the back (west) wall of the hatchery. Then tackle any additional hunters before investigating the cave. Mine Shellbug Chitin from the rotund Shellbug mass back here.

- ◆ Danger: Bone Trap
- ◆ Shellbug Chitin

[FV1.F] Pilgrim's Path: Frostbite Spider Attack

To progress deeper into the Vale, you must head through the narrow gorge to the west. Prepare for a few Frostbite Spiders, followed by a larger one. Check the desiccated corpses as you go for a little loot.

- ◆ Gold Ore Vein

Area 2: Snow Lake and Frozen Lake

The main area of the Vale consists of two bodies of water: an upper Frozen Lake where two dragons may lurk and a lower Snow Lake that has more free-flowing water and two ferocious Frost Giants. Explore as much or as little of this area as you wish, but be sure to enter both Wayshrines en route to the fissure to the north.

Minor Locations

[FV2.A] Snow Lake Entrance: The Sprawled Skeleton

Related Regional Activity: Ancient Falmer Tomes*

Head south down the slope toward the water's edge. Between three ruined pillars is a skeleton sprawled across a chest. Just out of its reach is a tome written in an ancient language, one of four Falmer texts you can collect.

- ◇ Chest
- ◇ Unknown Book, Vol. I [1/4]

[FV2.B] Ice Falls Alcove (North)

Across the southwestern side of the Snow Lake, below the partly frozen falls, is an alcove where a skeleton lies close to a chest [Novice] and a satchel. Watch for an Ice Wraith attack as you emerge on the lake bank. Then check farther along the bank for a Malachite Ore Vein.

- ◇ Chest (2)
- ◇ Malachite Ore Vein

[FV2.C] Ice Falls Alcove (South)

On the opposite bank of the Snow Lake from the Wayshrine of Learning is a skeleton slumped on a rock. A satchel and chest [Apprentice] are nearby. Beware of an Ice Wraith attack after you inspect it. Then check farther northwest for a Malachite Ore Vein.

- ◇ Chest (2)
- ◇ Malachite Ore Vein
- ◇ Loose gear

[FV2.D] Waterfall to Darkfall Grotto

Related Regional Activity: Paragons of the Frost Giants*

At the southern end of Snow Lake, the lake plunges into a terrifying maw. Fall into the hole, and you plummet past a Paragon Portal exit (where you teleport to if you enter the Paragon Portal using the Amethyst Paragon), and land in the water below. On the right bank is a Falmer camp with Feral Falmers, driven mad in this tiny cleft between the Vale and Grotto.

Follow the river (by letting the current take you), choosing either of the small river tunnels as they both spit you out into a second, lower river tunnel that drops you out over the main Darkfall Grotto area [Location [DG.11]], close to where you found the first Wayshrine.

- ◇ Chest (3)

Amethyst Paragon Portal: Step out onto the tall stalagmite island and claim a potion and items from a chest.

- ◇ Chest

[FV2.E] Snow Path to Frozen Lake

A steep path up through the rocks is the quickest way to reach the Frozen Lake from the south. Step through the archway at the top.

- ◇ Malachite Ore Vein

◀ [FV2.F] Snowbound Skeletons

Two skeletons are half-buried in the snow, close to the arch. The potions are usually helpful if the lake dragons are readying their attacks.

- ◊ Loose gear
- ◊ Potions

◀ [FV2.G] Emerald Paragon Portal

Related Regional Activity: Paragons of the Frost Giants*

If you use the Emerald Paragon at the portal, you emerge at the highest point in Forgotten Vale—a rushing river tumbling from a waterfall.

◀ [FV2.H] Forgotten Vale Overlook: Vista

Related Regional Activity: Paragons of the Frost Giants*

Follow the river downstream from the portal to the edge of a second waterfall that plunges into the Frozen Lake. From the vista, you can check out the temple balcony of Auriel's Chapel. Look east to a small pillar ruin with a skeleton and the following:

- ◊ Chest
- ◊ Loose Gear
- ◊ Unknown Book, Vol. II [2/4]

◀ [FV2.I] Waterfall Chest

At the base of the second waterfall from the Overlook is a hole in the ice. Plunge into the icy lake and search for a submerged chest.

Far below the temple balcony, and periodically dotted around the edge of the lake, are a number of ore veins to mine.

- ◊ Malachite Ore Vein

◀ [FV2.K] Lake Bed: The Heavy Chest

A swim along the base of the lake reveals that this area may have been dry land at one point; numerous Snow Elf ruins from the old pilgrim path are dotted throughout. Check this area in particular for a skeleton, crushed beneath a chest.

- ◊ Chest

◀ [FV2.L] The Frozen Lake

Related Main Quest: Dragon Rising

The Frozen Lake is sometimes quiet and serene. However, if you've completed Main Quest:

Dragon Rising, two dragons—Naaslaarum and Voslaarum—burst up through the lake and begin their attack, dive-bombing the ice only to emerge from it a moment later! This combat is tricky, as you have two dragons to face, but it is otherwise the same as your previous experience defeating them (aside from the limited locations you can hide in).

- ◊ Dragon Soul [2]

NOTE These two dragons appear only if you've defeated your first dragon during Main Quest: Dragon Rising.

TIP Having problems avoiding these two monstrous flying fiends? You can always avoid their attacks by diving into the lake water and hiding while your Stamina, Health, or Magicka replenish.

◀ [FV2.M] Word Wall: Frozen Lake

Perched on the edge of a lake is a carved rock with a single Word of Power set into it. Learn the Word, then search the skeletal remains for the following:

- ◊ Chest
- ◊ Potions
- ◊ Word of Power: Drain Vitality [DG1/3]

◀ [FV2.N] Pilgrim's Path: Frozen Lake

At the north end of the Frozen Lake, the pilgrim's path begins again. Follow the rudimentary path under the arch, toward Area 3. At the start is a skeleton under the arch.

- ◊ Potions

TIP Stop! There is a significant shortcut that circumvents almost all of Area 3, if you don't wish to traverse Forgotten Vale Fissure. Simply climb the hill, following the guide map over a ridge to Location [3.0]: Frozen Lake Ridge (Shortcut), and then down to the Glacial Crevice entrance! However, you'll miss out on the cave that has the Shellbug in it!

[FV2.O] Frost Giant Lair (Lower Lake)

Related Regional Activity: Paragons of the Frost Giants*

The lake's northwest end has a waterfall with a Frost Giant close to it, in a shallow cave. There's a snowy path northwest of here. Defeat the giant, then claim the following from its corpse.

◇ Unique Item: Amethyst Paragon [1/5]

[FV2.P] Frost Giant Lair (Paragon Portal Platform)

Related Regional Activity: Paragons of the Frost Giants*

Located at a shallow cave close to the rushing river above the Snow Lake waterfall. Take the Paragon from its body.

◇ Unique Item: Sapphire Paragon [2/5]

[FV2.Q] Paragon Portal Platform

Related Regional Activity: Paragons of the Frost Giants*

This arch connects you to five other locations within the Forgotten Vale, allowing you to visit otherwise-inaccessible areas. Provided you have a Paragon (taken from each of the five Frost Giants), you can insert one into the socket, activate the Paragon Portal, and step through to the following locations:

✓	PARAGON	LOCATION

<input type="checkbox"/>	Ruby	[FV6.A] Forgotten Vale Forest (Paragon Portal)

[FV2.R] Natural Bridge to Forgotten Vale Fissure

Enter Area 3 by crossing this natural rock bridge, then begin your trek through a large and twisting series of ledges and bridges all the way to the Glacial Crevice.

[FV2.S] Area 3: Forgotten Vale Fissure and Glacial Crevice

Once you've explored the lake, you can make your way toward the lengthy and dangerous fissure, carved by the fast-flowing river. Here, you'll encounter numerous Falmer, cross bridges, and follow narrow ledges until you reach the Glacial Crevice (the Major Location, listed after the Minor ones in this case). You will traverse even more ledges until you reach the other side of the Forgotten Vale.

NOTE The Glacial Crevice is Area 3's only major location. You enter this location after traversing through all of the minor locations. Look for the Glacial Crevice Interior map after the minor locations of Area 3.

Minor Locations

[FV3.A] Fissure Ledges

Cross from Area 2 and head down the ledge, the first of many you'll navigate on your journey to the Glacial Crevice.

[FV3.B] Falmer Camp (River)

Down at the river is a small Falmer camp with two huts. From here you can head along the river, or travel up through the gate, toward the next natural bridge.

◇ Potions

[FV3.C] Falmer Camp and Graveyard

Atop the short, steep path is another hut, with a chest in it. Above that is a small Falmer graveyard with a few weapons to scavenge.

◇ Chest ◇ Loose gear

The real expedition into the fissure begins now, as Falmer on the upper rock islands can see and fire down at you. Cross this bridge to begin your journey.

◇ Loose gear

◇ [FV3.E] Path Ascent and Mining Remains

Continue up the natural ledges and bridges toward the entrance to Shardslope Cave. Below it are skeletal remains, some Rock Warbler Eggs in a basket, and gold to grab.

- ◇ Gold Ore Vein and Gold Ore (2)
- ◇ Loose gear
- ◇ Lots o' Gold!

◇ [FV3.F] Shardslope Cave Entrance (Upper)

This connects to Location [3.G] via the Shardslope Cave. This area is optional and leads to a large hole with a Falmer tower in the middle of it and a curved path that leads to a small cave camp with a hut and Falmer and Chaurus to face before exiting at Location [3.G]. However, halfway down the curved tower path is an easily missed opening in the perimeter wall. Step through into a side chamber with a Shellbug to mine.

- ◇ Chest
- ◇ Shellbug Chitin

◇ [FV3.G] Shardslope Cave Entrance (River)

This entrance to the cave is located close to the river rapids, where a number of Chaurus Hunters may hatch. You can also force your way up the river (south) and ignore the upper fissure area entirely.

- ◇ Orichalcum Ore Vein (3)

◇ [FV3.H] Steep Slope

After crossing the Falmer bridge, check the hut (with potions inside) before ascending the steep rock path, past a chest.

- ◇ Chest
- ◇ Potions

◇ [FV3.I] Frost Giant Lair: Falmer Cliffs

Related Regional Activity: Paragon of the Frost Giants*

At the top of the steep rocky path is a circular path to the right (south) that leads counterclockwise past the shallow cave with the third Frost Giant to tackle. Watch your step, as this path is precarious! If you wish, you can climb atop the mountain the curved platform is fixed to and attack from range.

- ◇ Chest
- ◇ Unique Item: Emerald Paragon [3/5]

◇ [FV3.J] Falmer Village: Rock Island (North)

A lone hut (usually with a shaman) is at the end of the natural bridge. Nearby is a Falmer bridge to the south.

- ◇ Chest
- ◇ Loose gear

◇ [FV3.K] Falmer Village: Rock Island (South)

The collection of huts continues at the south end of the Falmer bridge. There are two huts (and a troll skull with gems above it on a high rock). After navigating the next Falmer bridge, there is a third hut and pen directly underneath. As always, Falmer are here to be thwarted.

- ◇ Loose gear
- ◇ Lots o' Gold

◇ [FV3.L] Natural Bridges

The last part of the fissure consists of natural stone bridges down to the river level. Expect more Falmer trouble as you descend.

◇ [FV3.M] Falmer Hut, Dead-End Ledge

Related Regional Activity: Ancient Falmer Tomes*

Head across the two bridges (one natural, one made by the Falmer) to a hut with a mammoth skull on it. There's an Unknown Book to collect on the table, near some potions.

- ◇ Unique Item: Unknown Book, Vol. III [3/4]

◊ [FV3.N] Fledgling Nest and River Rapids (River)

Below the final part of the pathway throughout the fissure is an optional area to investigate or to reach if you've slogged along the riverbed instead. Expect Chaurus Hunters to hatch and attack close to the rapids.

◊ [FV3.O] Frozen Lake Ridge (Shortcut)

To circumvent almost this entire area, use this snowy slope to a ridge overlooking the Frozen Lake, if approached from the lake. Along the way, you can mine some Moonstone Ore.

◊ Moonstone Ore Vein (3)

◊ [FV3.P] Entrance to Glacial Crevice

At the end of this exterior fissure, step into the river and fight two Falmer before heading through the open gate and into Area 4: Falmer Fissure (which is inside the mountain you're entering). The Forgotten Vale exterior continues on the other side of the Crevice.

◊ [3.1] Glacial Crevice (Interior)

A glacial crevice formed during tens of thousands of years of water flow from the high peaks of the Haafingar Mountains, this area is now populated by Falmer and provides a critical path between two of the areas of Forgotten Vale.

SOLSTHEIM: NORTHERN MOUNTAINS

TOPOGRAPHICAL OVERVIEW

In some ways, the northern climbs of Solstheim are slightly more hospitable than the southern wastes, since the ash storms do not reach them. Instead, adventurers are left to traverse rocky and snow-swept landscapes, with more scree and dirt along the coastline. Farther inland, there are soaring peaks and a grand temple to the new usurper of this realm, and farther north still is a large glacier field, within which an ancient castle to a long-dead frost giant still stands. Rieklings dominate many of the locations up here, but the Skaal people also call this home; their village is set amid the frozen peaks to the northeast. Finally, a number of islands, unmarked to the regular traveler, offer danger and treasure to those wishing to swim through the Sea of Ghosts to reach them.

Routes and Pathways

With no roads to find, you must rely on goat trails and the gaps between rocky ridges when maneuvering around the northern parts of Solstheim. It's helpful to work your way around the coast, perhaps starting at Bujold's Retreat and moving counterclockwise from there. Split the area into more manageable chunks: The far north offers treacherous movement over glaciers and a rugged coast with iceberg and rock islands. Farther inland are the high peaks and familiar barrow arches of Nordic crypts. Then there's the massive circular Temple of Miraak, where the bones of dragons rest and your main quest begins.

Lore: Settlement Overview

Skaal village is located in the Felsaad Coast region of Solstheim, north of Thirsk Mead Hall. The origin of the Skaal has been lost to the passage of time. Who founded this village, and why? What clues exist that might shed light on their history? And can this lost legacy provide insight into the events that are currently troubling Solstheim? These questions have been weighing heavily on the mind of Tharstan, a visiting scholar. He's always had a great passion for history, and the mystery of the village's origins is one he would very much like to solve.

There is no real economy in Skaal Village, as money is of little value to the self-sufficient Skaal. Hunting is the main source of sustenance for most; the Horkers on the northern coast and nearby Lake Fjalding are relatively easy and lucrative prey. More adventurous Skaal hunters go after the elusive Snow Wolf or Snow Bear, whose pelts are valued highly among them. The Skaal are skilled foresters as well, which makes sense since their village is surrounded by firs. A steady supply of firewood can mean the difference between life and death for these determined villagers.

Years of relative peace and prosperity for the Skaal have been shattered by the loss of most of the tribe to some unknown dark magic. At the last moment, the village shaman, Storn Crag-Strider, was able to shield the remaining few of his people from this spell, but it is taking all of his concentration and he can't keep it up forever.

Most of the town's population has been enslaved, and many are helping to build a strange arched shrine around the Wind Stone to the northwest of town. Free these villagers and they head back to the locations listed below. Consult the Dragonborn Main Quest: The Fate of the Skaal for further information. You cannot fully interact with the Skaal until you've befriended them.

This is where Storn, Finna, and Nikulas remain on their knees, attempting to hold back Miraak's foul magic and keeping the minion of Hermaeus Mora from completing his subjugation of Solstheim.

2 Greathall

Fanari Strong-Voice

Ever since she was a child, Fanari has possessed a singular focus, always knowing what she wanted and doing whatever it took to get it. Seeing Fanari's determination to be the best hunter in the village, Wulf Wild-Blood was touched. He decided to take the young Nord woman under his wing, and with Wulf's guidance, Fanari eventually became a superb hunter. As she grew older, Fanari decided that she needed a new goal and she set her sights on becoming the village elder. She achieved this while still in her thirties, a remarkable feat for any of the Skaal. Her loyalty to the villagers, her fearless and unflappable nature, and a good dose of just being tired of hearing her go on about how she was meant to be the elder caused the other Skaal to name her as chieftain.

Tharstan

Tharstan is a visiting historian who has come to live with the Skaal in order to write a book about their culture and heritage. He now resides in a guest room in the village Greathall.

Tharstan spends most of his days reading and writing in the Greathall and will be happy to talk to you about his research into the history of the Skaal.

This large lodge-style building serves as a gathering place for the villagers. It has traditionally also been the dwelling place of the village elder and his or her family. The current village elder is Fanari Strong-Voice, who succeeded Skaf the Giant in that role less than three years ago following Skaf's passing. Outspoken and opinionated, Fanari lets everyone around her know what she's feeling. However, her devotion to the villagers and her keen mind have made her a fine elder. She is also an expert hunter who has spent several years training under the tutelage of Wulf Wild-Blood.

Also living in the Greathall as a guest of the village is the visiting historian Tharstan, an enthusiastic scholar who has a great love for history and lore. All his life, he has been intrigued by the mysteries of Solstheim, and he has already written one volume about the island. He is living in Skaal Village mainly to study its people and learn about their history and culture.

The interior of the Greathall features a warm hearth with a cooking pot, various books of Tharstan's, and two sets of steps to a balcony bedroom, where Fanari keeps a small collection of pearls in a display case [Apprentice].

3 Shaman's Hut

Storn Crag-Strider

Storn is the Skaal Shaman, the spiritual advisor to the tribe. Stoic and patient, the Skaal look to him in times of difficulty for guidance and comfort.

He communes with the land and calls upon the All-Maker, the creator and sustainer of all things, to protect his people. Storn's daughter Freia has been groomed since childhood to succeed him as Shaman. Now in her early twenties, she is quietly rebelling against the idea. Storn believes this will pass and tries to maintain the calm that has served him so well over many years to wait until Freia realizes what she's truly meant for.

Freia

Freia is the daughter of Storn Crag-Strider, and she is conflicted about her future. Her father expects that she'll someday take his place as the village Shaman, but she's an accomplished warrior and hunter and thinks she might be chief material instead. You first meet Freia at the Temple of Miraak.

Storn, the village Shaman, makes his home here along with his daughter, Freia. One of the persistent mysteries of Skaal village is the identity of Freia's mother. Twenty-five years ago, before becoming the village Shaman, Storn set out to learn the ways of the world. When he returned five years later, he brought with him a four-year-old girl whom he introduced as his daughter, Freia. Storn refuses to speak about Freia's mother to anyone, including Freia. This has caused a rift between the two that prevents them from ever being truly close, but Storn has been a dutiful and loving father otherwise, so Freia cannot stay angry with him for long.

The house is decorated with pelts, various plants, herbs, and other shamanistic totems, as well as an Arcane Enchanter and an alchemy table. Tinkering with the creation of potions is one of Storn's hobbies.

SKYRIM

ATLAS OF SKYRIM: SOLSTHEIM: NORTHERN MOUNTAINS

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Baldor works the forge in Skaal village. He's a tough, hard-nosed, no-nonsense man who values hard work, honesty, and the weight of solid iron. He takes pride in his craft and will be quick to say so to anyone who will listen. The one thing Baldor wants most in life is to reclaim the lost art of forging Stalhrim. He knows how to do so, but he lacks the material itself.

Baldor Iron-Shaper lives in a modest house near the village center. He lives alone, having never married. Outside is his fine forge, where he can craft Stalhrim weapons and armor and Ancient Nordic Pickaxes. Inside, his house is usually locked [Adept] and features some displayed weapons, ore, a chest, cooking pot, and some ingots and more weapons upstairs.

NOTE After the Skaal become friendly, Baldor isn't at his forge, and it falls to you to find him. Consult Solstheim Side Quest: A New Source of Stalhrim (page 633) for more information.

5 Deor Woodcutter's House

Deor Woodcutter

Deor is an unremarkable man, simple-minded and direct. He is, in many ways, the prototypical Skaal villager: He gets early up in the morning, works hard all day, eats a spare meal, and then sleeps through the night. He expects to spend all the rest of his days doing just that until he returns to the All-maker.

Yrsa

Yrsa is one of the younger women in Skaal Village. She is friendly and polite and likes baking. She is married to Deor and hopes they will soon have children, if she can get Deor to agree to it.

Deor and Yrsa are the youngest couple living in Skaal village. They have been married for eight years. Both are typical Skaal villagers, hard-working and self-sufficient. Their home is meager but well constructed, given Deor's supreme skills in the crafting of wood. Inside their house are the rough essentials for life: food, a cooking pot, and a copy of The Woodcutter's Wife, as well as another tome of interest.

- ❖ Crafting: Cooking pot, wood chopping block
- ❖ Book: Deathbrand

6 Oslaf's House

Oslaf

One of the many hunters in Skaal village, Oslaf would be very content if the rest of the world would just leave his village and his people alone. He is deeply mistrustful of outsiders, owing to an incident in his childhood where some Nords from Skyrim came to hunt in the land near Skaal Village. The Nords got drunk and picked a fight with Oslaf's father, wounding him badly. Oslaf is a devoted, if stern, father and husband. He thinks young Nikulas is a fool for wanting to leave the village, and he reminds his young daughter Aeta on a daily basis that her place is with her people.

Finna

Finna is a kindhearted villager who is almost the complete opposite of her stern husband, Oslaf. Where he dislikes strangers, she is welcoming and generous. She is good friends with Yrsa, and the two like to share idle gossip about the other villagers. Finna tries hard to instill positive qualities in her daughter, to provide a balance to her husband's more strict approach to parenting.

Aeta

Children in the Skaal Village are raised to contribute from an early age. The self-reliant Skaal do not have the resources to get by without everyone pitching in, so Aeta, the village's lone child, helps out where she can. Aeta is unlike many Nord children in Skyrim, having little time for play and no friends her own age. She has had to grow up more quickly and is surprisingly mature and level-headed for a child.

This building is home to Oslaf, Finna, and Aeta. It is a modest home with a fenced-in backyard that houses a few goats and planted potatoes, cabbage, and leeks. Finna has taken it upon herself to try to grow a meager crop here, although the climate and soil are less than ideal for farming. She spends most of her day outside tending to the garden while her husband, Oslaf, hunts game in the lands near the village. Inside the home is a cooking pot, some food and clothing, and very little else, save for a sweetroll in Aeta's bedroom.

7 Wulf Wild-Blood's House

Wulf Wild-Blood

One of the best hunters that the Skaal have ever known, Wulf Wild-Blood seems almost supernaturally attuned to nature. In truth, this is just the result of a lifetime spent tirelessly perfecting his art. Hunting is Wulf's great passion, and he only feels truly alive while on the trail, tracking game. His enthusiasm has waned slightly, after the disappearance of his brother Torkild.

For most of his long life, Wulf Wild-Blood has been the most accomplished hunter and trapper in Skaal village. Now facing his twilight years, Wulf wants to pass along his wisdom and teach a new generation of hunters. He will eagerly offer advice and wisdom. He wants nothing in exchange, save to keep his people strong by passing on what he has learned. His home features a variety of pelts, skinned meats, and mounted animal trophies.

9 Edla's House

Edla

Edla lost her husband, Heifnir, a few years ago and has been raising their son Nikulas alone ever since. The event made her reexamine her life and she decided that she wanted more for herself than the simple life of a villager. However, she could not deny that she was a Skaal, born and raised, and she had no desire to leave. Her compromise was to begin a new occupation as the village trader. In this new (and entirely self-appointed) role, she makes trades with travelers, selling off material the Skaal can spare, crafting her potions in exchange for septims, and using those to purchase supplies.

Nikulas

Nikulas might have the life of a typical Skaal villager were it not for the recent death of his father and the arrival of Tharstan in the village.

The loss of his father shook the young man greatly and made him question whether he really wanted to spend his entire life within the boundaries of the Skaal lands. Pouring fuel on the fire were Tharstan's exciting tales of his grand excursions exploring lost ruins across Skyrim and beyond.

This dwelling is home to Edla and Nikulas. Edla has tried hard to keep herself occupied since the tragic death of her husband, a hunter named Heifnir who was mauled by a bear three years ago. An unusually enterprising Skaal, she has taken to trading with travelers who pass through the village, taking gold in exchange for meat, furs, and other items that the villagers have in excess. She then uses that gold to buy whatever she thinks is useful or desirable. Inside her home are some simple foodstuffs and a few trinkets and potions.

10 Morwen's House

Morwen

Morwen's mother, Bera, was one of those rare Skaal who left the village to seek her fortunes elsewhere. She traveled to Skyrim with Ulfarr, a Nord sailor whose ship had wrecked near Skaal Village. Bera raised Morwen with tales of the Skaal Village, for in her heart she missed her home. Currently, Morwen works the smithy with Baldor.

After years as a mercenary, Morwen has chosen to put away her sword and live out her remaining years in peace. Morwen's mother was born in Skaal Village but left when she married a sailor from Skyrim and returned home with him. Morwen has had her fill of battle and now spends her days fishing and hunting to help provide food for the villagers. However, she will still pick up an axe should a threat to the village arise. Her house is a simple affair but cozy if you decide to marry and settle down with her (after completing Solstheim Regional Activity: Return to Falkreath*, page 671).

2 Grotto and Plunge Pool

- ◇ Chest

3 Lower Pool and Alchemist's Alcove

For a more stealthy and safer way to remove the Reaver threats in this area, use the ledge left of the waterfall and work your way around, passing a tunnel to your left; fight two foes here near an Alchemy Lab and shelf of potions. The rickety mine platforms lead down to a second tunnel directly under the first. The water below is devoid of items, save a Nordic Barnacle Cluster.

The lower camp has a chest [Novice] and some potions in one tent and a smelter with iron ore behind it. Use the oil lamp traps if you wish. Climb the wooden ramps past a third and fourth tent to the ledge above and another ancient Nord carving. There's a narrow tunnel entrance ahead (southeast) and a moss-walled ledge to your right (west), leading to a natural arch where a skeletal victim paid the price for inaccurate Reaver archery! Once used in rituals during the time of the Bloodmoon, this is one of the All-Maker Stones sacred to the Skaal. Currently, its power is being siphoned by Miraak and stone arches constructed by four enthralled sailors who were only supposed to take a short shore leave on Solstheim. The Bend Will Shout is required to remove the trance the sailors are under and to cleanse the stone of Miraak's influence. After this, the sailors depart. Beware the dragon that is released out to the west, once the Lurker is summoned; both must be defeated or you must run from them.

This leads to a balcony with a corpse clutching a bow; arrows are nearby. These are the remains of Ulyn, and his journal reveals clues to the secrets of the boilery puzzle you face.

Puzzle Solution: Face the circular piston lock to the west, and view the six kinetic resonators (the propeller devices glowing turquoise, three on either side of the main lock). To open the subsequent gate, you must pull all 20 fuel cylinders into place, activating the boiler. This is achieved by shooting an arrow at some of the resonators. Each resonator activates a specific number of cylinders. Shoot too few and nothing happens. Shoot too many and you release an increasingly dangerous number of Automatons and must defeat them. Each resonator has a set number of cylinders that it releases:

✓	RESONATOR	CYLINDERS RELEASED
<input type="checkbox"/>	Middle Left	4
<input type="checkbox"/>	Near Left	6

Solstheim's ancient tales speak of a frost giant both frightening and furious. But this brute is said to have died more than 200 years ago, during the time of the Bloodmoon. Head up the steep snowy slopes toward Castle Karstaag Caverns and Castle Karstaag Ruins. The castle is a massive mound of sculpted ice and looks almost like a mountain.

Although the interior of Castle Karstaag has long since collapsed, its remains, worn down to glacial slabs, still form a near-impenetrable wall. Unless you can pick the lock on the massive front doors [Master], the only open path to the central courtyard (the Ruins) is through the icy, partially flooded tunnels under the castle (the Caverns), where a clan of Rieklings still defends its ancient home.

Interior: Castle Karstaag Caverns

A Exit to Solstheim

After following the raging mountain stream in the ravine to the castle's east, you enter the caverns here.

1 Ice Cavern (First Visit)

Venture into a massive ice cavern with at least five Riekings. Head along the broken ice, passing the corpse of Esmond Tyne (who has an excellent formula for Bonemold Armor, which Glover Mallory is interested in; see page 669). Dive down and swim under the bridge to secure items from a sunken chest [Apprentice]. Interior: Castle Karstaag Courtyard

NOTE Technically, this courtyard is in Solstheim's exterior and can be seen from the tops of some mountains. But the only way to access it is via the door [Master] or a trek through the Caverns.

Only the exterior walls remain of this once-mighty castle, forming an arena where three Riekings await you. Engage the Mounted Rieking before slaying the two on foot. It is important to search the Mounted Rieking, as he is carrying the key. This allows a swift exit through the ice door in the south wall [Master], which is otherwise exceptionally difficult to open. Next, edge over to Karstaag's ice throne, where a scattering of giant bones rests between two ice torches.

The correct order from left to right is Hawk, Whale, Whale, and Serpent. The second petroglyph clue is missing; find it as part of the tent decoration on this chamber's eastern upper ledge. In the snow below Mortrag Peak is a familiar barrow entrance, behind which is a door leading to the tomb of the Dragon Priest Acolyte Dukaan. White Ridge Barrow is also home to some more recent inhabitants: a gang of bandits and some strange dark elven spider magic.

Interior: White Ridge Barrow

A Door to Solstheim

1 Entrance Room

There are signs of violence at the entrance, where two dead Reavers have barred the wooden door shut. Remove the bar and open the door.

- ◆ Chest
- ◆ Loose gear

2 Entrance Corridor

Pass two dead Albino Spiders and three dead Reavers before encountering live arachnids. Circle around the spiral steps leading deeper into the tomb.

3 Tomb Tunnel

Head east down the tomb tunnel and engage more spiders (including Flame Cloaked Spiders) as the passage separates into two parallel corridors. Beware of exploding egg sacs, and mine any geodes you see; there are two Ruby Geodes to the north. Continue east down the corridors, past additional egg sacs. There is a chain on one of the two end pillars, which releases a bridge platform ahead (east).

- ◆ Pickaxe
- ◆ Ruby Geode (2)

4 Eastern Balcony

The chamber's far side is inaccessible unless you use the Whirlwind Sprint Shout (or a similar ability, like the Vampire Lord's Bats power), enabling you to hurtle across the chamber, circle behind the wooden buttresses, lower the rest of the bridge using the chain near the chest, and check the area for items.

5 Hallway Chamber

You're attacked by spiders and a bandit under the control of a parasitical spider clinging to his shoulders. There are exits here to the north and west. Falling Adventurer!

Mount Moesring is one of four mountains on Solstheim you can climb. When you reach the summit, a landmark icon appears to reflect this (optional) accomplishment. Start by heading down the snow between Moesring Pass and Fahlbtharz, and look to the east. Scramble up the rocky slopes heading northeast and then north to the secondary peak. The final few steps are the hardest. Once at the top, you have commanding views of the following locations:

North: Moesring Pass

Southeast: Altar of Thron and parts of the Temple of Miraak

South: Almost the entire southern half of Solstheim, from Tel Mithryn to Raven Rock. The small stone turret is Highpoint Tower.

Southwest and West: Fahlbtharz elevator and Fahlbtharz.

Northwest: The two tall peaks are Mortrag and Frykte.

NOTE There are three other mountain peaks you can optionally climb: Frykte Peak, Hvítald Peak, and Mortrag Peak.

Beware! Heed the following before attempting this ascension:

CAUTION

It is exceptionally difficult to reach the top of this mountain without possibly losing your footing and falling (which could kill you).

Save your progress before attempting the climb.

If you feel you are about to fall, use the Become Ethereal Shout to protect yourself from falling damage.

The Whirlwind Sprint Shout may assist you in your climb, although it's easy to fly off the peak to a spectacular death if you overshoot your intended location!

Otherwise, steadily head forward while jumping continuously, strafing left and right when you reach an impasse; this is the easiest way to climb.

Watch your footing!

D Door to Temple of Miraak Sanctum (Sealed)

This is Secondary Location [S.NQ] Temple of Miraak: Secret Exit.

Exterior: Tree Stone

A lengthy subterranean crypt lies under one of the All-Maker stones, where the bones of dragons and recently constructed arches reveal the true extent of Miraak's power. Currently, the construction is built around a central stepped courtyard, where the ancient Tree Stone stands. Miraak is siphoning its power, and stone arches are being constructed by enthralled Reaver and Skaal workers, including Yrsa and Oslaf. Freya is here, hoping to remove the curse that has befallen her people. The completion of the Dragonborn Main Quest is required to remove the trance the Reavers and Skaal are under and cleanse the entire area of Miraak's influence. Exterior

Thirsk is located on the snowy slopes of eastern Solstheim. It sits beyond the northern edge of the ash and was spared the devastation that occurred on the southern part of the island. Previously, it was a welcome oasis in the middle of a harsh wilderness; it has much the same feeling 200 years later. Since the time of Bloodmoon, the number of warriors at Thirsk has waxed and waned, and they've grown a little softer in their isolation. A group of Riekings took advantage of their weakness and have taken over Thirsk, driving out the Nords. The place is an absolute mess, filled with strange Riekling artifacts and random clutter. When you first approach, the Riekings welcome you if you don't attack them. If the Nords retake this location, the forge outside is relit and becomes usable.

Interior

Exterior

Used as the breeding ground for Riekling mounts known as Bristlebacks since the time of Bloodmoon, the tribe has since expanded the size of these caverns. In addition to the Bristleback pens, they now include a larger meeting room dedicated to the worship of a strange device they recovered from a recent raid.

Just south of the entrance to Frossel, you'll find the bodies of the bandits involved in the raid and a note explaining what happened up until the attack. You can also learn more about the raid in Wilderness Encounter: The Rabbiting Reaver. Inside, you're able to battle the Riekings and recover the actual loot from the heist, which has been discarded in the back of the cave to make room for the wonderful cart!

Gyldenhul Barrow is the long-lost tomb of Haknir Death-Brand, the legendary pirate king who also serves as the namesake for Haknir's Shoal. The entrance to the barrow is difficult to open [Master], although you can obtain a key for it (and all of the other locks within) by completing the Solstheim Side Quest: Deathbrand (see page 617), which begins at Haknir's Shoal nearby. The fourth and final treasure chest you find in that quest always contains the barrow key. There are a pair of Reavers camped outside the entrance.

SOLSTHEIM: SOUTHERN ASH LANDS

TOPOGRAPHICAL OVERVIEW

Centuries of constant eruptions from Red Mountain—the towering volcano located on the island of Vvardenfell to the east—have devastated the once-thriving settlements and fertile pine forests of southern Solstheim. The land here has been strangled by continuous ash deposits and beset by terrifying creatures seemingly risen from the ash. Still, many continue to eke out an existence here despite the formidable danger.

Routes and Pathways

When traversing the choking ash wastes, it is important to situate yourself by locating the landmarks that are easiest to spot. Obviously, the volcano in the far distance is one such object. The giant fungal tower of Tel Mithryn to the southeast is another. Highpoint Tower, the aptly named tumbledown fortification in the middle of the ashlands, is your midway point. To the southwest is Raven Rock, your first port of call and the largest settlement on the island.

Move farther inland and you'll note a lack of thoroughfares; there is only a single north-south path. Try to trek along the coast first, to get a feel of the lay of the land; then use the Harstrad River, which is now little more than a stream that winds south from Ashfallow Citadel to the Sea of Ghosts just west of Tel Mithryn, as another helpful orientating point. As you trek north, be aware that once you step from ash onto snow, you're venturing into the Northern Mountains—a helpful way to realize how far across the island you've traveled.

Lore: Settlement Overview

Raven Rock is a settlement located in the remains of the Hirstaang Forest. It is situated strategically in a small cove on the southern end of Solstheim. In the town's glory days, a pair of large docks jutted out into the cove, which provided access to the cargo ships the East Empire Company needed to ship ebony out and bring supplies into the colony. Now, only a single, rickety dock remains. The eastern end of the city is dominated by the Bulwark, a massive stone wall once used to protect the town from relentless marauders and indigenous creatures. A long, tall cliff encompasses the northern side of the town, sheltering it from Solstheim's harsh conditions. Ever since the Red Mountain's eruption, the once lush pine forest has been transformed into a wasteland. The Shield Wall now serves as a different kind of barrier...protecting its inhabitants from ash storms. Over the years, the ash has formed large dunes against the wall, obscuring most of the stonework.

Lore: A History of Raven Rock

During the year 3E 427, the colony of Raven Rock was established by the East Empire Company in response to a rich ebony mine discovered on the southern tip of Solstheim. Five years later, the town was a bustling throng with over 30 inhabitants, all of whom depended on the mine for their livelihood. Ebony was shipped by the boatload to the mainland. Raven Rock remained largely untouched during the Oblivion crisis, but a few mining families left anyway, fearing that their town might be the next to fall at the hands of Mehrunes Dagon's forces.

After the destruction of Ald'ruhn in the early Fourth Era, House Redoran became divided. Brara Morvayn, one of the six Redoran Council members, led a small group of Dark Elves to Raven Rock. After striking a deal with the East Empire Company (and some hefty payments), the Dark Elves were allowed to settle in the colony provided that they worked in the mines and kept the best interests of the East Empire Company at heart. But in the fourth year, Raven Rock was attacked by Riekings. The Factor of Raven Rock and six miners were slain in the assault. Brara and her men fought off the Riekings and prevented the entire town from being overrun. The East Empire Company was grateful for Brara's assistance and named her the new Factor of Raven Rock.

One year later, in 4E 5, the explosion of Red Mountain sent a shock wave cutting across most of Solstheim. The town suffered damage from the blast, and the southern portion of the island was buried under the ash. A second boatload of refugees arrived in Raven Rock, and Brara immediately took them in, offering food, protection, and shelter in exchange for their assistance in the mines. By 4E 7, ash from the wastes made life exceedingly difficult in Raven Rock. In order to protect the town from the ash storms and the massive ash drifts it left behind, Brara had the miners build a mighty wall on the eastern side of the town. The construction took almost a year, and the people of Raven Rock took to calling it "the Bulwark."

By 4E 16, Solstheim passed into the hands of the Dunmer people. The East Empire Company relinquished its rights to Raven Rock but negotiated a deal with Brara Morvayn to continue trading ebony ore for supplies and gold. Most of the Imperial population left Solstheim for good. Brara continued to welcome the Dunmer that elected to settle on Solstheim. Some chose to stay in Raven Rock; others began a nomadic life in the ash wastes. After almost 50 years of prosperity, in the year 4E 65, Brara Morvayn succumbed to old age and died. Her son, Lleril Morvayn, took her place.

Thirty years later, an attempt was made on Lleril Morvayn's life. The culprit was captured and identified himself as Vilur Ulen of House Hlaalu. The Redoran Guard investigated and discovered that Vilur had been organizing a coup in an attempt to wrest control of the colony. Vilur and his conspirators were executed and the coup quelled.

By 4E 130, several improvements were made to the Bulwark to strengthen it. Over time, the ash dunes piling up on the outer side of the curtain wall placed tremendous pressure on the structure. Lleril Morvayn spent a good deal of what was left of his fortune bringing in builders from the mainland to help permanently reinforce the wall.

In 4E 150, a small Argonian strike force landed at Raven Rock. Lleril Morvayn was there with his Redoran Guard to repel them. Fortunately, Lleril was able to speak to the Argonian commander and convince him to stand down. This moment is remembered quite fondly by most of the citizens of Raven Rock, who admire their leader and consider him their savior.

By 4E 170, the ebony mines under Raven Rock had begun to dry up. A few of the miners and their families left for Skyrim. Trade with the mainland slowed to a trickle. Eleven years later, the ebony mines were fully exhausted. The mining operations fully shut down, and the town shrunk in size, leaving more abandoned houses and buildings. The town turned to hunting and fishing to sustain itself.

At present, Lleril Morvayn is still the de facto ruler of Raven Rock. His meager Redoran Guard maintains order within the town and the surrounding area, keeping Raven Rock's residents safe and in line. If even so much as a rumor of dissent reaches Lleril's ears, he has it quashed immediately. He's well aware that there may be a few Hlaalu loyalists still present among the population that would see him killed. He keeps his distance from the Nords in the Skaal Village, and in turn, they leave him alone as well, each having their own issues to deal with.

NOTE A large proportion of the town's population have been enslaved and are helping to build a strange shrine around the Earth Stone to the west of town. Free these folks and they head back to the locations listed below. Consult Dragonborn Main Quest: Cleansing the Stones for further information.

Gjalund Salt-Sage

Gjalund's surname is born from his love of the sea. He's the proud captain of the Northern Maiden, one of Raven Rock's only lifelines to the mainland, and commands a great deal of respect. Gjalund's passion for the sea is evidenced by his commitment to his ship, which he keeps in fine working order. Ferrying individuals and supplies to and from Windhelm has kept him occupied for a better part of the last 20 years, and he insists he'll keep doing it until he dies.

Lygreid

Sogrlaf

The docks of Raven Rock, once bustling with activity, are long overgrown, rotten, and barely standing. Only one ship, the Northern Maiden, makes Raven Rock its port. The first time you visit Raven Rock, you arrive here and are met by Second Councilor Adril Arano, who recommends you abide by all local laws. The slightly ragged banners on the docks bear the mark of the Dunmer House Redoran. Expect a few guards wandering these docks. Check under the dock for an East Empire Strongbox [Expert].

2 Caerellius House

Crescius Caerellius

Crescius Caerellius is a direct descendant of Gratian Caerellius, one of the original inhabitants of Raven Rock (Gratian was his great-grandfather). Crescius comes from a long line of miners but was never able to fully ply his trade. By the time he was of age, the ebony mines in Raven Rock had already been depleted, casting Crescius into a deep depression. At one point, he outright refused to even leave his home, forcing Lleril Morvayn to order the Redoran Guard to break in his door for fear that the old man was starving himself to death. When they found him, he was on the edge of death, but Aphia Velothi was able to use her healing arts to bring him back. Ever since that day, Aphia has remained by Crescius's side. Crescius was grateful for Aphia's support, and in time, they grew to care for each other quite deeply. Even though it broke Dunmer tradition, Lleril Morvayn allowed them to wed and they've been living together as man and wife ever since.

Aphia Velothi

Aphia Velothi was originally an acolyte at the Temple. Under the tutelage of Elder Othrelloth, she studied the healing arts and was beginning to learn the traditions of the House of Reclamations. The idea that the Tribunal was gone was unbelievable to her; she firmly believed that the eruption of the Red Mountain wasn't a punishment from the Daedra but from the Tribunal. This view led to many arguments between Aphia and Elder Othrelloth, which culminated in her being stripped of her duties and excommunicated from the temple. Elder Othrelloth wished her exiled from Raven Rock altogether, but Lleril Morvayn refused his request, citing the fact that she had nowhere to go. She married Crescius after nursing him back to health.

This is the home of Crescius Caerellius, the sole remaining descendant of the Imperial settlers who once lived in the Raven Rock colony. His family has maintained this house since Raven Rock was founded in the Third Era. The house is strictly Imperial in design, bearing absolutely no Dunmer decoration or construction whatsoever. Crescius's wife, Aphia, is a Dunmer but has forsaken their ways and chosen to live a "purely Imperial lifestyle" in honor of her husband, whom she loves dearly. This has led to quite a bit of animosity with the rest of the town.

Inside the house there are various scattered books (read up on the history of Raven Rock here), along with a bounty of food, a cooking pot, and an East Empire Strongbox [Expert]. The stairwell has more food, while the small upstairs bedroom has coin purses, an owned bed, and a chest.

③ Morvayn Manor

Lleril Morvayn

Lleril Morvayn is the son of Brara Morvayn, the House Redoran Councilor who settled in Raven Rock after the devastation of Vvardenfell. He took over as councilor from his mother when Brara died early in the Fourth Era. On more than one occasion, attempts on his life have been made by members of House Hlaalu, which has made Lleril quite paranoid. The dire economic and security situation has been weighing heavily on his shoulders.

Adril Arano

Adril Arano and Lleril Morvayn have been the best of friends ever since they rose through the ranks together in House Redoran. Whenever trouble threatened the warrior-house, the two of them could be found on the front lines, fighting back with everything they had. This bond persisted, and when the Red Year came, Adril was granted passage on Lleril's vessel that set out from Vvardenfell. Adril and Lleril remained close while living in Raven Rock, even helping out in the mines and patrolling the Bulwark when necessary. When Brara Morvayn finally passed away and Lleril was made councilor of Raven Rock, he immediately took Adril as his adviser. Even though Lleril is technically Adril's superior, he treats Adril as his equal, even allowing him to live in Morvayn Manor.

Cindiri Arano

Cindiri Arano is Adril Arano's wife. Cindiri arrived on one of the few refugee ships that escaped Vvardenfell and struck out for less "volcanic" pastures. Shortly after her arrival on Solstheim, she met Adril and they quickly fell in love. She's been quite supportive of her husband but takes exception to the danger he keeps placing himself in. She understands the close relationship between Lleril and Adril but fears that the violence targeting the councilor might bring harm to her husband as well. Cindiri can usually be found within Morvayn Manor or out on the streets when she needs some time to herself.

Once an opulent mansion, Morvayn Manor now serves as the government building for Raven Rock. In addition to Councilor Morvayn's hall, it also contains his living quarters and those of his advisor Adril. The banners of House Redoran are hung on the building's circular tower as a stark reminder of who's in charge.

Enter the manor to visit Lleril, sit on his throne, and check his local book collection. There's plenty of food, a Redoran Guard to ensure you don't eat any, an Arcane Enchanter, more food, and a cooking pot in the stairwell chamber. Upstairs are the Morvayn Manor Chambers [Adept]. Sneak in here to find a fair few bottles of wine and an East Empire Strongbox [Expert]. The private bed chambers include a display case [Expert] with Chitin Armor and a Helmet, a book called Deathbrand that begins a quest, gems, and Adril's Survey Results regarding the upkeep of the city, along with a reply from House Redoran.

④ Temple

Elder Othrelloth

Elder Othrelloth has been the Elder (in actuality he's the only priest, but the title is honorary) at the Temple since he established it after arriving at the town at the beginning of the Fourth Era. The Temple honors "the House of Reclamations," the return to worship of the Daedra after the loss of the Tribunal. Elder Othrelloth has been quite instrumental in stabilizing the beliefs of the residents in Raven Rock ever since the destruction of their homeland. He's convinced almost everyone that the eruption was punishment for forsaking the Daedra, making him quite feared and revered in town. This has kept the Temple completely free from the political mechanizations going on in Raven Rock, as neither House Redoran nor the remnants of House Hlaalu wish to anger him.

Galdrus Hlervu

Galdrus Hlervu is a relatively recent addition to the Temple. Hoping to pass along the "new old" ways of thinking to someone else, Elder Othrelloth has taken Galdrus under his wing and has spent a good deal of his time prepping him for the inevitable. Unbeknownst to Elder Othrelloth, Galdrus has been tampering with a bit of necromancy research on the side, using the ash pit in the lower level (where the Dunmer are interred) as his laboratory.

Raven Rock's temple is dedicated to the renewal of the ancient Dark Elven faith, with shrines to the three Daedra who traditionally aided the Dunmer: Azura, Mephala, and Boethiah. After the downfall of the Tribunal at the end of the Third Era, these temples have begun to replace the Tribunal temples as the Dark Elves return to the old ways. While these Daedric Princes were originally seen as the "Anticipations" to Almalexia, Vivec, and Sotha Sil, they have now been cast in a new light, as a part of the "House of Reclamations"...signifying the Dunmer's return to the old ways and an offset to the House of Troubles (the other Daedra). The city's Ancestral Tomb is located in the basement area (the lowest level) of the temple. This is where the Dunmer that have fallen are interred.

Enter the temple if you wish to speak to either Elder Othrelloth or his equally haughty assistant. If you're collecting ash yams, there are over 60 between the urns outside and within these chambers. On the main floor are pyres and unique shrines to Azura, Boethiah, and Mephala. There are purses to steal here too. Downstairs in the tomb cellar are two chambers. To the left (west) is Othrelloth's, with a number of bone meal servings, books, and a Strong Box [Expert], which you can open easily if you have the Raven Rock Temple Key (carried by both priests). To the right is Hlervu's room, with scattered books (including Deathbrand) and a chest. Ahead is a door to the Temple Ancestral Tomb (which is also accessible via the Morvayn Ancestral Tomb). You will visit the tomb during Solstheim Regional Activity: Tomb Eradicator*.

These chambers are unlocked during Solstheim Regional Activity: Tomb Eradicator* (page 670), once you receive the Raven Rock Tomb Key from Otherloth. 6 Ulen Ancestral Tomb

You can easily enter this crypt without a key, although you need the Raven Rock Tomb Key to unlock the door leading to the Temple Ancestral Tomb. Check the urns for ash yams, deal with any Ash Spawn, and wait for Tilisu Severin to arrive, as part of Solstheim Side Quest: Served Cold.

7 The Bulwark

Captain Modyn Velesh

Modyn Velesh is the captain of the Redoran Guard, a job he takes extremely seriously. With the myriad of attempts on Lleril Morvayn's life, he's well aware that there are still forces out there aligning against the councilor. He's kept the Redoran Guard in good shape, teaching them how to maintain their weapons and armor and various battle techniques. Modyn previously served as a military officer in Vardenfell and was sent here by the Redoran Council to protect Raven Rock (which it sees as one of its holdings). He wishes he was serving House Redoran back on the mainland but never complains about his current posting. When Modyn arrived at Raven Rock, the Bulwark was merely a shadow of how it appears today. Using his knowledge, he was able to enhance the wall's strength and suggest improvements, such as the massive protective gate.

The massive wall constructed after the eruptions on Vvardenfell serves multiple purposes. In addition to holding back the waves of ash and fell creatures that assault Raven Rock, the wall also houses the guard barracks, the captain of the guard's living quarters, and the city's jail. The wall also features a large set of steps that climbs the northern cliff face and ends in a watchtower with a large pyre. If the pyre is ever lit, this signals those on the wall below that a threat approaches from the north. The Bulwark has a large gate, one of the only defenses keeping the ash abominations from overrunning the small town.

The exterior of the Bulwark, accessed from the basalt cliffs above, the main gate below, or the balcony steps near the Temple, offers views of the Sea of Ghosts, Red Mountain, and the harbor.

The interior of the Bulwark, accessed from the main gate, has a guard presence. There are various (owned) cots and a bed, a fireplace with a cooking spit, an evidence chest should you need to retrieve belongings, and an East Empire Strongbox [Expert] sitting on the table at the end of the interior corridor.

8A The Bulwark Jail

The Redoran Guard maintain the peace and see to the defense of Raven Rock. Crimes committed against the residents of Raven Rock are judged by Lleril, and prisoners are placed in the tiny prison in an antechamber of the massive Bulwark.

Aside from a couple of books, the jail cell features a solid door lock [Expert] and a guard who isn't the most perceptive of chaps. This allows you to sneak out if you wish, sleep in the cell's bed, or locate the hidden exit—the grate [Novice] in the fireplace. This leads to an ash and cobweb-lined passage to a second grate (under the belongings chest, allowing you to snag your stuff), which drops you down to a stone tunnel dug by Draugr. This ends at a door to Coldcinder Cave.

10 Glover Mallory's House

Glover Mallory

Glover Mallory is one of the most prominent non-Dunmer citizens in Raven Rock. He arrived in town almost 20 years ago and constructed a full blacksmith's workshop with Lleril Morvayn's blessing. Glover quickly befriended many of the locals, who admired his earnestness in keeping Raven Rock alive and his prowess at the forge. Most of the residents treat Glover as a complete equal, including him in all of the town's decisions and even inviting him to some of their more personal ceremonies. He's integral to the Redoran Guard as well, providing equipment and repairs to the soldiers. Glover is very evasive about his past and has never publicly stated why he left the mainland and struck out for Solstheim. He's jovial and warm, and when he isn't at his anvil, he can be found hoisting a mug at The Retching Netch.

This is the home of the town's blacksmith, who works his smithy, known as the Ebony Anvil. Glover is a Breton, making him stand out a bit in this almost exclusively Dunmer town, but he has integrated quite well with everyone. He's proven to be quite adept at his trade and has even voluntarily contributed to the town's meager coffers. Outside, you can trade with Glover, ask about his Regional Activities, and use his crafting areas. Particularly observant members of the Thieves Guild might notice the Shadowmark displayed near the door to the interior of the home.

Inside his house is a variety of food, some books, a cooking pot, and an East Empire Strongbox [Expert]. Upstairs is a chest and a copy of Ahzidal's Descent, which begins Solstheim Side Quest: Unearthed.

After successfully completing Solstheim Regional Activity: Thievery and the Karstaag Connection* (see page 669), you're given the Key to Glover Mallory's House, which allows you to open the locked door downstairs. Inside is a thief's treasure trove, including a weapon and shield on a rack [leveled], poisons and potions, sweetrolls, a Thief Cache barrel with a Shadowmark on it, a generic strongbox, a set of Blackguard's Armor, and Glover's Letter, which reveals his past and his daughter, the thief Sapphire. If you meet up with Sapphire in Riften's Ragged Flagon and talk to her about this note, she offers you an exquisite gem bearing her name.

11 Ienth Farm

Garyn Ienth

Milore Ienth

Garyn and Milore lenth are recent additions to Raven Rock. Seeking a home after theirs was lost, they wandered the mainland of Skyrim for a while until they settled in Windhelm. After staying there for a few years, they heard about the Dunmer settlement at Raven Rock and decided to take their chances. They packed up their things, boarded a boat, and never looked back. Garyn brought his knowledge of agriculture to Raven Rock and has become an integral part of the community. He provides quite a bit of grain and other dry goods to the town in exchange for other services, only keeping what he and Milore need to survive. Thanks in part to Milore's alchemical prowess, she's been able to accelerate the growth of some of the crops, producing higher yields.

Having descended from a long line of farmers, the leniths' struggle to raise their crops as they did when they lived in Morrowind. Fortunately, after years of trial and error, the farm is flourishing. This has provided quite the boon to the food supplies of the town, and Lleril Morvayn now considers the farm important enough to post a permanent guard there. Milore lenth has taken on alchemy as a hobby and has recently converted the area in front of their home into a makeshift apothecary shop.

The grounds of the farm are filled with ash yam and scathecrawl, and there are dozens more to steal at the stall in front of their home. There is also an Alchemy Lab where Milore trades (you can complete a Regional Activity for her). Inside the house are dozens more ash yams, a cooking pot, and a note to Milore from Nilara. Downstairs is where more ash yams are kept, along with an Alchemy Lab and various ingredients. Through the door is a bedroom with a few books and a chest.

12 Alor House

Fethis Alor

Fethis owns this house and runs his general goods business from it. He's gained the reputation of being the town curmudgeon, but his presence is tolerated and his shop frequented due to the supply of decent goods he brings into Raven Rock through his old East Empire Company contacts. Fethis is quite proud of his connections within the company and constantly brings it up in conversation. He considers them an "ally" that would protect him if he ever needed it and uses this as leverage whenever a disagreement arises between himself and one of his customers.

Dreyla Alor

Dreyla is the daughter of Fethis and works at her father's shop doing mostly housekeeping and menial chores. Dreyla's mother recently died during an Ash Spawn attack on Raven Rock, so she's taken it upon herself to handle her mother's duties. She loves her father dearly but doesn't share his views of the East Empire Company.

This is a general goods shop that sells all sorts of supplies. It's seen its share of hard times, which is evidenced by the reduced inventory available. The owners do their best to maintain the shop, convinced that Raven Rock isn't finished yet. Outside the house is a tanning rack, a wood chopping block, and usually Fethis Alor, who offers an island-spanning Regional Activity: The Great Solstheim Strongbox Hunt*.

Enter the house to discover a cooking pot and a note: Dearest Dinya, as well as an assortment of books and a large number of barrels and crates. Downstairs is a second tanning rack, a grindstone, a workbench, and some iron ingots. The southwest bedroom has assorted apples and books and a chest. Remember to check the southeast bedroom of the cellar for a purse, chest, copy of Hallgerd's Tale (Heavy Armor Skill Book) on the bedside table, and an East Empire Strongbox [Expert] on the larger table.

13 The Retching Netch

Geldis Sadri

Geldis is one of the longest inhabitants of Raven Rock, arriving at the small town just after the mass exodus from Vvardenfell. Originally a miner in the ebony mines, Geldis earned a respectable amount of money and was able to amass a small fortune for himself. When the East Empire Company abandoned the town and as the population slowly changed from Imperial to Dunmer, he purchased the town's only inn. Lleril Morvayn provided some of his own funds to augment the inn to their liking.

Drovas Relvi

Drovas is friendly but a bit scatterbrained. He tends to be a bit naive and has made a couple of foolish decisions in his life. One of them was borrowing money from Mogrul. Drovas is apprenticing under Geldis Sadri, which basically means he's doing all of the jobs around the place that Geldis doesn't want to do. He does his job passably but has bigger aspirations. For the moment, he desperately wishes to flee Raven Rock before the orc that's after him demands pieces of flesh, rather than bags of coin.

Teldryn Sero

A Dunmeri Spellsworn with a brash and boastful demeanor, Teldryn is resting up at The Retching Netch after his previous backer ordered an attack on a particularly large and well-defended lair of bandits. He is outfitted with light Chitin Armor, which he normally refuses to remove, and is skilled in both sword and magic. He spent his youth in Blacklight (in Morrowind) and professes to have met Saint Jiub (prior to the latter's disappearance) before plying his talents in Windhelm.

Mogrul

Slitter

Mogrul is a two-septim thug who usually runs a small-time gambling operation. But currently he's in Raven Rock with his murmuring associate Slitter to settle an outstanding debt. Mogrul is a heartless bastard. People who don't pay up tend to get hurt. If a debtor dies or flees the island, he has no compunctions about going after their relatives or friends to collect. He even has access to thugs and bandits to do some of the dirty work.

In recent years, The Retching Netch Cornerclub has served as Raven Rock's main watering hole. The meager common room can barely accommodate the small population of the town, but nevertheless, at night, the inn is filled with a good deal of the town's residents as they contemplate their bleak futures. A single room for rent is available here but hasn't been used in quite a long time. A Redoran Guard stands outside, in case of trouble.

Inside is a hearth (close to where Teldryn Sero usually sits) and cooking pot, and stairs lead down to the large cellar cornerclub itself, where Geldis is propped up behind the bar (guarding an East Empire Strongbox [Expert]). To the southwest and west are bedrooms, the larger of which has two chests and a large amount of cheese to steal. To the north is another bedroom (usually your room if you spend the night) with a chest and a copy of Deathbrand to read. The locked room [Apprentice] leads to another room with a chest.

14 Abandoned Building

Bralsa Drel

Bralsa is a sujamma addict. She began drinking the potent beverage when she was in her teens and still imbibes the liquor today. She worked the mines for years before they were shut down, and then turned to the sujamma to drown her sorrows. Bralsa performs odd jobs around town occasionally (when she can remember), but instead of saving her coin or using it to clothe or feed herself, she plunks the money on the bar at the cornerclub and drinks it all away. Geldis Sadri usually cuts her off when he thinks she's had enough, and oftentimes she can be found sleeping on a bedroll in the back room of the tavern. On the rare occasions she is encountered sober, she's quite a bitter woman, lamenting about being stuck in Raven Rock and musing that she'd have been better off dying in the eruption like so many others.

Rirns Llervu

If every town has an odd man out, Rirns would be Raven Rock's. Arriving as a stowaway on the Northern Maiden a few decades ago, the Redoran Guard had to remove him from his hiding spot in a crate of supplies. He was shivering uncontrollably and talking in nonsensical whispers about "fish men" that walk the bottom of the sea. When pressed about this, he was unable to give a coherent answer. A few folks in Raven Rock have tried to give Rirns a chance at odd jobs, but he can barely form a sentence, let alone perform menial tasks.

You can find one run-down and two collapsed buildings on the outskirts of town. These are the remnants of homes and businesses that were left when the people and prosperity abandoned Raven Rock. The relatively intact home is occupied by some of the destitute members of the colony. One of them (Bralsa Drel) has a Regional Activity you can help her with (see page 668). A few tattered books and Nord mead bottles are the only items among the cobwebs in here.

15 Severin Manor (House to Own)

Vendil Severin Tilisu Severin Mirri Severin

The Severin family are an enigma to Raven Rock. Arriving in the small town only ten years ago, they brought large amounts of wealth with them and built their own manor house. No one in town is certain how the family attained their wealth, but since they've contributed so much of it to the town, most don't care. Lleril Morvayn has always been a bit wary of new faces in Raven Rock (because House Hlaalu has a price on his head), but after getting to know the family, his suspicions were averted. A few in town have noticed how oddly close in age Mirri Severin is to her father but haven't paid it much mind.

In actuality, all three Severin are not who they appear to be (his real name is Ulen, descendant of Vilur Ulen from House Hlaalu). They are aligned with House Hlaalu, specifically hired to kill Lleril Morvayn to avenge the death of Vilur Ulen. The Severin name had been created as a cover for the trio, whose sole purpose is to lay the groundwork for their plan. Knowing that the enterprise would be quite difficult, the trio has hired a small cadre of Morag Tong in a ruined fort not far from Raven Rock. When the time is right, they feel they'll be able to strike, taking out the Redoran Guard and Lleril at the same time.

This house becomes yours after the successful completion of Solstheim Side Quest: Served Cold. It cannot be furnished, but it does come with a full complement of helpful clutter to adorn your weapons, equipment, clothing, and other items. Enter the place to view the hearth, then head downstairs. To the southeast is a large bedroom with a chest and ash yam-growing area. To the northeast is a blacksmith's smelter, forge, and training area with a number of ingots and other crafting areas. To the east is an Alchemy Lab alcove and many ingredients. To the west is an Arcane Enchanter alcove and weapon plaques. To the west is the main bedroom with three chests, display cases, and a variety of pleasantly positioned skulls. Hidden near a bookcase is the Severin Family Safe [Expert], which you can unlock with a key Mirri carries. It contains an interesting note inside.

3 Waterlogged Draugr Crypt

Cross into a roughly mined area, which breaks through into a Draugr tomb that is ankle-deep in water. There's movement here, as Draugr rise from their walled resting places to delay you. Fight four or five as you work your way through the crypt. Check the left area for a chest before heading east and avoiding the floor plate and swinging wall trap.

4 The Dead Slumbering on Their Thrones

Head up the steps and around to the west. Here, four thrones are occupied by two slumbering dead (one on each side, with potions between them), who awaken to attack, along with a third foe farther along the hall and a locked chest [Master]. Be sure to defeat these enemies, as the circular chamber ahead features at least six Draugr of varying degrees of toughness.

6 Stepped Passage

Pass the Alchemy Lab and shelves of ingredients (snag the Netch Jelly here if you're completing the Solstheim Regional Activity for Milore lenth; see page 668), then move north along a stepped passage, watching for magic caster traps in the shallow alcoves (race through or knock the Soul Gems off their pedestals). Back in the water, open the iron doors and ready yourself for combat with some particularly hardy Draugr.

Battle the Draugr around this interior canal and on the precarious wooden bridge. Climb up to the alcoves and cross the wooden bridge to a high alcove with a chest [Expert] and an Arcane Enchanter. 11 Trapped Alcove and Low Tunnel

Carefully tread on the ground near the torch and steps, as a dart trap is easily activated. Rush through or avoid it before opening the wooden door, securing goods from a locked chest [Adept]. Head back down the steps and check the low tunnel to the west. This brings you out onto a high chasm.

12 High Chasm and Runic Door of Bloodskal

Two cave streams and numerous interlocking basalt columns offer a tremendous view of a strange and dimly lit wall of odd carvings. Carefully descend to the ground and inspect the old bones of Gratian Caerellius, near the runic door. Gratian's Journal is on the corpse, along with a strange and wondrous blade. Grab both, check downstream for an alcove with a chest, then inspect the runic door.

- ◇ Gratian's Journal
- ◇ Unique Weapon: Bloodskal Blade [DB4/11]
- ◇ Chest

Puzzle Solution: The Bloodskal Blade is your key. Equip this two-handed weapon, stand so you're targeting the red slit in the outer arch, and make a horizontal power attack with the blade (sidestep, hold down your Attack button, release). If you're successful, you'll hear stone grinding and part of the arch will move up. A vertical glow appears.

Make a vertical power attack (hold down your Attack button, release), and be sure the ribbon of red hits close to the glow in the arch. A section indents, clicks, and the outer piece slides farther toward the apex of the arch. This time a horizontal glowing slit is formed. Execute a horizontal power attack, and the entire left side of the outer arch slots into place.

Now move to view the right side of the outer arch. Perform exactly the same power attacks, and watch the sections of archway maneuver into new and unlocked positions. Assuming you've correctly slashed, the entire arch glows red, and a massive vertical slit appears through the circular door. Launch a final, vertical power attack from the Bloodskal Blade and the door opens.

13 Nord Curved Hall of Traps

Head through the long Nord hall, deftly avoiding the swinging blade traps. Activate the lever at the far end to open the heavy gate, allowing access into the lair of Zakhriisos, one of Miraak's Acolyte Priests.

- ◇ Danger! Swinging blade trap

14 Lair of Zakhriisos

The powerful Acolyte Priest Zakhriisos confronts you in this chamber. This fiend can summon Seekers and strike you with a powerful blast of lightning. Swap to your preferred weapons and engage this troublesome foe. If you're currently completing Solstheim Side Quest: Masks of the Acolyte Priests* (see page 662), this is one of the masks you're looking for. Grab it from the ash pile you've reduced Zakhriisos to, and learn a Word of the Dragon Aspect Shout.

NOTE Note that you are not locked into this room—if you find Zakhriisos too much of a challenge, you can flee and still claim the Black Book in the next room.

NOTE Note that the tunnel from Raven Rock Mine into the Draugr tomb is accessible only from the mine. There is no pull chain on the Barrow side.

Lore: Settlement Overview

 Tel Mithryn is a Telvanni Tower along the southern coast of the island, east of the ruined Fort Frostmoth. It has a classic mushroom shape, with a disk-shaped top floor and a stalk holding it up off the ground. Currently, a section of it appears to be withered and dying. At the base of the stalk are bulbous growths that form ground-floor dwellings. The master of Tel Mithryn is Neloeth, a Telvanni wizard who survived the Red Year of Vvardenfell. Neloeth has been experimenting with the ash and other debris from the eruption of Red Mountain, such as Heart Stones. He has multiple goals, but all of them involve returning to Vvardenfell and becoming Archmagister, although sometimes it just looks like accumulating power for power's sake.

NOTE Some of Tel Mithryn's residents are currently enslaved and helping to build a strange arched shrine around the Sun Stone to the north of town. Free these folks and they head back to the locations listed below. Consult Dragonborn Main Quest: Cleansing the Stones for more information.

Important Areas of Interest

1 Tel Mithryn Kitchen

Ulves Romoran

Ulves Romoran is Tel Mithryn's cook and gardener. He is a surly, gruff man, who talks only a little and works very hard. It's not that he doesn't like you: he doesn't like anybody.

The preparation of Neloeth's food is undertaken here. Most of the items here are owned and must be stolen if you want them.

- ◆ Crafting: Cooking pot, cooking spit
- ◆ Chest

2 Tel Mithryn Steward's House

Varona Nelas

Varona is the steward of Tel Mithryn. Haggard and giving the constant appearance of being overburdened, in truth there isn't much to be done as Neloeth's steward, so most of it is an act to cover her inherent laziness. Elynea takes care of the tower and Uvyn prepares the meals, so Varona's biggest job is to procure supplies for the others. However, she makes this seem like a job that really requires ten people.

NOTE You'll find the mildly incompetent Drovass Relvi here, once Solstheim Side Quest: Reluctant Steward is complete.

The Steward's House has several books and a chest to steal from. If Varona (or Drovass) isn't here, the place is locked [Novice].

- ◆ Book: Deathbrand
- ◆ Chest

3 Tel Mithryn Apothecary

Elynea Mothren

Elynea is the primary caretaker of the Tel Mithryn tower. She mostly ignores Neloeth and Talvas. She would much rather just prune and water her fungi and concoct her potions and not have to deal with people. She has her own mushroom and toadstool patches and a potion-making table. A small bed sits off to one side.

4 Tel Mithryn Graveyard

A small, informal cemetery overlooking the Sea of Ghosts. One of the graves is marked with the name "Ildari." Each sarcophagus can be robbed, for a few coins. Ildari's usually has a staff in it.

5 Tel Mithryn Tower

Neloth

Master Neloth is a Telvanni wizard and seems to have difficulty with the concept that other people matter. He judges their health and well-being solely based on his personal comfort and needs. That said, he is no fool. He recognizes power and that power in others must be respected. At this point in his life, he has given up kidnapping women. He claims it's because there are no suitable females in Solstheim, but the true reason is that it no longer interests him. Once you've kidnapped someone, you have to put up with their whining and complaining: it just isn't worth it.

Talvas Fathryon

Neloth's current apprentice, Talvas, is harried and somewhat put upon. At his core, he's really too pleasant a person to be in Tel Mithryn. When first encountered, he is attempting to summon an Ash Guardian, with what could only be described as "limited" success.

Neloth's home is the source of many quests. This towering mushroom structure, although partially withered, is still an impressive (and living) building. Ride up to the central chamber via a floating lift (use the lift, especially on the way down, to avoid an embarrassing death). Consult with Neloth (and Talvas, who moves in here after your initial outside encounter) whenever you want a new task.

Main Chamber: There's a large number of potions, scattered items (some dwarven in nature), maps of both Skyrim and Solstheim, and books to check. Stealing isn't encouraged, unless you wish to feel Neloth's wrath.

Talvas's Bedroom (north): A few cobwebs and little else.

Storage Room (east): Little more than crates and a few sacks.

Specimen Room (west): The blight that afflicts Tel Mithryn is most easily seen here; a diseased growth chokes off the western side of the main chamber. After completing Solstheim Side Quest: Healing a House, the blight is removed, and Neloth puts his new room to good use, capturing two Spriggans to assist him in his research.

Staff Enchanter Room (south): This chamber is firmly locked and can only be opened with the Staff Enchanter Key, your reward for completing Solstheim Side Quest: Reluctant Steward. Inside is an Arcane Enchanter, potions, a Black Book, and a method of easily crafting exceptionally potent staffs (see page 75).

This is one of the All-Maker Stones, nestled just outside and southwest of Raven Rock. You may meet the Dunmeri mage Neloth here in the initial stages of the Dragonborn Main Quest, before he moves to Tel Mithryn. Currently, the stone's power is being siphoned by Miraak, and stone arches are constructed by enthralled town citizens and Redoran Guards. At various times, Bralsa Drel, Cindiri Arano, Dreylla Alor, Fethis Alor, Glover Mallory, Milore lenth, and Rims Llervu work here, and their quests aren't accessible until the stone is cleansed. The Bend Will Shout is required to remove the trance the population is under and to cleanse the stone of Miraak's influence. Exterior

At the foot of the sharp, rocky slopes north of Raven Rock is the entrance to a Draugr tomb, now controlled by Reavers. There are two towers on the beach, one connected by an ancient stone bridge to the barrow interior.

Northern Tower

Expect around six Reavers as you investigate the ruins, heading for the lit torch at the base of the northern tower. This leads up to a second-floor stone bridge to the next tower and a wooden ramp up to sleeping quarters.

Southern Tower

Cross the stone bridge to reach a bed, chest, and steps up to a table with potions and an exit ramp that leads to the main stone bridge leading into Bloodskal Barrow. Or, continue into the tower, checking a living area with a cooking pot and a few bits of Chitin armor. Climb the stairs up to the roof. Here, you can find an Alchemy Lab, three tanning racks, and some books. Up more steps is a rickety wooden platform back to the otherwise inaccessible roof chamber of the Northern Tower.

NOTE This location reveals its secrets over the course of several visits as you fund Ralis Sedarys's excavation. There are four phases, each allowing deeper progress into the barrow. The phase you must reach to access chambers is flagged below.

This location constantly changes throughout Solstheim Side Quest: Unearthed. The first time you arrive, a Dunmer named Ralis Sedarys is digging at a half-buried barrow entrance. The Journal of Ralis Sedarys, volume 19, is near a hay pile.

Phase 1: There are a few miner tents and Ralis is on-site, moaning about Draugr.

Phase 2: There is a cooking spit, two more tents, and Ralis lamenting the constant Draugr threat.

Phase 3: There are more tents, at least one living miner, and Ralis in one of his moods again.

Phase 4: The camp is more like a small settlement now, with numerous tents and several murdered miners. Optionally make a point to enter Ralis's tent, and read some of his journals. Volume 23 is most illuminating.

A Door to Solstheim

Accessible from Phase 1 onward.

1 Entryway and Initial Burial Chamber

Phase 1: Expect at least six Draugr to contend with, both in the entryway and from the four raised corners of the burial chamber. Locate the main altar in the center of the burial chamber, and study the red skull. Lift it from its pressure plate, and a rotating wall arch ahead of you grinds open.

Phase 2: In the entryway, take the first right to claim a chest at the dead end. Expect another Draugr ambush as you enter the burial chamber, including archers firing down at you from the four raised corners of the chamber.

Phase 3: Be prepared for two Draugr to rush you just inside the entrance. A third, more powerful foe awaits you in the chamber below.

Phase 4: Unchanged.

2 Central Chamber

Phase 1: This chamber has almost completely collapsed and is filled with ash and rubble. However, a set of unique boots awaits you on the pedestal in the center of the room.

Phase 2: It looks like Ralis and the miners have made some progress here. A tough Draugr archer attacks from the circular platform in the center; strike with ranged spells or attacks to take him down quickly.

Phase 3: By now, most of the room has been excavated, although the Word Wall is still inaccessible (you can hear it but not reach it). Another Draugr awaits you on the central bridges.

Phase 4: Descend and approach the Word Wall, learning the Word of Power before continuing and optionally taking the short route back to the sacrificial chamber (Location [7]).

3, 4, and 5 Draugr Crypt

Phase 1: Inaccessible.

Phase 2: You must search these crypts for the corpses of two dead miners, Bradyn and Mireli. Bradyn is found on the lower floor to your left (west). He's quite dead. Kill three Draugr and then venture farther (northwest) into the crypt, yanking the pull chain on the candlelit alcove ahead of you. This opens a rotating door to your right (east), exposing a tough Draugr to tackle. Pull a second chain in this new chamber's alcove, which opens a rotating door to the southwest, behind you. This leads to the upper crypt and another Draugr to tackle. Optionally, step on the tripwire to trigger the battering ram trap (which often kills the Draugr), or slay it yourself. Avoid the pressure plate that sets off the magic caster trap, pluck the Soul Gem from the pedestal, then move to the portcullis puzzle with four handles to the right of it.

Puzzle Solution: The top handle releases only the first portcullis. The second releases darts, so ignore it. The third and fourth handles release the remaining portcullises, so pull them and continue up.

As you enter the upper crypt, the portcullis slam shut, trapping you in a small crypt with four Draugr. Deal with them, then examine the splattered remains of Mireli. Take the letter to her mother if you wish. Locate the seeming dead end to the northeast (Location [4]), hunting for a low handle to your right, which slides open a secret alcove allowing you to pick up Ahzidal's Ring of Necromancy!

Phase 3: Bring death to the Draugr inside this now fully excavated crypt. Head to the middle level where a sarcophagus has been uncovered (a Draugr bashes its way out to meet your blades), and an iron door [Expert] has been unsealed. Pick this lock to reach a hidden antechamber with spiders to crush and a chest to pilfer. Continue down the stairs (avoiding the traps if you didn't deal with them earlier), then continue back around to the chamber where you found Bradyn on your first visit. A new tunnel has been opened here, leading to a room with an iron door. Instead of continuing through it, kill the dormant Draugr in this room, then locate a wall chain in the alcove nearby. Yank it to expose a hidden room to the northeast (Location [5]) where Ahzidal's Gauntlets can be found. Taking them sets off a dart trap, so step back quickly to avoid being hit. Then head back and continue through the iron door.

Phase 2: Inaccessible.

Phase 3: Just inside the stairwell, hit the tripwire, then stop, allowing the rockfall trap to remove Draugr threats ahead of you. At the intersection, turn southeast, then continue up the steps and into a large sacrificial chamber.

7, 8 Sacrificial Chamber and Antechamber

Phase 1: Inaccessible.

Phase 2: Inaccessible.

Phase 3: Expect to face about five Draugr in this chamber, with several bursting out of the sarcophagi on the walls. Before you leave, check the room for dead miners and guards, then look to the left (northeast), into a small antechamber with a pedestal (Location [8]), upon which rests a ring. You can use the Telekinesis spell to pull the ring to you, or open the portcullis by running across the central pressure plates so they all activate. You have only a few seconds to do this before they reset, so aim carefully and make sure to sprint. Claim Ahzidal's Ring of Arcana from the pedestal, then optionally swim down into the water for some minor loot. To leave, head up the side steps in the sacrificial room and yank a chain to open the portcullis, watching for a subsequent blade trap and another chain that opens a quicker way back to the central chamber.

Phase 4: On your final visit to Kolbjorn Barrow, cross the Central Chamber's bridge and approach the hallway with the blade traps. A pair of Draugr will charge at you; pull the chain above the door to trigger the trap and cut them down. Then pull it again and proceed into the Sacrificial Chamber, where three more Draugr await you. Deal with them, then continue down the stairs into the corridor (Location [6]).

9 Throne Chamber

Phase 1: Inaccessible.

Phase 2: Inaccessible.

Phase 3: Inaccessible.

Phase 4: Head down to a throne chamber with three Draugr to slay as they rise from their seats. After that, ponder a small puzzle:

Puzzle Solution I: A suit of armor rests behind a barred arch. Face north and south and pull each chain to rotate the wall so a whale petroglyph is exposed in opposite alcoves. Behind the two thrones are rotating pedestals. Shift both of them to Whale and pull the lever between them. The bars retract, allowing you to grab Ahzidal's Armor.

Puzzle Solution II: Your progress is stalled. To continue, you must open the central trapdoor. In front of it is a carving with two Hawk petroglyphs. Turn the pedestals so they are both Hawks, pull the lever, and the trapdoor opens.

- ◇ Unique Item: Ahzidal's Armor of Retribution [DB22/31]

10 Lower Crypts

Phase 1: Inaccessible.

Phase 2: Inaccessible.

Phase 3: Inaccessible.

Phase 4: Descend the spiral steps, passing the scattered potions on the ceremonial table, then move into the lower crypts. Remove a Draugr to the right of the entrance before setting the floor ahead ablaze (via magic or a falling oil lamp shot by your bow). This helps remove the four Draugr in the main corridor and minimizes the damage from the forthcoming puzzle if you make a mistake. Turn right (north east).

Puzzle Solution: Ahead is a portcullis with a chain and two petroglyph pedestals. If you pull the chain, a fire trap engulfs you. Instead, turn the pedestals so the Serpent petroglyph points at the ground marking on each pedestal. This is the third of the puzzles, and two Serpents is the only remaining pair that hasn't been chosen. Pull the chain and claim Ahzidal's Helm. Watch for another fire trap as you take it!

Pass the sarcophagus with the Stalhrim deposit and move to the door opposite (southwest).

Phase 4: You enter the chamber just as Ralis finishes his dark ritual and the Dragon Acolyte Priest Ahzidal rises from the seal in the center of the room. Expect a constant stream of Draugr to pour from the wall crypts, with Ahzidal raising them to fight anew as combat progresses. A band of five Reavers has succeeded in reinforcing the ruins of this merchant ship, constructing a walled encampment, with flayed and buried bodies of the previous crew on poles to put off potential invaders. On deck are battlements and the entrance to the wreck proper, with a chest [Adept] and sleeping rolls. Down into the hold, expect shelves with an East Empire Strongbox [Expert], a couple of skeletons, and steps leading underwater. Drowned in the bottom of the hold are an Alchemist, an Argonian, and in the otherwise-sealed area, a Redguard with a scimitar and knapsack. 2 Trial Chamber

As you enter, a Reaver is talking about things coming out of the walls and suggests they return with more men. Another replies they have the mettle to slay a few spiders, before claiming the treasure of Kagrumez. Search the leader's corpse for two Kagrumez Resonance Gems; you need these to activate the strange pedestal receptacle in the middle of the chamber, which begins the forthcoming trials. There is a small journal to read, too, offering hints at what is to come.

TIP These two gems allow you to complete the first trial without finding any of the others. However, you must secure two more gems to access the remaining trials. Consult Solstheim Side Quest: The Challenges of Kagrumez* (page 650) for all Resonance Gem locations.

Trial 1: Automaton Attack

The resonance receptacle receives any Kagrumez Resonance Gems you wish to insert, and you can remove them without any problems. Look to the northern gate (Location B). Above it is a resonance marker, a golden plate with the fourth and ninth holes covered. Return to the receptacle and place the gems in that pattern to begin. You will face Dwarven Spiders (3) and Dwarven Ballistas (3).

Trial 2: Flame and Fireproof Spheres

In Location 3, locate the gate on the east wall (Location C). Above it is a resonance marker with the second, eighth, and ninth holes covered. Place the gems, and the trial begins. Two flame gouts shoot vertically, while steam blasts between the walls on the east and west sides. Toward the north and south edges of the arena are rotating fire pedestals that activate when you move near them; therefore, stay on the outer edges or the middle of the arena when fighting. You must defeat Dwarven Spiders (5) and Tempered Spheres (2), which are immune to fire damage.

Trial 3: A Short, Sharp Shock

In Location 4, locate the gate southwest of the room (Location D). Above it is a resonance marker with the first, fifth, seventh, and ninth holes covered. Place the gems to begin your final trial. The chamber fills ankle-deep in water, with islands in the center and around the edges.

As you navigate the water, expect shock damage (which is extra-nasty if you're in the water) from Tempered Spheres (2), Dwarven Ballistas (2), and Dwarven Spiders (3).

B Northern Gate

3 Spider Storeroom

Head through the northern gate and up the passage. Among shelves of ingots is a lever that opens a strange cage. Inside is an automaton that acts in the same way as an Animal Companion. It can fight alongside you or "go home" (which is here). See page 104 for more information.

Highpoint Tower is a lonely ruin with commanding views of the southern ashlands. The exterior is devoid of life, aside from the hated Ash Spawn. The tower turret has a chest you can scramble up to (use the lip edge to maneuver around) and a deposit of Heart Stone. But the entrance is under the tower, cunningly hidden and guarded by Ash Spawn. To find it, stay below the rocky area around the tower and move clockwise around until you're slightly north of the location, facing south. This was once a sizable Imperial garrison, where unruly soldiers were sent as penance. Now it is a ghostly shell. Ash Spawn patrol the walls, and the booming voice of General Falx Carius instructs his minions to attack. Expect around six foes to contend with along the battlements and in the southeast tower (where you find skeletal remains and a knapsack). The western tower is accessible, with a foe at the top and a good vantage point for long-range attacks. But the most intact sections of the fort lie along the north and west walls. Recent seismic activity has uncovered a crack in the earth southeast of Thirsk Mead Hall. During Solstheim Side Quest: Lost Legacy, Tharsten, the historian in Skaal Village, asks you to explore it with him. Your journey takes you to the previously hidden door to Vahllok's Tomb.

NOTE Vahllok's Tomb is usually blocked by rocks and rubble and is inaccessible until Solstheim Side Quest: Lost Legacy is activated. You can't explore it until this point.

Interior

A Door to Solstheim

1 Main Entrance Chamber

This grand chamber allows access to the two separate "wings" of this dungeon, as well as the final series of chambers ahead (west) of you.

Move to the pedestal, where Tharstan reads off a cryptic riddle: "A sacrifice will bring you closer to that which you seek." At the glowing grating on the lower stone plateau, there are corpses strewn about the floor here.

Puzzle Solution: Locate one of the dead Draugr and pick it up (manually, press and hold down the button or key), and then drag it onto the glowing grating. Move to the pedestal with the inscription and pull the switch. The grating opens, and the corpse tumbles into the fire below. Ceremonial torches flicker into life on either side of the stone plateau, and portcullis to the left (south) and right (north) open. You're able to head in either direction.

There are also two chests to discover, low down on the northern bank by the water and underwater, just below the cage.

Main Entrance Chamber (Return): After you've explored both "wings" of the dungeon, return here and move to the cage on the western side of the fiery stone plateau. Inspect the indentations. These circular keyholes require you to place each of the Amethyst Claw halves into them, unlocking the cage in front of you. Pull the handle on the cage's pedestal, and a series of ethereal blue platforms appears, creating a path to the ledge and door on the opposite wall. Follow the snaking path to the far ledge, drop down onto the dungeon passage heading west, and pass a barred door.

TIP These ethereal platforms of magic appear for a few seconds and then vanish. So, you need to step on each of them quickly, moving to the next as it appears and stepping off before the platform disappears. If you fall, simply wade back and try again.

◆ Tharstan ◆ Chest (2)

2 Draugr Crypt (South)

Open the iron door and move into a Draugr crypt, where you have company. Slay four or five Draugr, then climb the steps to the east, encountering one or two more Draugr before reaching a pull chain and barred archway. Pull the chain.

◆ Draugr

3 Nordic Puzzle Chamber (South)

The exit arch opposite is currently sealed with a portcullis. Inside the chamber are three pillars around a central cylinder with colored runes that glow with unnatural light.

Puzzle Solution: The central pillar has three sides, all different-colored. Each side has a different weapon resting on or nearby its own pedestal:

There is a green side with an Ancient Nord Bow.

There is a blue side with a Staff of Flames.

There is a red side with an Ancient Nord Sword.

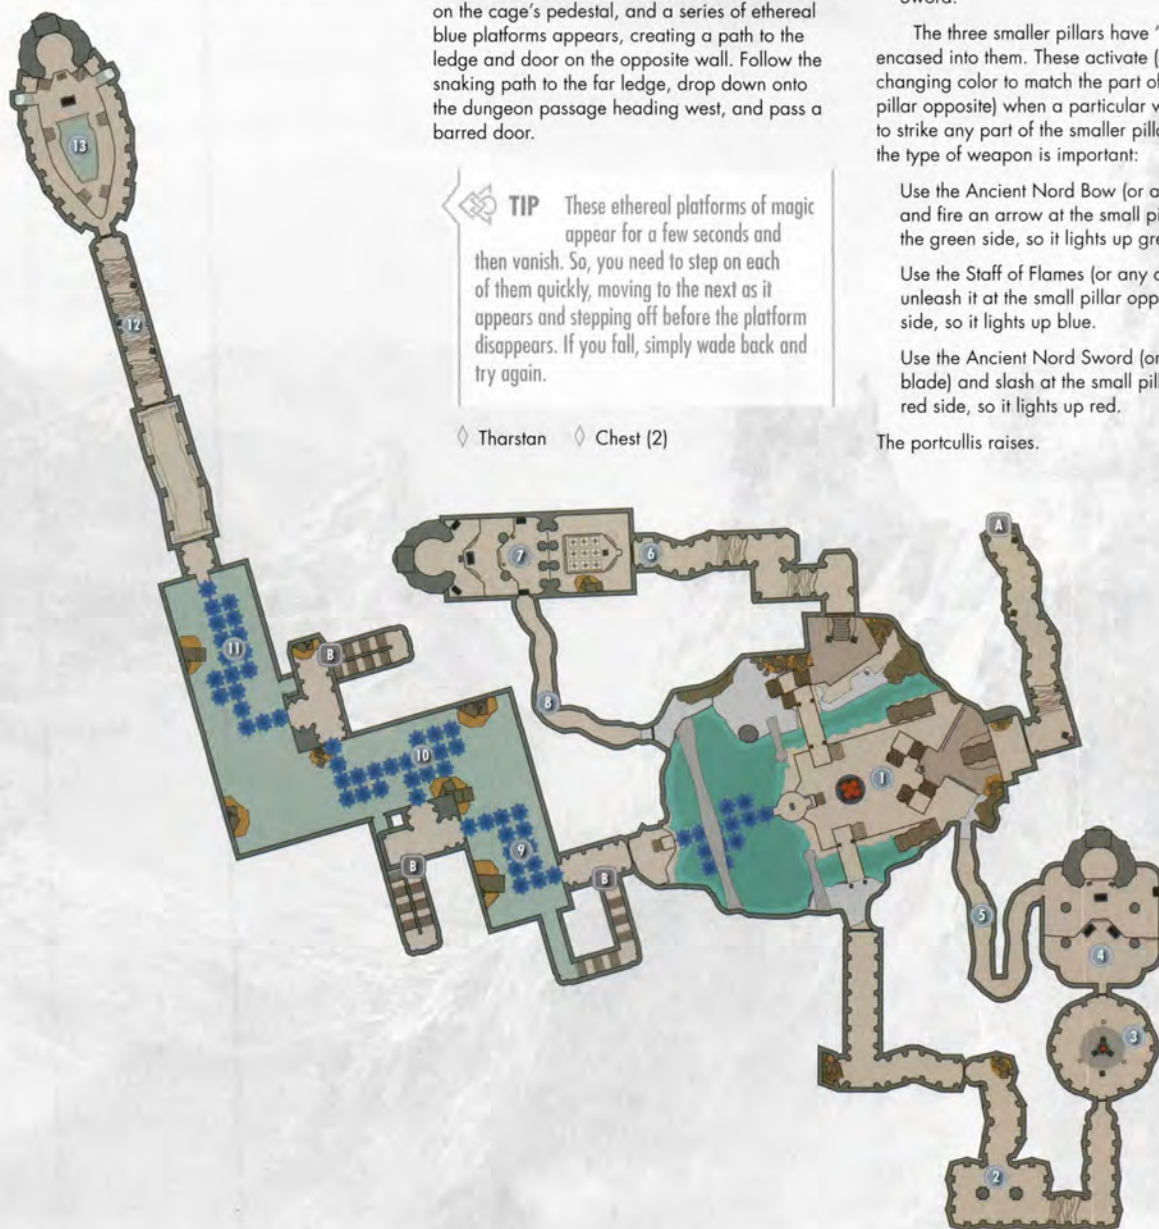

The three smaller pillars have "impact stones" encased into them. These activate (glowing and changing color to match the part of the central pillar opposite) when a particular weapon is used to strike any part of the smaller pillar. However, the type of weapon is important:

Use the Ancient Nord Bow (or any other bow) and fire an arrow at the small pillar opposite the green side, so it lights up green.

Use the Staff of Flames (or any other staff) and unleash it at the small pillar opposite the blue side, so it lights up blue.

Use the Ancient Nord Sword (or any other blade) and slash at the small pillar opposite the red side, so it lights up red.

The portcullis raises.

4 Draugr Guardians Chamber (South)

A particularly nasty Draugr rises from his central coffin, flanked by two lesser Draugr who break free of their nearer tombs. Inspect the Draugr corpses (the most troublesome of which is carrying the left half of an Amethyst Claw), pry open two chests, and gain a Word of Power.

Leave through the gap in one of the western sarcophagi. Pull the chain at the end of the tunnel and step back into the initial grand chamber.

6 Nordic Puzzle Chamber (North)

Enter a short tunnel heading north. Turn left (west) as the tunnel winds down, past a chest, and into a rather puzzling chamber. Ahead are three archways, each with spears preventing your progress. Inspect the raised pedestal near a group of nine pressure plates:

Puzzle Solution: Simply step onto the first plate in the near-right corner and sidestep left, zigzagging so you tread on each of the nine pressure plates only once. This is deceptively simple, as long as you don't step on any plate more than once before all are stepped on, and you don't miss any plates. Once you step on the ninth and last plate, the spears retract and progress is possible.

7 Draugr Guardians Chamber (North)

A powerful and troublesome Draugr clambers from his central coffin, joined by two lesser Draugr who smash out of the nearer tombs. Inspect the Draugr corpses (the most dangerous of which is holding the right half of an Amethyst Claw), wrench open the chest, and obtain a Word of Power.

- ◇ Chest
- ◇ Amethyst Claw (right half)
- ◇ Word Wall: Battle Fury [DB2/3]

8 Exit Tunnel (North)

Leave through the gap in one of the southern sarcophagi. Pull the chain at the end of the tunnel and step back into the initial grand chamber.

B Barred Door

NOTE These barred doors are simply the exits from stairs you climb up if you fall during any of the subsequent platform-walking.

If you fall into the water below at any time, you face combat with Corrupted Shades; expect at least a dozen of these foes to cause you minimal threats. Then search any ground-level entrances for minor items, climb the steps and unlock the bar on the door, and return to the upper ledges to try again.

CAUTION

9 Ethereal Platforms and Waterlogged Chamber

At the far end of the short tunnel is another pedestal and a handle. As expected, this releases another set of platforms, so quickly stand and follow each of them across the large waterlogged chamber to the upper tunnel across from you.

- ◇ Potion

10 Ethereal Platforms and Waterlogged Chamber

This leads to another set of platforms, each set moving a little faster than the previous.

- ◇ Emerald

11 Ethereal Platforms and Waterlogged Chamber

Then comes a final set, moving so quickly you really need to run most of the time to reach the final ledge and double wooden doors.

TIP

Once you successfully navigate an ethereal bridge, it remains in place.

12 Hall of Stories and Nordic Puzzle Door

Through the doors is a Hall of Stories and a Nordic Puzzle Door at the far end.

Puzzle Solution: Those adventurers familiar with such a puzzle will think the rings on this door correspond to a key on the palm of the claw the door opens. Not so this time! The palm of the Amethyst Claw is blank! While you're scratching your head, Tharstan arrives and studies the door, then heads to the wall carvings to ascertain a combination. Among the etchings are the following clues:

"A breeze, or maybe it's wind." This refers to the Hawk, to be moved on the outer ring.

"The night sky, and the moon." This refers to the Wolf, to be moved on the middle ring.

"Something to do with fire, and scales." This refers to the Dragon, to be moved on the inner ring.

13 Vahlok's Chamber.

This is a high-status ceremonial tomb. As you edge forward, the stone sarcophagus ahead of you cracks open and the Dragon Priest Vahlok the Jailer frees himself to face you!

The battle is frantic and all the more tricky if you don't combat Vahlok's mainly fire-based attacks. Expect him to use Firebolt, Flame Cloak, Flames, and Incinerate and to summon a Flame Atronach. Also watch for fire damage from the pressure plates dotted around the tomb; stay on the edges of the walkways or in the water, moving to the Word Wall to keep them from triggering.

Exterior

The Dwarven city of Nchardak was built on a series of platforms extending into the Sea of Ghosts. Thousands of years of disuse, not to mention the cataclysmic Red Year, have decimated the ruin, causing most of it to sink into the sea. Only the tops of a few towers and the walkways connecting them still rise above the waterline. Many are tilted at precarious angles or have been ruined entirely, but a few, such as the domed Reading Room, remain intact.

Joined by Neloht, you can walk across the platforms that wind from the shore to the Reading Room, fending off some nuisance Reavers. Watch for long-range bowmen from upper platforms as you go. You can head to the left or right series of walkways (check one tower to the south for a Chest [Novice], and one underwater to the north [Expert]). Although they look precarious, they both lead to the main domed platform where the Reaver leader awaits. Inspect the control switch to the left of the door.

A To Nchardak Reading Room

NOTE These pedestals are activated by special cubes. During the Dragonborn Main Quest, Neloht has secured one and opens the seal, allowing you to enter the Nchardak Reading Room. Otherwise, this is as far as you can go.

CAUTION

Beware! When you exit this location after completing the Dragonborn Main Quest: The Path of Knowledge, you will face Krosulhah ("Sorcerer's Day Minder"), one of Miraak's dragon minions.

A Door to Solstheim

Neloht opens this door during Dragonborn Main Quest: The Path of Knowledge.

1 Reading Room Repository

First Visit: The Black Book is located in the center of this circular chamber. You can only retrieve it once you have solved the puzzle below and restored the steam to this room. The button on the gold pedestal opens the gold and glass cage and raises the book up.

Return Visit: If you've correctly placed the cubes, Neloht tells you it worked and that the steam is once again flowing to this room. He presses the button (unless you beat him to it) and four shafts of light illuminate the complex lock, releasing the tome!

2 Fallen Passage

This sloped corridor and ramp leads to the main section of the Great Chamber. Check under one ramp for a partly submerged chest [Expert].

◇ Chest [Expert]

TIP As you explore Nchardak, you will learn that there are two distinct types of pedestals: blue and red. Blue pedestals require you to leave a Control Cube atop them. Red ones you just need to place and remove the cube to work.

3A Great Chamber (Promontory)

3B Great Chamber (South)

3C Great Chamber (North)

First Visit: The promontory you reach has a view of a vast, waterlogged chamber. In front of you are two blue-colored control switches. When Dwemer Cubes are placed on these pedestals, the water level falls. You only have Nelo's Cube, so you must investigate the Nchardak Workshop before you can proceed.

Second Visit: You now have a total of four cubes. The fifth cube is beyond a door to the north, but to access it, you must drain the entire room. Place a cube on each of the blue pedestals and leave them there. Retaliate as a small group of Dwarven Automaton attacks, then follow Nelo down into the drained Great Chamber.

Second Visit (Location 3B): Great Chamber (South): To the south is a Sphere to battle, a chest [Novice], and a blue control pedestal. Slot in a cube, lowering the water still more, and head down a curved platform to a door and red pedestal to the west. Open the door via the pedestal, claim the items from a chest inside, and optionally wander the floor of the chamber for a second chest [Apprentice]. Then return and grab the cube to continue.

Second Visit (Location 3C): Great Chamber (North): As you reach the northern part of the chamber, work with Nelo to defeat the two ballistas. Then place a cube into the red control switch, opening the gate to the Nchardak Aqueduct.

Third Visit (Location 3C): Great Chamber (Boiler Control Pedestals): Retrieve one cube from the blue pedestal on the overlook, then place the remaining four into the Boiler Control pedestals. The giant gold drawbridge lowers. Face the Centurion here or use the huge chamber to drop it from afar. The Centurion was guarding a small alcove with a treasure chest. Make sure all four boiler pedestals are still active (you shouldn't be carrying any cubes) and return to the Reading Room.

5 The Great Workshop

Check the half-flooded chamber. To the left (north) behind a barred wall is another cube. You can't reach it yet, so stay on the bridge and move to the opposite (eastern) side where there are two blue pedestals. Slot one (not both) of your cubes into either pedestal; they lower the water level, exposing the waist-deep water of the ground floor.

Head down to the ground floor, and locate the red pedestal in the water on the northern side, below the small gold bridge. Place your only cube into this pedestal (you automatically remove it again), and a set of stone steps behind the bridge grind into place. Climb up to the gold bridge, optionally dealing with the Centurion who awakens if you step on the western platform. You can ignore the second red pedestal (as this simply raises and lowers the bridge), and bound up the steps you just created to reach the gold door in the north wall.

6 Workshop Annex

A small, reasonably wide chamber with two secondary areas around and to the right (north, leading to a door and chest [Adept]), and left (south), leading to a new Control Cube (behind the barred wall you couldn't get to earlier). Take the cube, slay the Dwarven Spiders that emerge, and retrieve the Control Cube from one of the two blue pedestals you left earlier. This raises the water level still more, which is handy, as this is the only way to traverse the next chamber. Head south toward the gold door.

7 Collapsed Passage

The only way to reach the other end of this passage is to retrieve all three of the cubes in this area, which raise the water level high enough for you to swim across to the other side.

8 Ballista Balcony and Bridge

Beware of Spheres and hardy Dwarven Ballistas. Find your next Control Cube in a rubble-filled alcove to the north. As expected, the Centurion behind you clanks into life when you take it. Hurry up and around the steps to the balcony atop the flooding room. Place a cube in the red control switch, lowering a bridge and allowing you to escape this chamber.

10 Aqueduct Overlook

This balcony overlooks the entire chamber. Place (and leave) a cube in the blue pedestal here, lowering the water level below.

11 North Side Chamber

You can reach this side chamber by carefully climbing across the roof of the Overlook or by swimming up once you have retrieved the final cube. Insert a cube into the control switch here to open the door. The room beyond contains a lone Ballista and a Kagrumez Resonance Gem, which is necessary for Solstheim Side Quest: The Challenges of Kagrumez*.

12 South Side Chamber

Unless you used Whirlwind Sprint to reach the Overlook (instead of solving the bridge puzzle), don't bother with it for now. Instead, wait until you retrieve the final cube, then swim up to the bridge controls and reset them. You can then swim over to this chamber and claim the chest within.

- ◇ Chest

13 Aqueduct Waterlogged Corridor

The gold door at the chamber's far (west) end is accessible now that the water has drained. Open it using the red control switch.

14 Aqueduct Sunken Chamber

APOCRYPHA

OVERVIEW

An infinite sea of black ooze and thrashing tentacles, the Oblivion plane known as Apocrypha is incomprehensible to mortals who have been lured into its unseen and unspeakable depths. Perched atop this turbulent mire, glistening against the writhing brightness of a green sky, is Hermaeus Mora's infinite library of forbidden knowledge, where every tome reveals secrets damning and inhumane, catalogued in chaos.

Two types of Daedra—known as Keepers—dwell in this realm, maintaining the vast library and serving Mora's mysterious will. There are Seekers, who use invisibility and mirror images as distractions while they sap your strength, and there are Lurkers, towering monstrosities with powerful physical tendrils and poisonous bile. There are other entities as well: strange floating lights, writhing tentacles, and glimpses of the Daedric Prince himself.

You can reach the seven realms within Apocrypha by finding and reading a specific Black Book. You find two during your Main Quest, while the rest are scattered around Solstheim. While you are on Solstheim, you can read these ancient tomes whenever you desire. Read the book again to banish these otherworldly atrocities from your mind and return to Tamriel.

19 Chapter V: Miraak's Tower: Book Pedestals

Slay the Seekers first. The focus of the room is a plinth in the central spine of the chamber, which houses access to Chapter VI. Place each of the four Apocrypha Books on their correct pedestals. Simply read the clues from the books and the books' names and lay the tome on the image best associated with each book. Or, follow this plan:

I Gnashing Blades Pedestal

The pedestal with the fishlike maw is closest to you. Place "Gnashing Blades" here.

J Delving Pincers Pedestal

The pedestal with the two claws is nearby. Place "Delving Pincers" here. Expect Seekers to attack you at this point.

K Boneless Limbs Pedestal

The pedestal with the mass of writhing tentacles is opposite the entrance. Place "Boneless Limbs" here.

L Prying Orbs Pedestal

The pedestal with the strange evil fishlike eye is the last of the plinths. Place "Prying Orbs" here.

If you've placed the books on the correct pedestals, the opening to Chapter VI glows green. If not, remove the books and try again. When you're ready for the final chapter, head to Chapter VI and open it.

- ◇ Seeker
- ◇ Pod [3]

TIP It is possible to have opened Black Book: Waking Dreams and completed all the chapters up to this point as soon as you receive the book, during Dragonborn Main Quest: The Temple of Miraak. If you did this, you begin your trek at Chapter VI, rather than earlier.

M Book to Chapter VI

N Book to Chapter V

20 Chapter VI: Double Corridor Entrance

Exit via a small double-corridor leading to a single tunnel. Grab the Art of War Magic (a Destruction Skill Book) from the black table as you go.

- ◇ Skill Book: The Art of War Magic (Destruction)

21 Chapter VI: Promontory Amid the Unspeakable Ocean

This is bereft of life until you pass the Stamina fonts and approach the curved stone edifice at the opposite end. This is a Word Wall! Approach the Word Wall and defeat the two Seekers that are summoned to prevent your progress. Learn the powerful new Thu'um, part of the Dragon Aspect Shout.

- ◇ Seeker
- ◇ Sahrtaar
- ◇ Word Wall: Dragon Aspect [DB3/3]

Final Chapter: Summit of Apocrypha

At this point, assuming you're completing the Dragonborn Main Quest, Sahrtaar appears. You must tame him so you can ride him to the final confrontation with Miraak atop Apocrypha. The confrontation occurs on a huge, circular plateau.

NOTE Sahrtaar only appears if you have reached here during the Dragonborn Main Quest. Otherwise, you must use (any) Black Book to return to the mortal world. This is also the case if you haven't completed prior quests in the Dragonborn Main Quest. When you do, then read the book and return, you appear by the Word Wall and Sahrtaar soon appears.

23 Miraak's Tower: Summit

When Miraak finally yields, you can claim your just rewards from Hermaeus Mora:

- ◇ Dragon Souls
- ◇ Unique Weapon: Miraak's Staff [DB10/11]
- ◇ Unique Weapon: Miraak's Sword [DB11/11]
- ◇ Unique Item: Miraak's Boots [DB1/31]
- ◇ Unique Item: Miraak's Gloves [DB2/31]
- ◇ Unique Item: Miraak's Mask [DB3/31]
- ◇ Unique Item: Miraak's Robes [DB4/31]

After taking Miraak's equipment, approach the Black Book: Waking Dreams in the center of the summit. Read this tome, and green light envelops you. Look around, and you'll see shimmering images of the Skill Constellations arrayed around you. You can approach any of these mirages, activate them, and expend a Dragon Soul to clear all of the perks in a particular Skill Constellation. You can:

Recover all of the Perk Points you have spent in a single constellation, then spend them elsewhere.

Do this as many times as you wish, as long as you have enough Dragon Souls. Read the Black Book a second time to return to Solstheim.

O Book to Solstheim

Appendix I Notes and Clarifications

The Sideways Achievement/Trophy

The Sideways Achievement/Trophy requires you to "complete 10 Side Quests," as tracked by the Side Quests Completed counter on your Journal's Stats page. Because of the sheer number and variety of quests, it can be confusing to figure out which will count toward this goal.

In short: The Main Quest, Daedric Quests, and major Faction Quests do not count, nor do Miscellaneous Objectives. The table below lists all of the quests that do count toward this award (and the prefix that appears in this guide):

Hero of the People Achievement/Trophy

This keeps track of how many Miscellaneous Objectives you've completed. So, the more of those you've grayed out, the better! Miscellaneous Objectives that are part of a chain (such as those for Dungeon Quest: The Legend of Red Eagle) each count individually toward this reward.

Oblivion Walker Achievement/Trophy

This award is unlocked only after you've acquired 15 Daedric Artifacts (also listed at the start of the Daedric Quest chapter, on page 378). It is important to note that this award triggers only after you receive the artifact in question; some Daedric Quests can be finished without claiming their artifact. If this occurs, it may become impossible to receive this reward! However, artifacts you've used, lost, sold, or dropped still count toward your total. The complete list of relevant artifacts is listed below:

Note that Nocturnal's Skeleton Key and Clavicus Vile's Rueful Axe (which he offers as an alternative to his artifact) do not count toward this achievement.

APPENDIX II: TRADERS

In Skyrim, most traders fall into one of 16 categories that determine the general types of goods they buy and sell. Merchants may also have particular specialties, such as a Food Vendor who sells only meat or only vegetables.

The tables below identify these categories, and list all of the major traders in Skyrim and where you can find them. Note that hunters and other merchants you may encounter randomly in the wilderness are not listed, nor are characters who may take over a shop if the original owner is killed.

Word Wall Phrases

The easiest places to find Dragon runes are the enormous Word Walls where you learn new Words of Power. The following section lists all of the phrases you can find inscribed on Word Walls throughout Skyrim, and the Words of Power you learn from each. Both the Dragon and English phrases are given to help you with your translation. Remember that some Shouts are learned from gifted individuals during Quests, not via Walls, and so only their Words of Power are listed here.

THE ELDER SCROLLS V: SKYRIM GAME DIRECTOR

To Bethesda: Firstly, this guide wouldn't have been anywhere nearly as thorough if it wasn't for the generosity of knowledge and help I received from all at Bethesda. Thanks to Jeff Gardiner, Bruce Nesmith, Jeff Browne, Pete Hines, Erin Losi, and all those that helped me. In particular, the fastidious and meticulous prowess of Steve Cornett in helping wrangle statistics, quests, and making mind-bogglingly comprehensive documentation deserves (and has) my eternal gratitude.

Special thanks to: My loving wife Melanie; Mum, Dad, and Ian; Loki; Steve "Authorkiin" Stratton, Sonja and all at 99 Lives, Mark and Targa of In Color Design, Pappa G, Shaida Boroumand; The Moon Wiring Club, Laibach, and Kraftwerk; Ron and Fez, Eastside Dave, Bill Tetley; and M for Miskatonic University. An Ivy League school over 200 years old, Housing the largest occult collection in the western world, And the most varied alumni, I'm told.

Acknowledgements — Steve Stratton

Steve Cornett and Jeff Gardiner at Bethesda for their outstanding help and support, without which this guide would not have been possible. Thanks to Paul G. at Prima, Carrie Andrews, and Mark and Targa of In Color Design for transforming our crazy manuscript into this breathtaking tome. Special thanks to David S.J. Hodgson, the Authorborn.

Acknowledgements — Steve Cornett

To the team: No book, not even the longest guide ever published, can do justice to the years of hard work, late nights, and long weekends you put into Skyrim. Thank you, and congratulations. Special thanks to Todd, Jeff, Craig, Bruce, Jeff, and Joel, for your advice and support; and to the design team for your help with a host of obscure questions and document reviews.

Thanks to everyone in the ZeniMax family who helped make Skyrim and this guide a success. Special thanks to Paris, Erin, and Pete; Harald and Ruth; and to our entire QA team, who deserve far more credit than they receive.

Thanks to Paul, Shaida, and everyone at Prima for coordinating this massive project.

To David and Steve, who in two years of searching, Unearthed every secret and left No Stone Unturned (pages 645 and 302, respectively).

And most importantly, to our players and fans: Thanks for making all of this possible.

Acknowledgements — Paul Giacomotto

To the Prima family: What started off as an egg is now a full grown 1,100 page fire breathing dragon! Special thanks to Debra, Andy, Mark, and Aaron for direction, encouragement, and support. Thanks to my fellow Product Managers and co-workers— Don, Jesse, JJ, Fernando, and Jim for picking up the slack while I tried to wrangle this beast. To Rick, Melissa, and Jamie for knocking out many design requests and your advice. To Jeff and Terry for selling it and Veronika for chasing me for info.

Special thanks to: David, Steve S., and Steve Cornett...I'm in awe. More than 785,000 words, thousands of hours, hundreds of sleepless nights, and a barrage of emails/phone calls...yet you still stand, more distinguished than ever with battle scars and dented armor—"Hun, Kaal, Zoor". In Color Design (Mark and Targa), 99 Lives, Loren 'Evil Drew', Carrie, and Shaida you are true champions surviving arrows to the knee and a 'legendary' amount of information. Robin, Brandon, and Gianna who make me smile. Pops, Mom, and Dre for my core values.

To Bethesda Game Studios: Paris, Erin, Steve, Craig, and the rest of the committed team you've been tremendous partners and supportive to this project.

To the fans and players: We work tirelessly for you, thanks!
